HEAR STORY OF BELGIAN NEEDS

Dean McClenahan and Captain Lucey Bring Gripping Tale to Plainfield.

AN ENORMOUS TASK

Princeton Man Says That He Does Not Think German Occupation of Country Will Last Long—Relief Must Be Kept up After War Ends.

Conditions in Belgium were graphically described at the Plainfield High School last night, when Dean Howard McClenahan, of Princeton, and Captain J. F. Lucey, told some of the things they encountered while visiting and working in that poverty stricken nation. To the six hundred or more people present, was told the tale of privation and suffering which has been brought on the nation, and the talks carried an appeal such as no printed word could carry. Plainfielders were brought to a full realization of the enormous task which confronts this nation, for it was conclusively shown that to the United States the Belgians must look if they expect to avoid starvation.

Mrs. Allan Cowenthwaite, president of the Monday Afternoon Club, under whose auspices the meeting was held, was the first speaker, and in a few words told how interested Plainfield is in Belgium because of the generous efforts that have been made here to relieve the needy in that country. She then introduced Dean McClenahan.

The speaker launched at once into the subject, telling how the Germans found Belgium a land of plenty, smiling in the sun, and by requisitioning food, horses, automobiles, raw materials and "living off the country" immediately turned it into a land of want and sorrow. Belgium only raises one-fifth of its food supply, so the splendid German army was soon surrounded on all sides by another army of suffering men, women and children. Of the original population of Belgium 1,000,000 left the country, but from 6,000,000 to 7,000,000 remain. Of the refugees 150,000 to 200,000 went to England 250,000 to Holland and a like number to France. He told of the conditions under which these people are living in the countries mentioned.

The English University men, when the war broke out, forced all young Belgians who might be in the institutions of learning, to go home and join the army, and there is not a physically fit young Englishman, formerly a student in the universities, who has not enlisted.

"There is no evidence of a spirit of hatred on the part of the English toward the Germans, which is in great contrast to the feeling of the Germans toward the English," said the speaker. "The English have a sort of feeling of injured vanity, because they have made such a terrible mistake in forming a good opinion of the Germans." Dean McClenahan paid a high tribute to James Bryce for his action since the war broke out.

"Belgium is practically surrounded by a picket fence, the pickets being bayonets. Absolutely all transportation, except that of the relief commission, under the stars and stripes, is barred. The only industries in the country which are working are a few coal mines, which are being operated at a loss. A little land has been sown to wheat, but it cannot begin to supply the demands. If you can picture a city, such as Paterson, for example, cut off from all communication with the outside world, the telephone and telegraph lines cut, no trains running, and industries at an absolute standstill, you can get a picture of Belgium today."

The speaker then quoted examples of the number of people who are being fed by the American Relief Commission. In no place are less than forty per cent of the people being provided for, and in the small towns the number is 100 per cent. In Brussels 175,000 adults are being fed, and throughout the country 31,000 children are being given a special diet. There are 1,500,000 people who are entirely dependent on the United States.

"The spirit of the Belgians is amazing. They are filled with an intense hatred for the Germans and desire to get revenge, but at the same time they are helping one another in every way they can. It has been said that for every dollar contributed to this country one dollar's worth of food is sent. This is accounted for by the fact that the Belgians are being taxed to pay the transportation charges. The Germans have not done a thing for the Belgians, but it cannot be too emphatically stated that not a single loaf of American bread has gone down a German throat.

"If peace should be declared to-

FREDERIC CORIELL CHOSEN SECRETARY

Former Local Banker Elected by Directors of Elizabeth Trust Company.

Frederic Corriell, for three years secretary and treasurer of The State Trust Company, was elected secretary and treasurer of the Elizabeth Trust Company at a meeting of the directors of that institution Tuesday afternoon. He succeeds Edward R. Rawlings, who died suddenly Friday, March 19, while playing golf on the Suburban Club's links near Elizabeth.

Mr. Corriell comes originally from Bound Brook and has been engaged in the banking business since boyhood, his first position being with the First National Bank of that place. There he remained for six years, and since that time he has held a number of positions with various banking institutions.

When he left the Bound Brook institution he went to the Morristown Trust Company in 1901 and in 1909 he became cashier of the Borough National Bank, then located on Somerset street, North Plainfield. A year later this bank merged into The State Trust Company with which Mr. Corriell was associated until 1913.

Since severing his connection with the local institution he has been temporarily in charge of different financial institutions when experienced management was needed at short notice. Last year he assisted a prominent firm of accountants in the annual audits of the National Bank of Cuba and the Trust Company of Cuba at Havana.

J. B. GUTTRIDGE HAS ANNIVERSARY

Netherwood Business Man Completes Twenty-fifth Year at Same Stand.

An anniversary very much out of the ordinary is that being observed today by James B. Guttridge, the widely known and hustling Netherwood business man. Just twenty-five years ago on this date he opened his meat market and grocery on South avenue, near the railroad station, and he probably holds the unique record of being the only Plainfield butcher who has remained at the one stand for a quarter of a century. The fact is known to many of his customers and Mr. Guttridge has been receiving congratulations since early this morning, all of them bespeaking continued success and prosperity for many years to come.

Mr. Guttridge began his business career in Scotch Plains in 1880, when he entered the employ of John Cook, the village butcher, shortly after he arrived in New York from England, his native land. He remained with Mr. Cook a year and then went to Rahway, spending four years in one of the leading markets of that place. Returning to Scotch Plains in 1885 he purchased Mr. Cook's business and conducted it successfully for five years. It was on April 1, 1890, that he decided to remove to Netherwood and there Mr. Guttridge has been ever since, conducting a meat and grocery business that harmonizes with the up-to-date fashionable section of the city. For the past twenty-four years, Robert Guttridge has been associated with his brother and the two make a business proposition that is hard to beat.

The hustling spirit which has dominated James B. Guttridge's career has not alone been confined to his market and grocery. He has been a big factor in the development of Netherwood real estate. A large part of the remarkable growth that that section has had in the past twenty-five years is due to his foresight and keen preception of business opportunities. He has also been connected with numerous company enterprises that have meant much to the industrial life of Plainfield. Despite his success, Mr. Guttridge is very modest withal and when asked by the Daily Press reporter today for a word or two he simply remarked:

"I am not a talker, you know, I am just a plain business man. I am mighty glad to have completed twenty-five years successfully at this stand and I can only thank my friends and customers for the patronage that enabled me to do it. I appreciate their well wishes and extend my own in return, that's all I can say."

COMMERCE MEETING.

LOCAL LUMBERMEN TO BE APPROACHED

Want to Enlist Retail Dealers in New Jersey Association's Work.

Cooperation of local lumber dealers is sought by the New Jersey Lumbermen's Association in a State wide campaign for membership which will be pushed during the next few weeks. At a meeting of the organization held in the Trenton Chamber of Commerce rooms yesterday afternoon tentative plans were formulated for a revival of interest in the association's work and it is likely that all Plainfield lumber dealers will be approached with a view to forming a local body as a subsidiary of the State association. The municipal bodies supervise the interests in their immediate vicinity and matters of importance to the State are brought to the attention of the major body at its periodical sessions.

Congressman William E. Tuttle, of Westfield, is president of the organization, being a member of the Tuttle Brothers' firm in that town. The several local concerns interested in the purchase and sale of lumber have heretofore taken an informal part in the State Association's work but have never before been directly affiliated with the activities of the body.

One of the matters being considered by the lumbermen at the present time is the lien law introduced by Assemblyman Arthur A. Quinn. A delegation from the State Association appeared before Governor Fielder yesterday and urged the passage of the law. The governor promised to read a brief on the proposed measure and give it his serious consideration.

Interest from retail details in this section is especially sought for by the Association and the proposed campaign will deal largely with this class. Congressman Tuttle presided at the meeting yesterday and State Senator W. W. Smalley, of Bound Brook, was among those present.

SERVICES FOR GOOD FRIDAY ANNOUNCED

Christ's Crucifixion Will Be Impressively Observed in Local Churches.

Special services will be conducted in the local churches tomorrow in connection with the Good Friday observance, commemorating the Saviour's crucifixion. In the Roman Catholic churches, St. Mary's of this city, and St. Joseph's, of North Plainfield, the celebration includes prayers for all classes of people and the "Adoration of the Cross." In the local Protestant churches the day will be observed with much solemnity.

In St. Mary's and St. Joseph's churches the mass of the Presanctified will be celebrated in the morning and sermons will be delivered by the pastors at the evening services. St. Mary's morning service will be at 8 o'clock and St. Joseph's at 7:30.

In the Church of the Heavenly Rest children's service will be celebrated at 9 o'clock; ante-communion service at 11:45 o'clock; Passion service and admission on the seven words of the cross from 12 to 3 o'clock; special service of the men's association at 7:30 in the evening.

Morning prayer, litany and ante-communion service, and a sermon by the pastor, will be celebrated in the Church of the Holy Cross at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning. "The three hours" by Rev. S. Halstead Watkins, of New York, will be observed from 12 until 3 o'clock and evening prayer at 7:45 in the evening. The sermon tomorrow night will be delivered by the Rev. Scott-Smith of the Grace Episcopal church.

The following order of services will be conducted at the Grace Episcopal church: Children's service, 9 o'clock; morning prayer ante-communion, 10 o'clock; meditations on the passion from 12 to 3 o'clock, in charge of Rev. T. Mitchell Harper, of Gladstone; evensong, 5 o'clock.

A union Good Friday service will be held in the Crescent Avenue church tomorrow evening in which ministers of the city churches will take part.

MRS SCHIERHOLZ'S FUNERAL.

The funeral of Mrs. Anna Schierholz, widow of Edward Schierholz, who died in Muhlenberg Hospital Tuesday night, will be held at the home of her sister, Mrs. William J. Eakens, of 345 Manson place, tomorrow afternoon, at 2:30. Rev. George Bowers, of Warrenville, will be in charge and burial will be in the North Plainfield cemetery.

STATE WILL RETURN $3.10 TO LOCAL LAW VIOLATORS

Out of the $48.25 excess fine money received by Union County Prosecutor Alfred A. Stein from Justice of the Peace Hummell, of Vauxhall, Frederick Harrington and M. F. Higgins, both of this city, will each receive $3.10. The money has been turned over to Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Joh Lippincott for distribution.

HEBART HALL CELEBRATES 15TH ANNIVERSARY TODAY

Hebart Hall, the laboratory and home school for unusual children, founded in 1900 by Dr. M. P. E. Groszmann, today celebrated its fifteenth anniversary. This school for the past eleven years has been located on "Watchung Crest," North Plainfield. It was organized as an experiment station. Here practical work is being carried on in the development of educational reforms.

The outgrowth is the National Association for the Study and Education of Exceptional Children. Dr. Groszmann and his association believe that the exceptional child is the only one worth while, the work being constructive in character. The anniversary will be observed this afternoon with appropriate exercises on the school grounds, when according to the annual custom a tree will be planted and there will be addresses by Dr. Groszmann and members of the faculty. There will also be a musical program.

PROTEST AGAINST THE RIGHT OF WAY

W. A. Coddington Before Sewage Commission on Behalf of Property Owners.

William A. Coddington, representing individual property-owners who are affected by the proposed trunk line sewer being built in Plainfield, North Plainfield and Dunellen, appeared before the Joint Sewage Commission at its meeting in the Common Council rooms here, last night, to make a formal protest. Mr. Coddington's clients, about eight in all, were present, and through their counsel objected to the right of way which they claimed would affect their properties. The discussion brought out the fact that an offer of 25 and 50 cents a foot had been offered to protestants for their consent, but that they had refused to consider such an offer.

Mr. Coddington's protest was formal. There was also present representatives of the Borough of Middlesex and other nearby property-owners who are interested in the injunction bill which Mr. Coddington filed, the purpose of which is to prevent the installation of the sewage disposal work on the Darling farm in Piscataway township.

The bill is filed to include all three municipalities and service of papers has been acknowledged by Lindabury, Depue & Faulks, of counsel for the municipalities. Argument on this will probably be heard between now and July 1 next.

Various reports of committees were received last night, one showing that considerable progress has been made in the matter of rights of way, and several bills were paid, including one of $800 to Lindabury, Depue & Faulks and another of $3,000 to one of the construction companies.

There was a full attendance of the members of the Commission and they all expressed themselves as being well pleased with the progress of the sewer work. In thir opinion the injunction proceedings will not defeat the ultimate completion of the work for the reason that the plans have the endorsement of the State Board of Health which body is constantly urging that the sewer be built as quickly as possible.

SMALL FIRES KEEP THE LOCAL DEPARTMENT BUSY

An alarm from box 69 at 6:47 last night called the fire department to lower Leland avenue, where a bad blaze was in progress in the woods and fields of grass in that vicinity just on the city line. The blaze was put out after a half hours fight. A phone alarm was received at 6:30 last night for a slight blaze in the kitchen at C. E. S. Bellow's home at 516 Woodland avenue, caused by the over turning of a pan of grease on the range. No. 4 Company responded and extinguished the flames.

Two other telephone alarms were received at headquarters last evening, one for a grass fire on Leland avenue at 6:55 and the other for a supposed grass fire on George street at 5:10. When No. 4 Company responded to the latter, no fire could be found.

HARRY BALDWIN DEAD AFTER A LONG ILLNESS

Harry Baldwin aged forty-three years, died this morning at the home of his sister, Mrs. Lawrence Scheelein, of 294 Somerset street, following a long illness from a pumonary trouble. He was the son of the late William A. and Jane H. Baldwin, who resided for many years on the Warrenville road west of Pedefious' Hotel. He was a general dealer in hay and horses and cattle and was well known throughout this section.

Beside Mrs. Scheelein, Mr. Baldwin is survived by one other sister, Mrs. Minnie Bush, of this city and six brothers, William O. and Walter Baldwin, of Fort Washington, L. I.; and Augustus, Charles, Richard and George Baldwin, all of this vicinity. The arrangements for the funeral have not yet been completed.

INTRODUCED ARMORY BILL.

Assemblyman William N. Runyon introduced a bill in the Legislature, last night, calling for an appropriation of $25,000 to erect an armory building in Plainfield. The bill will follow the usual course, but in the event of its passing, it will be some years before the money could be secured as it depends entirely upon the amount for this purpose in the hands of the appropriation committee.

Money to Loan—Houses to Rent.

WHO WILL GET THE $100 CASH REWARD

Several Scotch Plains Men Losing Sleep Over Dr. Klotz's Money.

Squabbles over the rightful distribution of $100, offered as reward money by Dr. Robert T. Klotz, of Allentown, Pa., for the return of an auto which was stolen from him last Friday, are troubling the Scotch Plains police force and unless some satisfactory conclusion is arrived at within the next few hours it is possible that the $100 will be returned to the physician with a proper explanation. The automobile was abandoned on the front lawn of the Julia Wallace home in Scotch Plains Sunday night by the thieves after the gasoline supply had become exhausted.

According to Mrs. Wallace her son Lawrence was the first to discover the machine and he notified the Plainfield police. Therefore he believes he is entitled to the reward money. Ralph Veniezie was the first to notify the Scotch Plains police and he is also after the fund. Marshal Logan, who investigated the case and communicated with the Allentown police as instructed by a placard left near the auto by the thieves, believes he is entitled to a share.

Threats have been made by those interested to bring the matter into court and any distribution at the present time would probably result in litigation.

CLAIMS HUSBAND DROWNED HIMSELF

Mrs. Cora Pangborn Has Difficulty in Securing a Widow's Pension.

Mrs. Cora Pangborn, wife of James Pangborn, formerly of this city, appeared before Judge William P. Martin in the Court of Common Pleas, Newark, this week, with an application for a pension under the Widows' Pension Act. Mrs. Pangborn's husband was the son of William Pangborn, of Pearl street, the borough, and the woman asserts that he committed suicide by drowning between March 28 and April 10, 1910.

Mrs. Pangborn said that in company with her sister, she had visited a New York morgue at that time and identified a man as her husband. She buried the body. During the summer of 1910 Mrs. Pangborn tried to collect insurance on a policy her husband carried with The Prudential Insurance Company. The company evidently did not place much credence in the suicide story and put a detective on the case. He came here and interviewed Chief Marshal George Weiss, of the borough, who claimed he knew the Pangborn family. The representative of the insurance company had a clue that the supposed dead man was serving time on Blackwell's Island and induced the borough chief to take a trip there with him. Out of a number of convicts Chief Weiss says he picked out the local man, who was serving a one year term for petty larceny under an assumed name. When arrested he was in the employ of a New York concern as driver and had been found guilty of withholding payments. Mrs. Pangborn's application for pension was put off until next Monday.

PLAINFIELD TRUST COMPANY PURCHASES LOCAL PROPERTY

Elizabeth, April 1.—The Plainfield Trust Company, complainant, was the purchaser yesterday at a sheriff's sale of a piece of property at the southeasterly side of Fifth street, Plainfield, northeast of Franklin street. The owner was Stella S. Butler. The purchase price was $2,000.

William A. Coddington, of Plainfield, bought lots in Greater Elizabeth as complainant against Jacob Kinter. The price was $200.

CHIMNEY FIRE.

The borough fire aparatus answered a still alarm call yesterday afternoon at 2:15 o'clock for a chimney fire in the home of W. J. Campbell, of 89 Jackson avenue. The fire was extinguished with chemicals and there was no damage.

FRENCH STEAMER LATEST VICTIM

Emma With Seventeen of Crew Sunk by Submarine —Two Men Saved.

55,800 ARE PRISONERS

Germans Say They Took That Many Russians in March—Rumors of Peace Negotiations Within Two Months—Bombard Turkish Town.

London, April 1 (Central News Cable).—The French steamer "Emma" has been added to the list of victims of German submarines in the Irish Sea. Two survivors and the bodies of the two of the crew were landed this morning at Dover. Seventeen of the crew drowned. The steamer was bound from Dundalk, Ireland, to a French port and was torpedoed while in the channel.

Berlin, April 1 (by wireless).—The following statement was given at German headquarters today:

"Eastern Theatre—In the region of Augustowo and Suwalki the situation is unchanged. The Russians attempted to cross the Radka during the night, southeast of Skierniewice and failed. Russian attacks near Opoczno were repulsed.

"During March the German east army captured altogether 55,800 Russians and took nine guns and 61 machine guns.

"Western Theatre—The Germans yesterday captured Klosterhook farm which was occupied by Belgians and a minor point nar Dixmude. One officer and 44 Belgians were taken prisoners.

"West of Point a Mousson, in and near Priest Wald (LaPretre Forest) the engagement of yesterday came to a standstill at night. The French entered a small section of the advanced German trenches. Fighting continues today in advance guard engagements. Northeast and east of Luneville the French suffered heavy losses.

"In the Vosges there was only an artillery duel."

Rome, April 1.—A despatch to the "Giornale d Italia" from its Basle correspondent quotes one of the American Peace Commissioners who was formerly in Berlin as having declared that serious proposals for peace within two months will be advanced from some quarter.

Paris, April 1.—Premier Radoslavoff of Bulgaria is continuing pourparlers with Greece, Roumania and Servia to procure their assent to the terms to which the Allies have signified their approval, states a despatch from Bucharest to the "Petit Journal." It is probable that an agreement will be reached between Bulgaria and Servia which will lead toward a combination of the Balkan States for concerted action against Turkey.

The French War Office gave out the following this afternoon

"The warfare of mines continues at numerous points on the front. Before Dompierre, southwest of Peronne, we exploded with success four mine chambers. Near the Tholera farm, north of Berry Au Bac, we blew up a series of mines at the time the enemy was working there and after the explosion we showered the enemy with fire from our 75 milometre guns. A German observation post disappeared in the explosion.

"In the forest of La Pretre the number of prisoners taken by us is 140 of whom three are officers. All the German counter attacks have been repulsed. The attack directed against our advance post in the region of Parroy was led by a batallion of Landwehr. It was checked with heavy losses.

"Belgian aviators in the course of the night of March 30-31 bombarded the aviation camp at Handzsewe and the railway junction of Cortearck.

"A Russian fleet on Tuesday bombarded the district of Eregli, shelling Sanguldak, Eregli and Koslu. The warships fired 2,000 shells sinking nine sailing vessels and wrecking four houses, but doing no important military damage. Russian aviators also threw bombs upon Eregli. The aeroplanes were driven back by Turkish airmen. After the bombardment the Russian ships disappeared to the northward.

"The situation in the Dardanelles and in the outer theatres of action is unchanged."

EASTER PROGRAM.

The following is the Easter program of the Presbyterian church: Sunrise prayer meeting at 7:30 o'clock; regular sermon and the sacrament of the Lord's Supper at 10:30; Easter exercises of Sunday-school in church at 3 o'clock; Y. P. S. C. E. meeting at 6:45 and evening service with special music and an Easter sermon by the pastor at 7:30 o'clock.

Warrenville.

The Easter services of the Coontown Congregational church will begin at 10:30 a. m. on Sunday.

John Bowers, George Gunton and William G. Cooper, Jr., moved L. Zepp and family from Irvington to their new bungalow. Mrs. Zepp has several beautiful gold and silver pheasants.

Mrs. Mulford Darling, of Bound Brook, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Albert.

The foundation of J. Kuntz's house is completed and R. Zeller has started building.

Miss Ruth Miller has accepted a position as stenographer for Harvey Linbarger, insurance agent, at Plainfield.

Tapscott Brothers will hold a cattle sale at the Washington House Stables Saturday. John C. Cooper will be the auctioneer.

Mrs. J. Hand, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Jacob Wurster, has returned to her home in Brooklyn.

James Codington, executor for the Benjamin Codington estate, will sell the eighty-acre farm in Coontown to settle the estate, on Saturday.

F. L. Horton will lead the prayer meeting in the Mt. Bethel Baptist church this evening.

Claude Harrison, who has been working in Martinsville for the past four months, has returned to his home in Coontown.

Walter Scriven, contractor, of Plainfield, has been awarded the contract for the remodeling of the house formerly owned by Emile Mennetti and the building of a new barn on the same farm for H. P. Woods, of New York, the owner.

William Rebman, who recently sold his farm, expects to build a new stone bungalow.

'Plains & Fanwood.

In observance of Good Friday, Rev. Oscar S. Michaels will conduct Holy Communion at All Saints' Episcopal church at 10:30 tomorrow morning. In the evening at 8 o'clock he will give a special illustrated lecture with Tissot's wonderful pictures of "The Passion." All are cordially invited whether they are communicants of the church or not.

The members of the Lend-a-Hand Society of the Baptist church will meet in the parlors of that edifice tomorrow afternoon.

Mrs. Henry L. Jesperson entertained the members of the Ladies' Aid Society of All Saints' Episcopal church at her home on Martine avenue, yesterday afternoon. The time was devoted to finishing work for missions, to which the society has been contributing help during the Lenten season.

The last of the mid-week services that have been conducted, in All Saints' Episcopal church during the Lenten season was in charge of Rev. Oscar S. Michaels, yesterday afternoon, and marked a larger attendance than any of the weekly services.

The annual Easter exercises were held by the pupils in Schools No. 1 and 2 this noon after which the children were dismissed. The opening session of the spring term will begin on Monday morning, April 12.

The meeting of the Scotch Plains young people in the lecture room of the Baptist church tonight, will be in the nature of an Easter social. Music and games followed by refreshments will be included in the program and the room will be appropriately decorated for the occasion.

The house of Irving Betts, on LaGrande avenue, has been completed by the contractors after considerable delay and was taken posssession of by the owner several days ago.

A meeting of the Sunshine Weavers is scheduled for tonight. Considerable business is to be transacted after which the girls will sew.

The Plainfield-Union Water Company has installed the fire hydrant at the corner of Forest road and Midway avenue, which was authorized by the Borough Council several months ago.

The vacancy as pastor of the local Methodist church, caused by the resignation of Dr. H. K. Carroll, has been filled by the appointment of Rev. R. E. Marshall. He will be in charge of the Easter Sunday services for the first time.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Stulz, of Railway road, are among the early residents who have returned after spending the winter months in New York.

PREPARING FOR DINNER AND MEETINGS AT Y. M. C. A.

The musical program for the men's meeting to be held at the association building on April 11, when enlisted men of the U. S. Navy will be in charge, includes a song service beginning at 3:45, led by F. T. Carter, Jr. Other musical features are also being arranged which will add greatly to the strength of the meeting. The doors will be open at 3:15, and all men over sixteen are cordially invited to attend.

Preparations are rapidly nearing completion for the "Father and Son" banquet which will be held Thursday evening, April 15. In addition to the good dinner, prepared through the co-operation of the ladies' auxiliary, there will be a demonstration in the gymnasium of the physical work being done by the Boys' Club, and an opportunity for fathers and sons to get better acquainted. Announcement regarding speakers will be made later.

The monthly meeting of the board of directors will be held this evening at 8 o'clock.

Corporation Notice.

Opening of East Fourth Street.

The undersigned, Commissioners heretofore appointed by the Common Council of the City of Plainfield to make an estimate and assessment of damages that any owner or owners of land will sustain by the laying out and opening of East Fourth Street from a point 388.5 feet northeast of the center of Washington Street to the southwesterly side line of Richmond Street, pursuant to the ordinance entitled: "An Ordinance for the Laying Out and Opening of East Fourth Street from a point 388.5 feet northeast of the center of Washington Street to the southwesterly side line of Richmond Street," approved July 6, 1914, and also to ascertain the amount of damages that shall be assessed as aforesaid, and of all necessary expenses incident to such laying out and opening and to make a just and equitable assessment thereof among the owners and occupants of the lands, tenements and real estate benefited thereby, in proportion to the benefits each shall be deemed to acquire, said assessment to be made pursuant to the amended charter of the city as amended or modified by general statutes of the State, and particularly by the act entitled, "An Act respecting assessments in cities," approved April 21st, 1876, hereby give notice that they have this day filed their report and assessment in the office of the City Clerk, and that the same is open to inspection of the public, and will be presented to the Common Council at the meeting of that body to be held at the Council Chamber, No. 249 North Avenue, in the City of Plainfield, New Jersey, on the fifth day of April, 1915, at eight o'clock p. m.

The character of the work and improvement is the laying out and opening of East Fourth Street between the points stated in the above mentioned title of said ordinance.

The lands taken are designated on a map and schedule accompanying said report and assessment, and filed in the office of the City Clerk, entitled "Assessment Map for the Laying Out and Opening of East Fourth Street from a point 388.5 feet northeast of the Center of Washington Street to the southwesterly side line of Richmond Street, City of Plainfield, N. J., March, 1915," to which map reference is hereby made for greater certainty.

The lands assessed for benefits are the lands fronting on said East Fourth Street as ordered laid out and opened by said ordinance, also on both sides of said East Fourth Street extending to Washington Street, and are also shown and designated on said map and schedule, to which reference is hereby made for greater certainty.

Dated, Plainfield, N. J., March 15, 1915.

ASPIRANTS WHO WIN WILL BE THOSE WHO STICK TO VOTE HUNT

Today's Standing Shows Which Way Wind Blows in Tour and Prize Contest, But "Cyclone" at Finish May Catch Unsuspecting Ones.

First Prize.

Second Prize.

Merchandise Certificate, good for $25.00 in trade at Woodhull & Martin Co., 163 East Front street, and $15.00 in gold.

Third Prize.

SPECIAL NOTICE!

The ballot which has been found on the second page of the Press since the start of the contest, will be discontinued on Saturday, April 3, and all these ballots must be in the ballot box on that date to be counted. From April 3 until the end of the contest, only subscription ballots will be accepted and credited to candidates.

The new vote standing as it appears today will give some idea of who the candidates are that are trying for the special prizes, but when the winners are announced it may be another story entirely. The best plan to follow is to go the limit and then there will be no disappointments on "what might have been."

Everybody has heard the old saying, "Where there's a will, there's a way." The women who mean to win the special prizes and the transcontinental tours offered by the Press not only realize the truth thereof but are putting it into practice, and any woman who will take the full meaning of this precept and will act on it cannot help but win.

A number of subscriptions are being overlooked each day because the candidates show timidity in approaching some men by reason of their standing in business circles. Your request for the subscriptions will be met with courtesy, at least. In the majority of cases the persons you approach will gladly help you. Do not be discouraged because someone in your district appears to have a greater number of votes than you have. Be determined.

Room for New Candidates.

As some may not understand that the contest is still open to any eligible lady who may wish to enter, the Press again calls attention to those who may be hesitating, that a fertile field still exists in different districts. No one has a lead that could not be overhauled. If you are still considering the advisability of such a procedure, act at once, for the earlier one starts the better it will be for her.

No matter how far behind you are, the race is still young, and you may easily catch the district leader. Perhaps your friends have not as quickly caught the spirit of the affair as the friends of others, but they will if you are persistent, and when they do your score will shoot skyward, too. Perhaps you have not asked friends to help you. If not, do so at once. Do not be afraid to ask for votes and subscriptions.

Be a leader in your district if you possibly can. The prestige such a position gives you arouses the interest of those who are watching your progress. Once you get your friends interested in your welfare, there is no end of surprising development.

Notice to Contestants.

When turning in subscriptions it is positively necessary to plainly indicate whether the subscriptions are new or old. An old subscriber is one who is regularly receiving the Press by carrier, newsdealer or mail. It is not permissable for a subscriber to discontinue the Press and then start the paper in another's name in order that votes may be issued as on a new subscription.

No subscription will be accepted by the contest department on Saturday unless turned in on a regular subscription blank. In other words, the contest department will not have time to fill out blanks for candidates. Take care in filling in the blanks that all spaces are filled in properly, do not get the name of the subscriber in the space for candidate's name, or the ballot. Be sure that all dates are filled in and proper addresses. Try to have your total amount of cash all figured out and separated from the subscription blanks and by no means have cash subscription folded up with the cash inside. Hand your subscriptions in in one package and the money to correspond in another. If this is carried out it will aid the contest department greatly and delays will be greatly minimized. A big lot of business will naturally be crowded into the last few hours and if the candidates have everything in good order the work of recording subscriptions and issuing of receipts can be accomplished with dispatch.

Prizes on Exhibition.

The jewelry prizes are on display at the above stores, and every person is invited to look them over; they are beauties; both of them.

Mr. Vail is willing to repurchase the diamond ring offered as first prize from the winner any time within one year for $90 cash.

All ballots issued on subscriptions and voted for the extra prizes must date from March 18. The close of the special prize period will come at 10 p. m. April 3.

NOVEL FEATURE ARRANGED FOR LOCAL CHARITY BALL

Plainfield lovers of modern dancing will be given an opportunity to witness a professional demonstration of the latest steps at the charity ball to be held in the Columbus Club Auditorium Monday night, two experts having tendered their services for that occasion. Miss Maude C. Gesszert, a graduate of the Castle School and now instructor in dancing in Adelphi Academy, Brooklyn, has consented to appear and to give demonstrations during the intermissions with C. Warren Reed, who is also well known in Metropolitan professional dancing circles. Miss Cosette Bratton, of West Fourth street, is a member of the Adelphia faculty and her personal acquaintance with Miss Gesszert induced the latter to offer her services free for local charity. Miss Emily V. Beeken will be the accompanist.

These exhibitions will be given between the dance intermissions and will be only one of the many treats arranged. Plainfielders have not been able to witness a demonstration given by dancers of this calibre in this city and it is anticipated that they will be accorded an enthusiastic reception.

MEMBERSHIP OF PARK AVENUE CHURCH INCREASING

Fourteen persons presented themselves for membership in the Park Avenue Baptist church, last night and arrangements are being made for their baptism on Sunday. This large accession is one of great encouragement to Rev. Dr. Birney S. Hudson the pstor, and his people. At the annual church meeting held recently Isaac Giles and L. R. Schofield were re-elected deacons and William Doane was re-elected clerk, and Charles Hellyer was elected benevolent treasurer.

Th reports showed that about $5,000 was raised the past year for all church purposes. Of this amount about $700 was raised by the women's mission societies. The annual meeting of the church society will be held Wednesday night, April 7, for the election of trustees and presentation of other reports.

GARRET GARRETSON IS LAID TO REST

The funeral of Garrett Garretson whose death occurred in Muhlenberg Hospital after an illness with typhoid fever, was held at his late home, a 720 East Seventh street, at 1 o'clock this afternoon. The service was conducted by Rev. J. O. McKelvey in the presence of a gathering of relatives and friends. The floral tributes included set pieces from the local Painters' Union, the Somerville Knights of Pythias and J. E. Gremillot, of Bound Brook, Mr. Garretson's employer.

Following the service the body was taken to Somerville, where a delegation from Lodge of the Castle, K of P., met the funeral party and conducted the Pythian commitment service at the grave in the new cemetery. The pall bearers were John G. Bicknell and William J. Trembath, representing the Knights of Pythias; J. E. Gremillot, of Bound Brook; John E. Naylor, John A. Naylor, George LaMatty, representing the Painters' Union.

DEATH OF LITTLE GIRL.

Margaret D. Schwarz, the five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl T. Schwarz, of 1109 West Fifth street, died last night in Muhlenberg Hospital. She had been ill only a few days with appendicitis and resultant complications. The child was a pupil in the kindergarten of the Irving School and the sympathy of all is extended to the bereaved parents. No arrangements have been made for the funeral as yet.

RUMMAGE SALE OPENS.

The three days' rummage sale under the auspices of the Plainfield Equal Suffrage League opened this morning at suffrage headquarters on Depot avenue. The proceeds will go for the support of the league. Mrs. Henry C. White is the chairman of the committee in charge of the sale.

BORO TEACHERS LEAVE.

A large number of the teachers of the North Plainfield schools left today for their homes for the Easter vacation. School will re-open on Monday, April 12. Miss Myrtle Montague, head of the High School commercial department, is attending a meeting of commercial teachers in New York city this afternoon. Miss Emma Tantum, principal of the Watchung School, has gone to Ocean Grove, and Miss Ethel Barnard, of the High School faculty, will spend her vacation at her home in Westtown, Pa. Miss Mary Robley has gone to her home in Asbury Park.

BONNIE BURN REPORT.

There are at present 111 patients at Bonnie Burn Sanitorium, the largest number during any one month since the institution was established. On March 1 last there were 107 patients, 22 patients being admitted during the month. Five are in the incipient stage, two moderately advanced and fifteen far advanced. Of the incipient cases three are children. Eighteen patients were discharged, and in this number is included twelve deaths.

ATTENDED MOTHER'S FUNERAL.

Thomas J. Lynch, foreman of the press room of the Daily Press, has returned to his home on East Second street from Brooklyn, after attending the funeral of his mother, Mrs. Margaret Lynch, whose death occurred Monday morning after a short illness. A solemn high mass of requiem was celebrated at the church of the Visitation, Brooklyn, in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends. There were numerous floral tributes, from the many friends of the deceased.

"FJORDS OF NORWAY."

The final entertainment of the Board of Education's free lecture course will be held tonight at the High School Auditorium, when B. R. Baumgardt will deliver a lecture on the "Fjords of Norway," illustrated by many stereopticon views taken by the lecturer. Mr. Baumgardt will outline the salient features of Norse history from its mythological beginnings to modern times. The doors will open at 730 and the lecture will begin promptly at 8 o'clock.

DR. FISHER TO SPEAK.

Dr. George J. Fisher, head of the International Y. M. C. A. Training School's physical department, has been secured as the principle speaker for the "Father and Son" banquet to be given by the mothers and daughters in the Y. M. C. A. parlors April 15. Dr. Fisher has an international reputation as a speaker and considerable interest is attached to his appearance here on that date.

ILLUSTRATED LECTURE.

Rev. Henry Meiser, rector of St. Stephen's church, will give an illustrated lecture on the events of the last week of the "Life of Our Lord," this afternoon beginning promptly at 4 o'clock. All the great paintings of the Passion will be thrown on the screen by the large balopticon which Mr. Meiser recently bought for illustrated talks. All the children of the Sunday-school are invited to be present.

P. H. S. EASTER EXERCISES.

Dr. Philip B. Strong, pastor of the First Baptist church, spoke at the Easter exercises of the Plainfield High School this morning. The subject of his talk was "Faith, Hope and Love." There were also three songs by the school and a song by a quartet. The quartet was composed of the Misses Margaret Tubbs, Ruth Voorhees, Daniel McNamee and Evan Stevens.

MANY ATTEND DANCE.

The junior organization of the Young Women's Hebrew Association of this city held a successful shirt-waist dance in Debele Hall last night. There were about one hundred couple present. A large committee of young women worked for the success of the affair. Music was furnished by Messrs. Paroubek, Squires and Manchester.

SUBMARINES,

The tragic fate of the F-4 and its crew off the Hawaiian coast has renewed the discussion of the submarine and its operation, a subject already made important by the successes of the Germans with the new weapon of war.

It appears that, while the disaster to the F-4 in fifty fathoms of water is the first serious accident in American submarine operations, other navies have lost sixteen such craft and sacrificed more than two hundred lives in under water manoeuvering or in war.

An article in the February McClure's magazine, shows that the first crude submarine was invented by a Yale freshman who employed it unsuccessfully against the British fleet during the Revolutionary war, and that a Confederate submarine boat, a development of the same idea, sank a Federal warship in Charleston harbor during the war of 1861-65. John P. Holland, the American chiefly responsible for the modern development of the submarine, met much discouragement, the nations being slow to take it up. France was the first seriously to undertake submarines and at Toulon in 1899 presented surprising demonstrations of their power.

In view of German military ambition and the established fact that the submarine is the one sure weapon against a greatly superior navy, it seems strange indeed that the outbreak of war last August found Germany with only 30 submarines to 100 for England and nearly 100 for France. Fifteen months ago Germany was reported as building only 12 new submarines to 22 for England, 18 for France and 26 for the United States. This is the more surprising in view of Germany's enormous military expenditures for years in every other direction.

The London Nation recently remarked that "the submarine may compel us eventually to revise all our conceptions of sea warfare, but this war has luckily come upon us before its powers had been fully evolved.' Perhaps the continuation of such good luck will depend on the length of the war and on whether, while it lasts, awakened Germany shall find herself able to build submarines of the latest model night and day. That she is now straining every nerve toward the multiplication of these new and terrible engines of war we may rest assured.

CONSERVATIVE HASTE.

Mayor Calkins has several times publicly stated that he believes in the city manager form of government. It is also well-known that he is an ardent advocate of the survey which it is proposed to make in this city. Putting these facts together it is interesting to note that Henry M. Waite, the city manager of Dayton, Ohio, and the first person to hold a position of the kind in the country says that as a basis for the new government there must be an impartial and scientific investigation of the existing government.

Mr. Waite points out that such an investigation will not only reveal the good and bad features, and furnish statistical information for comparing the new with the old administration, but will give the city manager reliable figures on which to base his budget and guide himself as to the city's needs. It is his contention that when the change is made no hold-over officials should be retained, unless they are to be kept permanently, for their attitude would probably be a source of danger to the city-manager plan. Without the figures which such a survey would bring forth, any new government, struggling with an untried machine would be put to the further necessity of guessing at much.

When the manager was put in office at Dayton, a municipal research bureau had been at work for some years. Its work, Mr. Waite testifies, has been invaluable, so valuable that without it he would have been completely at sea when he took over the reins.

This is a most imporatnt matter and Mr. Waite is hammering it home whenever the opportunity offers, and especially in his replies to cities and civic bodies which are asking for information with a view of following in Dayton's footsteps. Engineers can and should help to spread the warning and counsel conservative haste lest the commission-manager plan, so full of hope for American municipal government, be given a setback due to failures caused primarily by insufficient preparation for the new order.

An amendment proposed to the building ordinance to make it impossible to build any more houses in the city with shingle roofs will be under discussion in the contributed editorial on Saturday. A city official who has made a study of the subject will be the writer.

The Legislature is beginning to keep campaign promises. The efficiency and economy bills have passed both houses and Governor Fielder's signature will make them into law.

"Orders Taken Now."

morrow the Belgians will have to be cared for for some time to come. It would be necessary for them to be able to harvest a crop and to get their manufacturing plants under way. The Germans have dismantled many of the factories and taken the machinery to Germany. America has done wonders, but to stop now would be to quit with the job half done.

"It is extremely gratifying to know the spirit with which everything American is received. The reverence for the flag is beyond description and on New Years day over 3,000 Belgians left cards with Minister Brand Whitlock at Antwerp, upon which were written expressions of gratitude." The speaker told of one devoted Belgian woman who said that the people love America devotedly, and that next to their own flag the stars and stripes held the warmest spot in their hearts. He paid a high tribute to both Mr. and Mrs. Whitlock for their excellent work.

After briefly describing the distribution of supplies from Rotterdam, Dean McClenahan aroused much enthusiasm by his declaration that he "confidently and gladly believes that the German occupation of Belgium is not to be of long duration." He closed by saying that the "United States conquest of Belgium was being acknowledged with love and gratitude, causing this nation to be recognized by all Europe as a friend of all mankind. They all say 'Thank God for America.'"

Captain Lucey began by telling the audience that the Belgian Relief Commission was absolutely a neutral body, having procured the permission of six governments to do its work. He emphasized the statement by Dean McClenahan that none of the American Relief supplies went to Germans except in a few isolated cases in the cities, and the German government paid for these promptly each month. He said that he joined the relief work when an appeal was made to his patriotism, and agreed to stay thirty days to organize a transportation system. Before he got away he had been at the work four months, and would have stayed longer if he knew that any persons were not being fed."

"The task which confronted us was the organization of a business equal to the United States Steel Corporation, over night. Our expenditures equal those made on the Panama canal of from $4,000,000 to $5,000,000 monthly. The first receipts came from the British Government, 100,000 pounds, and from the Belgian Government, 150,000 pounds. Lord Kitchener tried to prevent our buying the first lot of supplies in England, but Ambassador Page insisted, and after seven attempts we finally got a shipload of wheat off.

"The job at first seemed impossible. In one section the starving inhabitants had already attacked a German military supply train, and unless such action was stopped it would mean the killing of non-combatants. In Liege the strain was great because the Belgians threatened to rise up and attack the Germans which would result in slaughter."

The speaker then described a strenuous, and at the same time rather amusing experience by which he "stole," as it were, some 7,500 tons of grain, the bills of lading for which had been lost, and said that his only regret was that he did not get another 2,500 tons which was stored at the same place, as it was still being fought over by different authorities. He declared that in spite of work of the relief commission, the entire population of Belgium is still undernourished, and told how he had explained to people who questioned the ability of the commission to finish the work that there were "100,000,000 million Americans ready to feed the Belgians, and what we started we usuelly finished."

There are four departments to the relief work—provisioning, charitable, clothing and the baby canteens. Flour is distributed by a system of coupons and tickets, not unlike the commutation tickets used in this country. Through the efforts of the commission the Germans have been persuaded to stop requisitioning supplies from the Belgians and have discontinued billeting their men in the homes. They have not, however, agreed to forego the $40,000,000 war tax which has been demanded.

The food supplies are transported on the canals in boats, and eighteen motor trucks have been built to take the loads about where the canals do not reach. In addition to this there are eighteen American autos which are used by the couriers. The bakers are made to use every bit of flour that is given to them each day, and must give full weight of pure bread. In some cases they tried to put cement, sawdust and other things in the bread, and these men were punished severely. As a result of the work of Captain Lucey and his assistants there has been built up an organization second to none to do the work.

In concluding his remarks the Captain said that it is only through the American people that the Belgians can be fed. The Germans will not do it and the English and Dutch cannot. The Relief Commission offered the Dutch $250,000 a month for their relief work and they declined it, saying that they were doing their share, as a task brought on by the war. Six and a half cents a day feeds each Belgian, or $2 a person a month. Captain Lucey made a particularly urgent appeal for the children, which he said are dying at a rapid pace because of malnutrition. He spoke of one refugee camp in Holland where 170 died in one month. He closed with an urgent appeal to those present to do everything they can to help the work along.

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

In connection with the presentation of the feature photo-play, 'The Sign of the Cross," at the Plainfield Theatre tomorrow and also Saturday, Edward Harding, Jr., will render "The Rosary" as a solo number. Everyone is familiar with this beautiful song and its rendition while the trials and tribulations of the early Christians are being shown will make it doubly effective. Mr. Harding is the possessor of a cultivated tenor voice and sprang into instant favor when he gave popular ballads at the theatre several weeks ago.

The feature photo-play at the Plainfield Theatre today is the Kleine companys production of "Quo Vadis," taken from the original book. It is in eight parts, every one of which brings a new sensation and a new source of wonderment to the beholder. Next Monday and Tuesday "The Crucible" will be presented, featuring the charming Marguerite Clark, and throughout next week with the exception of Thursday the latest Paramount releases will be the attraction. Among these might be mentioned "False Colors" on Wednesday and Mrs. Leslie Carter in the Kleine production of "Du Barry."

On Thursday, April 8, at the Plainfield Theatre H. H. Frazee will present to local theatre-goers "A Pair of Sixes," which is aptly described as "the funniest farce in the world." Due to the numerous requests from various cities to be allowed an opportunity to witness the play that has set all New York theatre-goers to talking, Mr. Frazee has formed a special company and has spared no expense in securing artists for the various roles of such calibre as Paul Nicholson, Curtis Benton, Angie Norton, Mildred Booth, Marta Oatman and others.

THE HOPE OF THE HERD.
By Elizabeth Ferris.

Now the wild sun-set lies red on the prairie;
Faint howls the wolf waking up in the sand-hills
That rise from the rim of the reddening west.

Choose out a spot where the sun-warmth still lingers,
And safe on the soft trampled sod lay you down;
Tired little dark bushy buffalo folkling,
With eyes that are roguishly tender and brown.

Cosily cuddled together, now rest you,
Each small head 'gainst a neighbor's soft flank;
All the herd mothers are kneeling around you,
To slumber in many a close guarding rank;

While with horns to the night, shall the huge shaggy fathers
Lie down in a circle enclosing you all.
And woe to the wolf pressed by desperate hunger
Who shall leap on that bristling and terrible wall!

Silent and swift steal the packs through the shadows,
Baffled, retreating, assailing again:
Yet sleep, little buffaloes, in the wild meadows,
Fathers and mothers shall guard not in vain!

*This beautifully significant fact was told to a class in sociology in the University of Illinois.

THE FOOT-PATH TO PEACE.

To be glad of life because it gives you the chance to love and to work and to play and to look up at the stars, to be satisfied with your possessions but not contented with yourself until you have made the best of them; to despise nothing in the world except falsehood and meanness, and to fear nothing except cowardice; to be governed by your admirations rather than by your disgusts; to cover nothing that is your neighbor's except his kindness of heart and gentleness of manners; to think seldom of your enemies, often of your friends, and every day of Christ; to spend as much time as you can, with body and with spirit, in God's out-of-doors, these are little guide-posts on the foot-path to peace.—Henry Van Dyke.

NATIONAL CONGRESS.

At a National Executive Board meeting in Atlantic City Mrs. George K. Johnson made a plea for an endowment fund for the National Congress of Mothers saying the work should now be placed on a firm financial basis. $4,220 was pledged among the members present.

BELGIUM BABIES.

In the March number of the Child-Welfare Magazine is an article on "The Babes of Belgium," by Will Irwin, which gives in detail some of the sufferings of the mothers and states that forty thousand babies have been born since the coming of Germans. Many of the mothers have had no food at all to say nothing of the special food we think necessary at such a time. The manazine is on file at the Public Library.

HOLLAND.

The women of Holland have called a meeting of peace at the Hague the last week in April in which the Peace Party of America have been invited to join. Indeed, Miss Jane Addams, president of the Peace Party, was consulted before the date was fixed, that there might not be conflicting dates to prevent her going to Holland at that time. No trouble in reaching Holland is anticipated.

NEW BRUNSWICK.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Lincoln School in New Brunswick reports that since the beginning of the work in 1912 the organization has been a great help to both parents and teachers. During the first year the playground was established—the first connected with a public school in the city. This year an electric clock system has been placed in the school at a cost of $356 of which $100 remains to be paid. The money is raised by entertainments and cake sales.

P. H. S. AMPHIBIANS DEFEAT MT. ARARAT

Local Freshmen Have An Easy Time Vanquishing Visitors.

The freshman class of the Plainfield High School defeated the freshman class of Westfield High School in a dual swimming meet, held in the Plainfield High School tank yesterday afternoon. The final score was Plainfield 41 2-3 points, Westfield 21 1-3 points. Lorenzo Brower, captain of the Plainfield freshmen, cleaned up in the races. He won the three dashes, was a member of the winning relay team and took third place in the plunge for distance. He was high score man with a total of 17 7-12 points. Sisserson, of Westfield, was second in the total point score with 9. He scored second in the 20-yard dash, third in the 40-yard dash, and second in the 100-yard dash. The only first place scored by Westfield was in the plunge for distance. Ewing won this event plunging 40 feet 2 inches.

The score:

80-yard Relay—First, Plainfield (Snyder, Erickson, Johnson, Brower); second, Westfield (Ewing, Brower, Brennesholtz, Sisserson) Time, 50 1-5 seconds.

40-yard Dash—First, Brower (P. H. S.); second, Ewing (W. H. S.); third, Sisserson (W. H. S.) Time 23 seconds.

Plunge for Distance—First Ewing (W. H. S.; second, Condict (P. H. (W. H. S.); second, Condict (P. H. tance, 40 feet 2 inches. Total points: Plainfield Freshmen, 41 2-3; Westfield Freshmen, 21 1-3.

Y. M. H. A. OUT OF TOWN.

The Y. M. H. A. basketball team is scheduled to go to Paterson tonight for a game with the Y. M. H. A. of that place. The trip will be made by automobile and a large number of rooters will accompany the team.

FRIENDLY MATCH ON AT B. P. O. E. CLUB TONIGHT

The Elks' and Park Club Junior bowling teams will meet tonight on the Watchung avenue drives in the first match of the second series. The little "Bills" have won five out of six games played to date, but in the last match at the Park Club the home team had in three substitutes and it was easy going for the Elks.

Both teams will present their strongest men tonight and an exciting match is looked for. There will be dancing after the pinning is over and the lady folk are invited to occupy the seats beside the alleys.

MEDALS FOR CHAMPIONS; CUP FOR COACH PATCH

The members of the Plainfield High School boys' basketball team, who won the interscholastic championship, received their medals this morning. The medals are oblong, with a figure of an athlete on the front. The medals were presented by Henry Hubbard, acting principal.

TWO TROPHIES OFFERED FOR CITY TITLE SERIES

Leo Slonim, who announced yesterday that he would offer a cup for the city scholastic title, has not yet decided under what conditions that trophy shall be awarded. At first it was thought that the championship team would be entitled to it, but since a cup for that honor has been given for the past three years by Paul Collier, Mr. Slonim does not want to duplicate the prize.

Collier communicated with the managers of the Plainfield, North Plainfield and Leal teams about a month ago and told them that he would again offer the "bowl" is satisfactory. All of the managers accepted the offer. The cup that Mr. Slonim has offered is a fine one and should be given for the next highest honor to that of the championship. It stands about fourteen inches high and has three handles. The donor said this morning that he would leave it to the members of the schools as to what the trophy is to be given for as he does not know baseball at all.

HEBERT WILL PLAY.

Bob Hebert, of North Plainfield High School, has made arrangements to attend the borough school until June and will play left field on the baseball team. His parents will move to Brooklyn within the next few days and Bob will go home over week-ends.

BORO BOWLING.

Conover and McCune and Connolly and Voorhees are due to clash on the Somerset street lanes tonight in the Borough One Man Tourney. The winners of these matches will meet in three games.

PARK CLUB BOWLING.

The weekly play of the Handicap Five-back Tourney at the Park Club will be held tonight. Tenpins will be rolled tomorrow night as usual.

EDWARD CRONE TO SUCCEED BLANCHARD AS MANAGER

The Boys' Athletic Association of the Plainfield High School at a meeting yesterday afternoon, elected Edward Crone manager of the football team to succeed Roscoe Blanchard, who is going to move to Chicago in July. The following pupils have been awarded there High School insignias: Nicholas Zelmas, manager of basketball team; Edward Ryder, Sheldon Coudray, basketball, and Philip Mills, and Miner Trowbridge, track. The insignias were presented at the chapel exercises this morning.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

High School correspondents tell us their baseball teams this year are the best in the history of the respective institutions. It's safe enough to make this assertion in April but the gink who attempts to herald such news along about the middle of June has to look for a nook to duck to.

It's a case of star team in April, a little stale in May and as a rule a rotten failure in June. In very few cases do the predictions of the school boy Horace Greeley's hold water.

A couple of venturesome managers have announced the baseball asbestos rising for tomorrow morning. That Yankee-Dodger series in the sunny south has probably injected the baseball fever into the local pill manipulators.

Although the High Schools and several independent teams have been trying out during the past couple of weeks no signs of a representative Plainfield outfit have appeared on the horizon. 'Smatter Ernie?

Early rumors had it that the Saurer team was going to make a bid for the patronage of Plainfield fans this year. The management better come through with something definite pretty quick or there'll be somebody else lost in the shuffle.

Why not enter a team in that county manufacturers' league that is being organized. Plainfield has better factory aggregations than most of the towns on the circuit.

Considerable mystery shrouds the appearance of a delegation of Metropolitan swimmers at the High School pool Tuesday night. Why not let the public in on the secret that is evidently being concealed?

You have to hand it to Manager Blanchard, of the P. H. S. football forces, for being on the job. It's some early to announce a gridiron schedule but he appears to have signed up some good attractions for next fall without any marked fuss.

Too bad those Y. M. C. A. and High School youngsters had to engineer such a regretable finale to our basketball season. Leave it to someone to put a crimp in anything that is any good around this burg.

DATE CHANGED.

The North Plainfield High School baseball team will meet the Cranford High School team on Hyde Oval next Tuesday afternoon instead of Wednesday as was first announced.

BOWLING ON ELKS' ALLEYS.

The Jersualem team, of the Masonic Bowling League, will entertain the members of the Essex five on the Elks' alleys tomorrow night in a regular match.

FIRST BASEBALL GAME SCHEDULED FOR TOMORROW

Baseball will be ushered in to baseball fans of this city Friday morning, the St. Joseph's Boys' Club nine and the Leal School aggregation being scheduled to meet on Cricket Field in a practice game. Both teams have been practicing for the past two weeks and a good game should be played.

Dan Denny or Harper will do the twirling for the boroughites while Voorhees will throw them over for the private school boys. Among those who will play for the teams are: St. Joseph, Carty, Meade, P. McDonough, Coyle, Moulton, Denny, Harper, Pasch, M. McDonough, Seidel, and Schneider, Voorhees, Dale, Garrigues, Dickerson, Wilson, Lyon, Harrington, Stevenson for Leals.

PROBASCO CLASS TO GIVE "REGIMENT OF TWO"

The annual entertainment of the Probasco Bible class of the First Baptist church, will be given in the auditorium of the Plainfield High School, on Saturday night, April 10. The name of the play is "A Regiment of Two," and is a scream throughout.

All of the characters are taken by members of the class and the cast is practising hard for success. Tickets are selling rapidly and the indications are that the performance will prove successful.

REV. CHARLES H. KUES SPOKE AT BORO EASTER EXERCISES

Rev. Charles H. Kues, rector of Holy Cross church, addressed the pupils of the North Plainfield High School at the Easter exercises which were held this morning. The program consisted of singing and recitations.

The program follows: Anthem, "The Church's One Foundation;" recitation, "Daffodils," Miss Laura Martin; singing, "See Now the Altar Garland with Flowers," High School; address, Rev. C. H. Kues; recitation, "When the Corn Pone is Hot," James Goodwin; singing, "Flower Song," High School; anthem, "The Choir Angelic," High School.

FRANKLIN SCHOOL PUPILS HELD EASTER EXERCISES

The pupils of the Franklin School held Easter exercises this afternoon under the direction of Miss N. J. Bullock, the principal. The program was a lengthy one and consisted of songs, carols and readings. The complete program follows:

EASTER WEEK ACTIVITIES FOR Y. M. C. A. YOUNGSTERS

The following is the program of the active events at the Young Men's Christian Association during Easter vacation, showing the activities in the boys' rooms as well as outside, including hikes, socials, etc.:

AMERICAN PASSPORTS TO BE ISSUED AT ELIZABETH

Elizabeth, April 1.—Under the authorization of the Federal authorities Judge James C. Connolly and County Clerk James C. Calvert will issue passports from now on. The State Department found itself swamped with applications because of the European war and was compelled to call on the States for aid. The applicant must make affidavit in court with a witness.

Frank A. English, a local lawyer, who is to be married April 14 to Miss Helen Orcutt, was the first applicant. Action on his application has not yet been taken. He will go to Bermuda with his bride.

K. K. K. FRATERNITY HELD ITS BI-MONTHLY "FEED"

The K. K. K. Fraternity, of the borough, held its bi-monthly meeting and feed in the clubrooms on Myrtle avenue, yesterday afternoon. President Ronald Conroy was absent because of illness and Vice-President Bob Hebert presided over the meeting. The regular routine business was transacted and a treasurer's report was given by Daniel Denny.

After the business meeting a "feed" was enjoyed. Those present were Bob Hebert, Appleton VanMater, Roy Stewart, Harold Lunger, Harry Moulton, Hyman Abrams and Edson Day.

SPECIAL SERVICES AT ST. PETER'S LUTHERAN CHURCH

Tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock a service in German will be held in the St. Peter's Lutheran church, corner Grove street and Mercer avenue, conducted by the pastor, Rev. G. Daeublo. In the evening at 7:30 Rev. Dr. Charles E. Moldenke will conduct the services in English and administer the Lord's Supper (also in English).

On Easter morning at 10:30 German services and the celebration of the Lord's Supper will be held. In the evening at 7:30 the Sunday-school will have its celebration. Recitations and sangs will be rendered by the children.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

Shakespeare is quoted as saying, "The play's the thing," but nowadays its the moving picture that's everything. The modern amusement loving public want moving pictures and want the best and the aim of Proctor's Theatre is to supply them. To that end the popular West Front street playhouse, the most spacious and homelike in the city, presents the costliest productions in the market. The big feature today is "The Making of Bobby Burnit" from the stories by George Randolph Chester, author of "Get-Rich-Quick-Wallingford" and other popular numbers. In "The Making of Bobby Burnit" this versatile writer did his best work and the camera conception of it was a distinct feast.

One of the features at Proctor's every Friday is the current episode of the serial film "The Exploits of Elaine," the mysteries of which hold the spectators in suspense from one week's show to the next. Every Saturday one of those Charles Chaplin comedies that have set the whole town laughing is flashed on the screen with resultant hilarity in the audiences. Next Monday the management will offer the New York Hudson Theatre success, "The Fight," featuring John Kellard and Margaret Wyckerly.

Keep the fact in mind that all pictures at Proctor's are in addition to the big vaudeville bill of five acts. The entire program is changed twice each week, Mondays and Thursdays, giving the people of Plainfield new and up-to-date offerings at all times and furnishing the biggest bargain for the money there is in the city.

A FOOL AND HIS MONEY

BY GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON.

CHAPTER X.

I Receive Visitors.

THE east wing of the castle was as still as a mouse on the day my house party arrived. Grim old doors took on new padlocks, keyholes were carefully stopped up, creaking floors were calked, and yet I trembled. My secret seemed to be safely planted, but what would the harvest be?

Elsie Hazzard presented me to her friends, and with lordly generosity I presented the castle to them.

There was a Russian baron whom for brevity's sake I'll call Umovitch. There was a Viennese gentleman of twenty-six or eight, I heard, but who looked forty. His name was Pless. He was a plain mister. The more I saw of him the first afternoon the more I wondered at George Hazzard's carelessness. Then there were two very bright and charming Americans, the Billy Smiths. He was connected with the American embassy at Vienna, and I liked him from the start. The baron was in the Russian embassy and was really a very nice boy.

"And this Mr. Pless, who is he?" I asked.

"Poor fellow!" she sighed. "He is in great trouble, John. We hoped that if we got him off here where it is quiet he might be able to forget. Oh, but I am not supposed to tell you a word of the story! We are all sworn to secrecy."

"Women," said Billy impressively.

"Then it's easily patched," said I. "Like cures like."

"You don't understand, John," said Elsie gravely. "He was married to a beautiful"—

"Now, Elsie, you're telling," cautioned Betty Billy—Mrs. Billy Smith.

"Well," said Elsie doggedly, "I'm determined to tell this much. His name isn't Pless. His wife got a divorce from him, and now she has taken their child and run off with it, and they can't find—what's the matter?"

"Poor fellow!" she sighed.

My eyes were almost popping from my head.

"Is—is he a count?" I cried, so loudly that they all said "Sh!" and shot apprehensive glances toward the pseudo Mr. Pless.

"Goodness!" said Elsie in alarm. "Don't shout, John."

Billy Smith regarded me speculatively. "I daresay Mr. Smart has read all about the affair in the newspapers."

"I haven't seen anything about it in the papers," said I, trying to recover my self possession which had sustained a most tremendous shock.

"Thank heaven!" cried Elsie devoutly.

"The poor fellow is almost distracted—really. Really, Mr. Smart, we planned this little visit here simply in order to—to take him out of himself for awhile. It has been such a tragedy for him. He worshiped the child." It was Mrs. Billy who spoke.

"And the mother made away with him?" I queried, resorting to a suddenly acquired cunning.

"It is a girl," said Elsie in a loud whisper—"the loveliest girl. The mother appeared in Vienna about three weeks or a month ago and—whiff!—off goes the child. Abducted—kidnaped! And the court had granted him the custody of the child. That's what makes it so terrible. If she is caught anywhere in Europe—well, I don't know what may happen to her. It is just silly acts as this that make American girls the laughingstocks of the whole world."

By this time I had myself pretty well in hand.

"I daresay the mother loved the child, which ought to condone one among her multitude of sins. I take it, of course, that she was entirely to blame for everything that happened."

They at once proceeded to tear the poor little mother to shreds, delicately and with finesse, to be sure, but none the less completely.

"Oh, good enough," said Betty Billy. "She was in the smartest set, if that is a recommendation."

To my disgust the three of them refused to enlighten me further as to the history, identity or character of either Mr. or Mrs. Pless, but of course I knew that I was entertaining under my roof by the most extraordinary coincidence the Count and Countess of Something-or-other, who were at war, and the child they were fighting for with motives of an entirely opposite nature.

"What time do we dine?" asked Mr. Pless later, with a suppressed yawn.

"At 8," said Elsie promptly.

"I think I'll take a nap," said he. With a languid smile and a little flaunt of his hand as if dismissing us, he moved languidly off, but stopped after a few steps to say to me, "We'll explore the castle tomorrow, Mr. Smart, if it's just the same to you." He spoke with a very slight accent and in a peculiarly attractive manner. There was charm to the man, I was bound to admit. "I know Schloss Rothhoefen very well. It is an old stamping ground of mine."

"Indeed!" said I, affecting surprise.

"I spent a very joyous season here not so many years ago. Hohendahl is a bosom friend."

I was eager to steal away to the east wing with the news, so somewhat later I knocked at the countess' door. I realized that it was a most unseemly hour for calling on a young, beautiful and unprotected lady, but the exigencies of the moment lent moral support to my invasion.

"Tell your mistress that I must see her at once."

"Madame is not at home, m'sieur," said the young woman.

"Not at home?" I gasped. "Where is she?"

"Madame has gone to bed."

"Oh!" I said blinking. "Then she is at home. Present my compliments and ask her to get up. Something very exasperating has hap"—

"Madame has request me to inform m'sieur that she knows the count is here and will you be so good as to call tomorrow morning."

"What! She knows he's here? Who brought the information?"

"The bountiful Max, m'sieur. He bring it with dejeuner, again with diner and but now with the hot water, m'sieur."

"Oh, I see!" said I profoundly. "In hat case I—shan't disturb her."

Now it may occur to you that any self respecting gentleman in possession of a castle and a grain of common sense would have set about to find out the true names of the guests beneath his roof. But it so happens that I rather enjoyed the mystery. The situation was unique, the comedy most exhilarating. Of course there was a tragic side to the whole matter, but, now that I was in for it, why minimize the novelty by adopting arbitrary measures? Somewhat gleefully I decided that it would be good fun to keep myself in the dark as long as possible.

When I reached the room where my guests were assembled I found Mr. Pless and the Baron Umovitch engaged in an acrimonious dispute over a question of bridge etiquette. The former had resented a sharp criticism coming from the latter, and they were waging a verbal battle in what I took to be five or six different tongues, none of which appeared to bear the slightest relationship to the English language. Suddenly Mr. Pless threw his cards down and left the table without a word of apology to the two ladies, who looked more hurt than appalled.

He said he was going to bed, but I noticed that he took himself off in the direction of the moonlit loggia. We were still discussing his defection in subdued tones—with the exception of the irate baron—when he re-entered the room.

"Are there real spirits in your castle, Mr. Smart, or have you flesh and blood mediums here who roam about in white night dresses to study the moods of the moon from the dizziest ramparts?"

I started. What indiscretion had the countess been up to?

"I don't quite understand you, Mr. Pless," I said, with a politely blank stare.

"My dear countess," said I the next morning, "while I am willing to admit that all you say is true, there still remains the unhappy fact that you were very near to upsetting everything last night. Mr. Pless saw you quite plainly. The moon was very full, you'll remember. Fortunately he was too far away from your window to recognize you. Think how easy it might"—

"But I've told you twice that I held my hand over Pinko's nose, and he just couldn't bark, Mr. Smart. You are really most unreasonable about it. The dog had to have a breath of fresh air."

"Why not send him up to the top of the tower and let him run around on the"—

"Oh, there's no use talking about it any longer!" she said wearily. "It is all over, and no real harm was done. I am awfully sorry if they made it uncomfortable for you."

"And now will you be good enough to tell me who I am?" she asked after a few minutes. "That is, who am I supposed to be?"

"Oh," said I uneasily, "you are really nobody! You are Britton's wife."

"What! Does Britton know it?"

"Yes," said I, with a wry smile. "He took a mean advantage of me in the presence of George Hazzard not an hour ago and asked for a raise in wages on account of his wife's illness. It seems that you are an invalid."

"I hope he hasn't forgotten the baby in his calculations."

"He hasn't, you may be sure. He has named the baby after me."

"How original!"

"I thought it rather clever to change Rosemary's sex for a few days," said I.

"And now tell me all about Mr. Pless," she said. "How is he looking? Does he appear to be unhappy?" There was a curious note in her voice, as of anxiety or eagerness, it was hard to tell which.

"He appears to be somewhat sentimental and preoccupied. He gazes at the moon and bites his nails."

"I—I wish I could have a peep at him some time without being"—

"For heaven's sake, don't even consider such a thing!" I cried in alarm.

"Just a little peek, Mr. Smart," she pleaded.

"No!" said I firmly.

"Very well," she said resignedly, fixing me with hurt eyes. "I'm sorry to be such a bother to you."

"I believe you'll go back to him after all," I said angrily. "Women are all alike. They"—

"Just because I want to see how unhappy he is and enjoy myself a little you say horrid things to me!" she cried almost pathetically. "You treat me very badly."

"There is a great deal at stake," said I. "The peril is—well, it's enormous. I am having my own time heading off a scheme they've got for exploring the entire castle. Your hus—your ex-husband says he knows of a secret door opening into this part of the"—

NEAT AS A PIN THIS NEW SPORT SUIT.

For strolling in the country on a spring day what could be neater or nattier than this well cut suit of shepherd check worsted edged with binding braid? Coat and skirt are both pleated at the sides and even the deep patch pocket has its fashionable pleats. The shortness of the skirt is a feature of modishness that is important this spring.

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"Do you know what day of the month this is?" asked Nell. Dick had thrown himself on the lounge; he looked up inquiringly.

"It's just two days before the twenty-fourth," Nell added impressively.

"The twenty-fourth?" he repeated.

"Yes, the twenty-fourth of June. I suppose you know what happened on that day."

Dick thought a minute, then sat up. "You don't mean it will be a year?" he asked incredulously.

"Yes." There was triumph in Nell's tone. "It seems longer, doesn't it? I can't remember when I wasn't married," she laughed.

"It certainly seems longer than a year. You've heard the chestnut, 'Married folks don't live longer than others, it only seems longer.'"

"What a mean remark!" said Nell, tossing her head. "Now, we've got to celebrate properly this festive occasion."

Dick clasped his knee in both hands. "Have you any suggestions?"

"I've been thinking the lawn is so successful and the yard so shady it would be fine to give a lawn party. We could play cards and serve refreshments out of doors. Mrs. Parsons has agreed to wait till Monday before starting east. It will be a sort of farewell for her. I dread to think of her going," said Nell dejectedly.

"You'll have the whole crowd, of course," observed Dick.

"Oh, yes; I am glad it comes on Saturday, for on that afternoon all the men will be at liberty."

They were sitting at dinner Saturday when a step was heard on the porch. Dick rose and met his mother at the door. Madam Morton had walked from the station and was flushed and tired.

"Oh, mother, why didn't you take the bus up here this hot day, just at noon?" he said as she sank into a chair.

"Oh, I am used to hot weather, but I am usually out of the sun in the middle of the day. Looks as if something was going on; all your tables and chairs in the yard. I thought at first you were moving."

"Why, it's our wedding anniversary, and we are celebrating with a party. You are just in time to help celebrate and can meet all our friends," he said as he conducted her to the table.

"When you have been married longer you wont make so much of anniversaries," she said grimly.

"Yes, we are giving a little card party." Nell was placing her knife and fork.

"Card party!" exploded the old lady. "You don't mean you play cards?" She looked at Nell in horror.

"Why, yes; we always played cards at home," said Nell weakly.

"We didn't," laughed Dick. "Mother found one once in the woodshed and carried it to the stove with a pair of tongs. She wasn't going to touch it with her hands."

"To think that I should have a child who played cards and married to a card player! I presume you dance and go to the theater?" She looked searchingly from one to the other. Dick slowly nodded his head.

She threw up her hands. Rising from the table, she said, "I guess I'll go home."

"Now, mother," said Dick, placing his hand on her shoulder, "don't be foolish. You never saw a game of cards; you know nothing about them, and you have a wrong idea about them. If you do not care to stay outdoors after you have met the guests, you can come inside."

His mother sat down despairingly, exclaiming, "That it should come to this!"

Household Hints

PALATABLE DISHES

Dainty dishes from calves' hearts and tongues, inexpensive and palatable:

Calves' Hearts — Three hearts (enough for five people) will cost twenty-five cents. Hearts should first be washed well, in plenty of warm water, to take out any possible bloodclots. Then they should be put in a kettle with some chopped onion and parsley, bay leaf, a sliced carrot, stalk of celery and dash of vinegar. Cover with plenty of boiling water and simmer until done. Season when done. Trim off any tough bits when done, as it is easier to do then, and these give up their richness to the stock.

Hearts so simmered can be served simply whole or sliced—in a brown gravy made of the stock and thickened with browned butter and flour.

Salmis, used in place of game, can be made from diced hearts if heated in a brown gravy to which olives and a little sherry have been added.

The plain sliced hearts can be served heated in tomato sauce, in a border of dry white boiled rice.

The cooked hearts, whole or cut in pieces, can be baked in stuffing and served with brown gravy and a currant or cranberry jelly.

Calves' Tongues can be prepared by any beef tongue recipes. They are especially good when allowed to cool in the stock, then skimmed, cut into dice and reheated in a Bechamel sauce, seasoned as for sweetbreads.

The tongues can also be made into a delicate salad.

Few people seem to know about these dainty calves' hearts.

LETTUCE IS REFRESHING NOW

At this season of the year we crave something green, and most green vegetables are expensive and not very good. Many overlook the possibilities of lettuce. It can be had for ten cents a pound at the market now, and can be prepared many ways.

Cream of Lettuce Soup—Put one-half pound lettuce through the food chopper. Heat a pint of milk in double boiler, thicken with one tablespoon flour rubbed smooth with one tablespoon butter. Add lettuce, season to taste with salt, pepper and paprika. Serve with croutons.

Greens—Cook lettuce alone or in combination with dandelions, mustard or young horseradish, or beans. Serve with hard-boiled eggs and sliced lemon.

Sandwiches—Lettuce has a wide range here. Use either white or Boston brown bread, the letutce spread with mayonnaise, cream cheese, cottage cheese, peanut butter. Or, lay a lettuce leaf between slices of bread with any meat paste or mashed baked beans.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING

When baking cake (layer, loaf or cup cakes), after greasing tins dust with flour and cake wont stick to tins. For fruit cake or gingerbread, line tins with white paper or waxed paper and grease; cake wont burn so easily. Never grease tins for pie.

When washing the face use a pair of old white chamoisette gloves; leaves face soft and velvety.

HOMEMADE CEDAR CHEST

Secure a pine box the size required and with as few cracks as possible.

Put hinges on lid and if there are any cracks fill same with putty or paper pulp.

Get a bottle of cedar oil at drug store and paint interior of box generously, so oil will soak well into the wood. When thoroughly dry, line with cambric (blue is best if the box is to be used for white articles) and stain or cover the outside to suit requirements.

NEAT WASH CLOTHS

For wash cloths, take your old gauze vests, cut size of ordinary wash cloths, take two thicknesses and sew together, then buttonhole or crochet a narrow lace on edge and you have a much softer cloth than you buy. These are especially nice for children.

Animal Jingles FOR LITTLE FOLKS

BY ALICE CREW GALE

What Are You Like?

Sit down and think a little bit
About this thing: Are you
A child who always says "I can't"
Of things you're asked to do?
And do you give up in despair,
And say, "It is no use"?
Because if you do all these things,
You are a little Goose!

OR

Maybe when your playmates come
To spend the day with you,
You quarrel with them with all your might
Before the day is through.
And in your rage, perhaps you scratch,
(I'd hate to think of that)
Because if you do this, you're like
A naughty little Cat.

RUNAWAY JUNE

BY GEORGE RANDOLPH CHESTER AND LILLIAN CHESTER

Copyright, 1915, by Serial Publication Corporation

"Didn't I tell you we'd find a clew?" exclaimed Iris Blethering and sobbed to relieve her feelings.

The little runaway bride was a picture which would have held the eye of any artist as she lay asleep in the inglenook with the flare of the flames dancing about her. The filmy negligee had slipped from one shoulder, and her pretty head, with the wavy hair rippling back from her brow, rested upon a tapering white arm. She suddenly awoke under Durban's gaze and drew the negligee in place.

"You've spoiled it!" cried Durban. "My Spirit of the Marsh! Come here!" He caught her hand and raised her.

He led her, bewildered, before the big canvas, where, crudely indicated by a few rough strokes of the crayon, the "Spirit of the Marsh" hovered over her domain.

"You must be my model!" he excitedly informed her. "I will pay you any price you wish. Here is some money in advance." And, jerking a wad of loose bills from his pocket, he thrust them in her hand. "Now stand here." He was so quick, so energetic, so fired with impatient fervor, that June had no time to think, much less protest. He half led, half pulled, her on the small dais which he hastily shoved into position. He caught up a sharp knife. It would not do. He ran to a workbasket in the alcove and brought back a long pair of shears and with one clip slit the filmy negligee at the shoulder.

Toward the Durban house there dashed two automobiles, the electric of Honoria Blye and the Moore family car, with the parents and husband of June and her bosom friend, Iris Blethering, and Bobbie.

Marie and Officer Dowd were suddenly interrupted in their leisurely stroll by a loud yelp, and a white and brown streak threw itself against Marie. Bouncer! He barked, he circled, he ran up the street a little way, ran back and darted off again.

"Miss Junie!" cried Marie, and, clutching Officer Dowd by the sleeve, she ran up the street after the dog.

Vivian Durban, her chin tilted, her face serene, her step deliberate and leisurely, came into her studio. Whatever she had been about to say froze on her lips as she saw the tableau before the canvas. The exquisitely molded runaway bride, draped like the Spirit of the Marsh, stood upon the dais.

"Oh!" The word was a shriek. Vivian Durban rushed down the length of the studio, towering with rage. "So that's it!" she cried. "That's why you brought this creature here!"

"Vivi!" protested the artist.

"Out of my house!" the woman screamed at June, her fingers working convulsively. "Out of my house this minute!" And she started toward the frightened June.

"Here!" Bennett Durban caught his wife's arm and held her back.

She stopped, and slowly her chin went up. She turned on him coldly.

"Either that creature leaves—goes instantly—or you go! This is my house!"

With a low cry June had darted across the studio, clasping her gauzy draperies about her as best she could. In the hall she turned to dart up the stairs, where her clothes had been left.

"Out of my house!" sternly called the woman, and as June stopped, bewildered, half crazed, the front door was opened by the smirking butler, whose furtive eye leered at her.

Faint, dazed, scarce knowing what she did, June, draped as the Spirit of the Marsh, slipped out of the house and into the street.

The artist and his wife went to the porch and watched the girl flutter away. The woman turned to Durban. "You're in love with her," she snapped.

Around the corner, two blocks away, tore the Moore car, with Ned Warner peering intently ahead. From the opposite direction came Honoria Blye's electric. In front of the Durban door stood a luxurious limousine with the black shades drawn. Gilbert Blye's.

As June dashed down the steps the door of the car opened and the white mustached Orin Cunningham sprang out and caught June by the wrist. Another figure sped from the Durban door, close upon the beautiful Spirit of the Marsh. It was Gilbert Blye, and he held outstretched a voluminous black cloak.

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

If Mixed With Sulphur It Darkens So Naturally Nobody Can Tell.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's treatment, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the messy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy" for about 50 cents a bottle. It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive; besides, prevents dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair.—Adv.

KEEP URIC ACID OUT OF JOINTS

Rheumatism is easier to avoid than to cure, states a well-known authority. We are advised to dress warmly; keep the feet dry; avoid exposure; eat less meat, but drink plenty of good water.

Rheumatism is a direct result of eating too much meat and other rich foods that produce uric acid which is absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine; the pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly cold weather the skin pores are closed thus forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate the uric acid which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grape and lemon juice, combined with lithia and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which helps overcome uric acid and is beneficial to your kidneys as well.

REV. MR. ALLEN'S BROTHER ORDAINED

Last of Rev. E. R. Allen's Four Sons Enters the Gospel Ministry.

Rev. J. J. Allen, pastor of the South Plainfield Baptist church, attended the ordination of his brother, Arthur V. Allen, at Easton, Pa., yesterday afternoon. The formal ordination exercises were held at 8 o'clock in the evening in the First Baptist church of that place, in the presence of a large congregation. The service was unique in the respect that Mr. Allen is the fourth son of Rev. E. R. Allen to be ordained to the Gospel ministry. Seldom has it occurred that four sons should follow their father thus in a life's work and he be permitted to preach the ordaining sermon on each occasion. The three brothers were present and took part in the program, the ordination prayer being made by Rev. J. J. Allen, of South Plainfield. This is the third time that Mr. Allen has performed a like service for his three brothers.

Mr. Allen passed a most creditable examination concerning his Christian experience, his call to the ministry, and views of Bible doctrine and the Council expressed itself unanimously in favor of the ordination.

SCHOOLS HOLD EXERCISES.

Simple exercises for Easter were observed in the various grammar schools of this city today, appropriate carols being sung during the opening exercises. The Franklin School was the only one that held a regular program.

SENDING LETTERS TO NEW YORKERS

Chamber of Commerce Conducting a Publicity Campaign to Get Residents.

DATA IS PRESENTED

Washington County Idea Comes up for Discussion at Monthly Meeting of Civic Body—Co-operation is Being Sought.

Discussion over the most approved methods of taking care of the disposal of garbage and ashes occupied the greater portion of the time at the monthly meeting of the Chamber of Commerce in the Babcock building headquarters last night. The committee on this subject has gathered very interesting statistics and within a short time it expects to be in a position to quote a figure for which the garbage and ashes in the city of Plainfield can be disposed of on a proper basis.

Co-operation with other cities has brought out the fact that this matter might be handled under contract at a much lower figure to the householders than is now expended by the latter for the carting of garbage and ashes. The committee has been in touch with a number of garbage and ash disposal contractors and the information obtained is of concrete value regarding the question.

The committee on the Washington county proposition is working up statistics as to the advantages and disadvantages of a new county in order that these points may be weighed one against the other to ascertain whether or not this is a desirable subject. The committee of one appointed to interview the various local concerns regarding any industry which local manufacturers feel might be advantageous to their interests reported progress and it is thought that where business may be considered in such a light the Chamber may try and develop either through some local person or firm or through some outside connection the establishment of an additional industry in Plainfield.

Paul H. Burns, acting as chairman of the publicity committee, reported that he had sent out 100 letters to desirable families in New York city renting places at between $2,400 and $3,000 per annum quoting various properties within the city limits for their consideration. In connection with his report, the Chamber decided to systematically send out 100 or more such letters each month and make up a pamphlet wherein real estate agents or property owners, for a small sum sufficient to cover the actual expense of the proposition, may list their various properties, giving a description of the same. It is hoped that at least 1,200 families within the next year may be advised of the value of living in Plainfield, in addition to the various places in which they may live. Co-operation with the real estate people is being brought about and it is felt that this will be a desirable adventure for the benefit of the city of Plainfield.

At the regular meeting last month, a communication received from the Trade Commissioner of Australia was ordered mimeographed and copies forwarded to the various manufacturing concerns in Plainfield. At last night's meeting, practically all the manufacturers had acknowledged this communication and in some cases it may be the means of producing a foreign trade which heretofore did not exist. A communication was received recently by the Chamber from the Chamber of Commerce of LaVont and copies of this letter will shortly be forwarded to the manufacturers in Plainfield, with the intention that the increasing business to the Mediterranean Sea countries may be shared by the Plainfield manufacturing concerns.

WILL GIVE PLAYS FOR BELGIAN BABY FUND

Well Known Amateurs in "Twelve Pound Look" and "Man of Destiny."

The presentation of Bernard Shaw's "The Man of Destiny" and J. M. Barrie's "The Twelve Pound Look," which are to be given by a group of leading amateurs at the Plainfield Theatre, nder the auspices of the Plainfield Belgian Relief Committee, has been definitely fixed for April 15. Tickets will be on sale at the theatre within a few days. The proceeds will be turned over to the local Relief Committee, with Mrs. Frederick Wallace as chairman, and employed for the purchase of milk supplies for the Belgian babies.

In "The Twelve Pound Look," one of Barrie's most successful and most charming plays, the principal part is taken by Mrs. Lemuel Serrell. She is the former wife of Sir Harry (Charles H. Lyman), and Miss Helen Joy takes the part of the present wife.

The committee considers itself especially fortunate in being able to present "The Man of Destiny." It is one of Bernard Shaw's favorite plays, and he is so particular in the matter of its production that he often refuses to allow it to be given by amateurs. Brown Rolston takes the part of the young Napoleon. Mrs. Maxwell Perkins, formerly Miss Louise Saunders, takes the part of the young Frenchwoman who steals the General's dispatches. The lieutenant whom she deceives is Walter Righter. Hugh Jarvis is the Italian innkeeper, whose inn is the scene of the entire action.

The rehearsals of both plays have been underway for the last two months. The coach is Dean W. Pratt, whose long and succesful theatrical career extends back to the days when, under the management of Augustin Daley, he played with Ada Rehan.

SERIOUS CHARGE AGAINST DOCTOR

Police Allege Chester Brown Practised Medicine Illegally in Plainfield.

On a warrant sworn out by Health Officer N. J. Randolph Chandler, charging him with the illegal practice of medicine in this city, Chester L. Brown, colored, alias "Dr." Brown, was taken into custody by Sergeant Maurice Higgins early this afternoon in a house located at 319 Plainfield avenue. The arrest culminated a search that has been in progress since March 22, when the warrant was sworn out before City Judge William G. DeMeza. Efforts to detect the alleged fraud since that time have proven futile, various ways and means having been devised by him to foil the carefully laid plans of the law.

Rumor that the man was in town reached the police this morning, and Sergeant Higgins and Patrolman Roy E. Martin went to the Plainfield avenue house. A search of the first and second floors proved fruitless, and going to the attic, Higgins found his man huddled up in a nook behind th chimney, and he was brought to police headquarters.

"Dr." Brown had evidently made every effort to disguise his features since "getting wind" of the health officer's charge. He had shaved off his "goatee," and Higgins at first was not sure that he had the right man, the "goatee" having been his main source of identification.

According to the local health authorities the colored "doctor" had lived here about a year prior to Mr. Chandler's discovery. It is alleged that he practiced medicine and surgery. The prisoner will be arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court tomorrow morning to plead to the complaints against him.

INTERESTING FINALE TO PUBLIC LECTURE COURSE

As a concluding number on the Board of Education's winter lecture program the talk delivered by B. R. Baumgardt in the Plainfield High School Auditorium last night proved a fitting finale, an appreciative audience being in attendance. The speaker dwelt on life in Norway, giving an excellent descriptive account of the traits of the natives and the peculiarities of the land and climate.

Mr. Baumgardt has a widespread reputation as a lecturer, and he fulfilled the expectations of his listeners last night. A number of stereopticon views added interest to the lecture.

RECREATION HALL FOR THE BOROUGH

Parent-Teacher Ass'n Decide to Erect Building for Social Activities.

PLANS ARE DISCUSSED

Mrs. W. O. Taylor is Appointed Chairman of School Fund Committee—Each Member to Earn a Dollar Before January, 1916.

The North Plainfield Parent-Teacher Association, held a special meeting yesterday afternoon in the Somerset School, and through a resolution, decided to proceed with a campaign for the erection of a recreation building in the borough. When this movement was first started several weeks ago a "gym" was suggested, but the association decided it better not to be bound to the term "gym," and so changed it to recreation hall, which has a broader interpretation. The resolution as adopted follows:

"Whereas, We, the members of the ParentTeacher Association of the Borough of North Plainfield, have accepted from the entertainment committee of this association the sum of $50 as a fund to be placed in a Plainfield bank toward the establishment of a recreation hall, said fund payable only to the order of the treasurer and countersigned by the secretary; therefore, be it resolved, that all moneys raised by this association for the recreation hall be held in trust by said treasurer, acting in behalf of the association, for a period of not less than ten years, unless the fund shall be used to build, erect and equip said recreation hall, or a part thereof, before the expiration of said ten years. Be it further resolved, that at the end of said ten year, such fund, by a two-thirds vote of the association, may be diverted to other purposes of common good to the community known as the borough of North Plainfield, and be it further resolved that said recreation hall be placed in the vicinity of the present Somerset School building.

Mrs. W. O. Taylor, secretary of the association, was appointed chairman of the school fund committee, which will have charge of the money turned in by the pupils under the plan introduced by Mrs. Taylor, that of earning a dollar before next January. Several other good plans have been suggested and will probably be carried out by members of the association. Supervising Principal D. Fred Aungst spoke regarding the matter at the meeting yesterday, and also suggested a plan for a social center in the school, which could be made when the remodeling is done next summer. His plan would undoubtedly be a good one if enough money cannot be raised for the erection of a separate structure."

FIRE IN M'VOY'S SHOP CAUSES $150 DAMAGE

Damage to the extent of $150 was caused by fire in the workshop of I. L. McVoy, attached to the rear of his home at 309 East Front street, at 6:31 last evening. The blaze was caused by Mr. McVoy accidentally throwing a lighted match on some inflammable material. It smouldered until after he had left the place, and later burst into flames that spread quickly.

A telephone alarm was sent to fire headquarters, but before the auto apparatus reached the scene box 15 was pulled by Walter I. Firstbrook. The blaze was put out with chemicals after twenty minutes' work. The loss is covered by insurance.

REV. NEHEMIAH BOYNTON TO SPEAK AT BANQUET

THIS BOY HEEDED GREELEY'S WORDS

MEETING OLD FRIENDS

Boy Who Left Plainfield Nearly a Score of Years Ago Has Had Many Experiences and His Home Coming is Welcomed.

For the first time since he left Plainfield nineteen years ago to try his luck in the promising West, Frank Overbaugh, a native of this city and known to hundreds of local people is back in town renewing acquaintances. He came East a few days ago for a business proposition in New York, and ran out to Plainfield to see relatives, as he expresed it, "for a few days," but the welcome extended him had been so effusive he will not return until the latter part of next week. Mr. Overbaugh is a brother to "Ten" Overbaugh, of Dewey Park, and Mrs. Amos Gray, who recently removed to Jersey City. The late Sergeant Overbaugh, who died three years ago, was another brother.

As Frank Overbaugh stands today, he is a typical example of what a boy with determination and grit can do. He was born on East Third street, near Richmond, and on attaining his majority, decided the opportunities for a young man were far better west of the Mississippi than they were in New Jersey. Accordingly, he shook the dust of Plainfield from his feet and started out to see if his "dope" was good. A glance at him now is all that is necessary to convince the beholder that he was right. Every inch of his odd six feet of stature savors of the prairies, the ranges, the limitless expanse of mountain and plain, and all that goes to make up the territory Horace Greeley advised the youth of his generation to go to.

GETS JAIL SENTENCE FOR STEALING A ROOSTER

Elizabeth, April 2.—John J. Coyle, of Westfield, got two months in the county jail when arraigned yesterday afternoon before Judge Connolly for stealing a rooster in Westfield. He admitted being implicated in the theft of a bicycle previously, but declared he was innocent on that occasion and that a companion had stolen the machine.

ACTIVITY ON GERMAN VESSELS IN N. Y. HARBOR

New York, Apr. 2.—With the Hamburg-American Line steamer "Pisa" busily stowing away coal, and the North German Lloyd Steamer "Barbarossa" similarly engaged, while ton after ton of supplies are said to be going aboard the other big units of the two German passenger fleets tied up in this port since the start of the war, it is persistently rumored that they will attempt a coup de main. The vessels are at liberty to sail any time they desire, so long as they do not break any of the tenets of neutrality, and would not be compelled to secure clearance papers until the very last minute.

According to one report the alliance of the Prinz Eitel Friedrich has been for the purpose of drawing all English and French cruisers in American waters to the mouth of Chesapeake Bay, thus enabling the vessels here to escape. This story carries the belief that the German converted sea raided will then intern. Another report has it that the vessels here and the one at NewPort News will make a simultaneous dash for the open sea.

PNEUMONIA FATAL TO RUDOLPH KAMPF, JR.

Following an illness of four days with pneumonia, Rudolph Kampf, Jr., died this morning at the home of his father, Rudolph Kampf, of 508 Watchung avenue. H was sixteen years old and was a student at the Franklin School. He was also a member of the Grace Episcopal choir and of the Sunday school. Beside his father, he is survived by one brother, Charles L. Kampf.

The funeral will be held at the father's home tomorrow afternoon at 5 o'clock, and burial will be made Sunday in the Lutheran cemetery, Brooklyn.

$9,000 INCREASE FOR THE SCHOOL

Board of Education's Tentative Budget Figure Placed at $236,610.

SUBJECT TO CHANGES

May Be Revised When Report From the State is Received—Councilmen Present at Public Hearing—Work During the Year.

Members of the Common Council on the Board of School Estimate met with the local Board of Education last night, when the tentative school budget figure was set at $236,610, an increase of $9,000 over last year. Archibald Cox, president of the Board of Education, presided at the meeting, and the following members of the Councilmanic Board of School Estimate were in attendance: Richard A. Claybrook, Thomas Hylan and Mayor Leighton Calkins. During the course of the evening Champlin L. Riley, A. B. Jones, Henry Crofut White and William M. Sandford spoke in favor of an appropriation for the recreation committee's work.

President Cox opened the meeting with an explanatory talk on the requisites of the State laws governing the local Board of Education and its system of accounting. He also described the changes in the laws.

In going over the various items in the budget the various committees of the Board explained in detail the items which came under their supervision, outlining the requirements during the past year, the average increase of items during past years, and succeeded in arriving at a tentative figure for the 1915 budget.

Superintendent of Schools Henry M. Maxson was in conference with the Board members and explained the results of work in the evening schools, summer schools, open air school, medical examinations, compulsory attendance, experiments and individual instruction. Benjamin Evans, superintendent of buildings, outlined briefly the work being done in his department, and supplemented the report of the committee on items in connection with the department, with detailed explanations of various amounts required for carrying on the work and keeping the school buildings up to the best possible physical standard.

When the report of the State School Tax Appropriation Committee has been received another meeting of the Board and Council will be held to determine the final figure.

MISS LEORA HENRY TO BE AN EASTER BRIDE

Miss Leora M. Henry, daughter of Mrs. G. W. Henry, of 140 Liberty street, will be married on Easter Monday at the First Baptist church at 4 p. m. to Lewis T. Matlack, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Matlack. The ceremony will be followed by a reception at the Park Club.

The bride will be given away by her brother, Luther C. Henry. Miss Marie Moore will attend her while Melville Roseberry will act as best man. Charles Kreger and James Stienson will be the ushers.

GOOD FRIDAY SERVICE.

The Union Good Friday service will be held in the Crescent Avenue church tonight, when pastors of the different city churches will speak on "The Seven Words from the Cross." Among those who will have a part in the service will be Rev. Evarts C. Conover, Rev. Dr. Birney S. Hudson, Rev. C. L. Goodrich, Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, Rev. C. E. Herring and Rev. J. Y. Broek. There will be appropriate music. The public is invited.

HOPE CHAPEL SERVICES.

A large congregation was again in attendance last evening at the evangelistic services being held at Hope chapel, Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel, being the speaker. The services this evening will be in charge of Rev. Frederic L. Greene, pastor of the chapel, and will be as a preparatory service to the communion service to be held Sunday at the hour of the evening service.

DELGYER MOVES.

Peter Delgyer, the jeweler, has moved from Park avenue to his new and more up-to-date store at 219 West Front street. KIELY NAMED AS STATE PRESIDENT

Local Police Chief Elected to Lead Departments Heads for Ensuing Year.

Chief Patrick S. Kiely, of the local police force, was elected president of the New Jersey Police Chiefs' Association at a meeting held in Newark yesterday. The local department head is also vice-president of the International Police Chiefs' Association and has been actively identified with both organizations for many years. The meeting in Newark was the annual one and other officers were named as follows: Chief William O'Neill, of Orange, secretary, and Chief Michael O'Connell, of New Brunswick, treasurer.

Since becoming a member of the State Association Chief Kiely has been interested in the promotion of each phase of department work over which the association has a direct influence and he has done much to promote various improvements. The purpose of the body is to hold periodical meetings for the discussion of police topics and to formulate plans for the benefit of departments represented. Better municipal policing has been brought about in many instances through the influence of the association and the individual suggestions offered by the chiefs often mature into sweeping changes in departments.

At various times Chief Kiely has appeared before the body as a speaker and on several occasions has outlined improvements which have been tried and proven adaptable to the needs of the Plainfield force. His veteran connection with the organization and his knowledge of police affairs makes Chief Kiely a well qualified leader and his selection was an unusually popular one among his colleagues.

MRS. M. A. EVERETT DIES IN 93RD YEAR

One of the Borough's Oldest Residents Passed Away Last Night.

Mrs. Mary Ann Everett, widow of Samuel Everett, died shortly before midnight last night at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Mary E. Bosterli, of Fairview avenue. A fall which she sustained several weeks ago, coupled with her extreme age, was the cause of death.

Mrs. Everett was one of the oldest residents of the borough having been born in Hunterdon county ninety-three years ago. For the past forty-two years she had made her home with Mrs. Bosterli and she had a circle of acquaintances that extended throughout Plainfield and vicinity. She was possessed of a sweet Christian character and was greatly beloved by all who knew her. Despite the fact that she was approaching the century mark she had retained all her faculties and it was a distinct pleasure to be in her company. She was an especial favorite of the children and all in the neighborhood realize that her death has taken a sympathizer and friend away. Mrs. Everett had retained her membership with the Lutheran church at Somerville, where she lived when a young woman, but as long as she was able attended service at either the First Baptist church or Warren chapel.

Beside Mrs. Bolsterli, Mrs. Everett is survived by two other daughters, Mrs. Sarah E. Coddington, of Plainfield, and Mrs. Anna Campbell, of Newark; also three sons, Jacob A., of Orange; Samuel C., of Plainfield, and William A. Everett, of Santa Barbara, Cal. The last named was apprised of his mother's illness and reached her bedside before death occurred. Mrs. Everett in addition leaves two brothers, John J. Apgar, of Lebanon, and Tunis Apgar, of Bath, Ohio, twenty-two grandchildren and nineteen great grandchildren.

The funeral will be held at Mrs. Bosterli's home, 78 Fairview avenue, Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock and burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

BOY COLLIDES WITH AUTO.

John Marder, the 11-year-old son of Walter Marder, of Belvidere avenue, was taken to uhlenberg Hospital at noon today suffering from slight injuries received in an automobile accident on South avenue. The boy had been roller skating, and dodged from behind a wagon directly into a car owned by Stewart Hollis, of New York. He was knocked to the roadway, sustaining a slight scalp wound and an abrasion of the forehead. He was doing well this afternoon and will probably be able to return home tomorrow.

HEAR AUSTRIA IS SEEKING PEACE

Petrograd Dispatch Says Effort is Being Made to Call Off Russians.

ANOTHER BOAT IS SUNK

Russians Continue Advance in Carpathians and Austro-German Army is Preparing Cracow for a Siege—Austrian Steamer Blown up.

London, April 2.—A despatch from Petrograd quotes Russky Slovoe to the effect that Austria has made overtures through a neutral Swiss channel to effect a peace with Russia separate from Germany. Russia's answer is said to have been delivered that any peace terms must be satisfactory to France and England, and must include the withdrawal of all Austrian troops fighting in France and Belgium.

The British steamer "Southpoint," which was first reported to have been lost in a storm off the Portuguese coast, is now known to have been torpedoed by the German submarine U-28 sixty miles off Cape Finisterre. The crew was landed yesterday at London.

Four other vessels have fallen victims to the German submarines in the last twenty-four hours. Three trawlers from the Tyne were overhauled by the submarine U-10, forty miles off the Tyne last night, and blown up, after the crews had been warned to take to the small boats. The crews land without loss. From Amsterdam a despatch states that a Norwegian barque was sunk in the North Sea yesterday and that the crew was landed at the Hook of Holland this morning by a Norwegian steamer.

Lausanne, Switzerland, April 2.—Halil Bey, president of the Turkish Council of State, who went to Berlin with Djavid Bey, the Sultan's minister of finance, will join the latter in Geneva on Monday. The report that the two Turkish statesmen will engage in peace pour parlers persists, although Djavid Bey is silent on the subject. Djavid Bey is known to have consulted an eminent Swiss financier and jurist in Lausanne. He will return to Berlin the first part of next week, where he expects to complete arrangements for a loan to the Sultan from Germany of 8,000,000 pounds. In an interview today he stated that General Von der Goltz, the German military advised of the Sultan, left Constantinople recently because his presence was no longer of value to Turkey from either a naval or a military point of view. The Krupp gun workers at Essen have a sufficient supply of copper to last them six months, declared Djavid Bey.

Petrograd, April 2.—The Russians are continuing their advance in the Carpathians, according to the official statement given out this morning. The Austrians are withdrawing troops from Bukowina and transferring them to the Beskid Mountains in the Carpathians.

Amsterdam, April 2.—Despatches from Prague state that the Austro-German force in Cracow is preparing for a siege. Preparations are also being made for street fighting in case the Russians effect an entrance into the city. Barricades have been erected in the streets and bags of sand piled in the doors and windows of public buildings.

The war correspondent of one of the largest newspapers of the United States was turned back yesterday by the Germans in his effort to get within the Kaiser's line, with the information that he only escaped punishment because Germany wants to avoid any conflict with the United States. He crossed the frontier last Saturday from Holland and was working his way westward. He succeeded in getting as far as Ostend where he was arrested and taken to the Dutch frontier, after being held twenty-four hours. The German officer who escorted him to the frontier seemed to regard his release as an act of extraordinary clemency.

Paris, April 2.—An Austrian steamer loaded with ammunition was blown up by a mine on the Danube river last night, says a news agency despatch from Nish, the present capital of Servia. Servian artillery also bombarded the steamer, which was set on fire and sunk.

The War Office gave out the following this afternoon:

"There is nothing important to add to the communique of last night. In the Heights to the south of Peronne, near Dompierre, we destroyed with a mine several German trenches. In the Argonne(at Bagatelle, an attempted German attack was checked. French and Belgium aviators yesterday threw thirty bombs

MRS. GEO. V. VANDERVEER SUSTAINS SEVERE INJURY

Mrs. George V. Vanderveer, of Prospect avenue, is confined to her bed as a result of an accident on Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. Vanderveer had planned to spend the afternoon out, and as she was going down the front steps of her home a rotten board of one of the steps gave way, and her foot went through the opening. She was extricated by Daniel Moody, who happened to be passing on his bicycle. Miss Zella Kelly, of New Market, also happened along, and she assisted Mrs. Vanderveer into her home. Mrs. Vanderveer suffered intense pain, and it was feared her limb had been broken, but Dr. M. J. Whitford, who was immediately summoned, announced, after thorough examination, that no bones had been broken.

Mrs. Vanderveer continues to experience pain, and, in addition, she is suffering from chills and fever.

Mrs. Vanderveer is president of the Parent-Teacher Asociation, and she had planned to entertain the teachers of the schools at a luncheon yesterday. That she was unable to do this was a keen disappointment to her.

Contractor Robert Fern, of Whittier avenue, has been awarded the contract of repainting the residence of W. K. Hartpence, on New Market road.

Miss Elizabeth Smalley, of Park avenue, Plainfield, who has many friends in the borough and New Market, is stopping with Mrs. R. F. Bogardus, of New Market road.

Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Scandell, of Washington avenue, are entertaining Miss Olga Anderson, of Brooklyn, over the week-end.

W. C. O'Neill, teacher of the Seventh grade in the Whittier School, is spending his Easter vacation at his home at Stroudsburg, Pa.

Frank Rinehart, who has been suffering with a severe cold for the past six weeks, is greatly improved.

John H. Rinehart, of Penfield place, who has been suffering with a heavy cold and grip for some weeks past, shows a slight improvement.

Michael Burke, who works at the Hall Press Works, is moving back to Dewey Park, after a residence of several years in Plainfield. The household effects are being moved by Isaac V. Smalley.

The monthly meeting of the Board of Education will be held in the Lincoln School Tuesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Victorson, of First street, entertained relatives from out of town over Sunday.

Mrs. John Logan, of Washington avenue, is seriously ill with bronchitis.

The monthly meeting of the Mayor and Common Council will be held in the Borough Hall, Monday evening.

Paul Kratzel closed a deal yesterday in which he sold his house on Front street, now tenanted by Martin Bowman, of Rock avenue, to Dr. E. S. Jamison, of Bloomsbury, a former pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church. Dr. Jamison buys for investment.

Principal Guy H. Rentschler, of the local schools, departed last evening for Reading, where he will remain over Easter with a sister.

Miss Elizabeth Althoen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Althoen, of Mountainview terrace, has returned from Philadelphia, where she spent several weeks with an aunt.

William Herlich and Charles Smalley, who have both been ill, are recuperating at Allentown, Pa. They expect to be gone a week.

Herbert Taylor and family, who have been making Mrs. Taylor's mother, Mrs. Eliza Waglow, a lengthy visit, have returned to their home in Philadelphia.

Mrs. George Coriell, Jr., will entertain the Farther Lights Missionary Society tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

POOL CONTEST.

In a pool contest in Richter's last evening for the championship of the West End, Paul Rabouin defeated John P. Hill, ten games to six.

BASEBALL GAME.

Scout Troop No. 1 and Scout Troop No. 2 will play a game of baseball on Maurer Oval tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. Scout Commissioner Edward J. Dusel will umpire the game.

James Ryan, of First street, who has been boarding for the past two months at Arlington, where he holds a responsible position with the American Chemical Company, has returned to the borough and is now commuting to his work.

Mrs. John Huff, of North avenue, is entertaining an aunt from Oyster Bay.

Edward Gray, Jr., of First street, entertained some friends the for part of the week at a pinochle and euchre party.

Mrs. George Meyers, of Prospect avenue, visited relatives at Raritan yeserday.

ANNA RYNO IMPROVED.

Anna May Ryno, the nine-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Ryno, of Centre street, who has been a sufferer from hip trouble, is greatly improved. The little girl is now able to get out of doors and enjoy the fresh air and sunshine.

Charles B. Lake, of Jersey City, spent last night in the borough at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Voorhees, of Lincoln avenue, where his wife and child are visiting.

South Plainfield.

A farwell party was given to Mr. and Mrs. William Schomp at their home on Front street Wednesday evening. Mr. Schomp, who is a signalman in the employ of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, has resigned his position, having purchased an established grocery business in Rayville, N. J., where he expects to live. The evening was enjoyed with music, singing and other amusements, after which refreshments were served. Those present were as follows: Mr. and Mrs. Charles Klinger and children, Charles and Hazel, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Brantingham, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Randolph, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Sexton, Mr. and Mrs. John Gordon and daughter, Florence, Mrs. William Everhardt, Miss Laura Teeple, Miss Myrtle Randolph, Miss Stella Buchanan, of Rayville.

On the 10:30 trip Tuesday night, one of the buses of the Plainfield Transit Company met with an accident, the stearing gear breaking in front of Washington Hall. No one was injured. The bus was repaired yesterday afternoon and is now running again.

Robert Ritter has moved into his new home on Brookside avenue, which was recently completed.

The weekly services in the Sacred Heart church will be held tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock. After "The Stations of the Cross," benediction will be held.

John Thornton is now able to be about after being injured in an automobile accident last Saturday.

Rev. J. J. Allen and wife are entertaining out-of-town friends.

Easter vacation will start in the public school today. The school will be closed until April 12.

Watchung.

Rev. D. C. M. Anderson, of Plainfield, will conduct the Good Friday service at the Mary E. Wilson Memorial Union church tonight.

Farmers were called out yesterday to extinguish a forest fire which was found burning near Bonnie Burn.

Roscoe W. DeBaun, extension specialist in vegetable growing, gave an interesting lecture on "House and Market Gardening" in the Watchung School Wednesday night. This was the second of a series of free lectures under the auspices of the Parent-Teacher Association.

The local anti-suffragists will hold a mass meeting Friday night, April 9, when Mr. Matthews of the Equal Suffrage League, of Plainfield, will speak.

Easter services will be held in the Mary E. Wilson Memorial Union church Sunday morning at 10.45 o'clock when Mebane Ramsey will preach. There will be a special program in the afternoon instead of the regular Sunday-school session and a song service in the evening at 7:45 o'clock, after which Mr. Ramsey will preach.

The Parent-Teacher Association will hold its regular meeting April 8 when W. D. Mogey will make an address.

Mrs. Dorothea M. Jensen and family have returned to the farm which they recently purchased at Lagrangeville, N. Y.

Miss Gladys M. Sullivan entertained the members of the Mu Eta Society of the North Plainfield High School at her home last evening. Among those present were the Misses Edith Dailey, Bertha Keller, Madeline Blair, Marielle Dunham, Elsie Debele and Marion Avery.

Miss Elsie F. Schmidt, a teacher in the Peapack schools, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Schmidt, over the Easter holidays.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Burd are spending their Easter vacation in Quakertown.

Miss Clara I. Harris, teacher in the Watchung schools, is spending the week-end in Pottersville.

The Messrs. Clifford Kellogg and Maxwell Underhill entertained twenty of their friends in the "mill" last evening. The evening was spent in playing games and dancing. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Clarence E. Kellogg and Mrs. George W. Schmidt.

The annual meeting of the Watchung Sunday School Association was held last evening in Wilson chapel. The reports of the committees and officers showed that the school was in excellent condition and larger than ever before. The following officers were elected: President, Edwin L. Bonney; vice-president, Ephriam S. Ackor; treasurer, George W. Winans; assistant treasurer, Miss Sadie H. Bodenheimer; secretary, John Mobus; assistant secretary, Douglas W. Demler; librarian, J. Le Roy Herrmann; organist, Charles E. Spier; trustee for one term, Edwin L. Boney.

Miss Irene Eichentille has returned home from New York, where she attended the funeral of her sister, who died suddenly with appendicitis.

A successful sale was held yesterday, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Mary E. Wilson Memorial Union church, at the home of Mrs. William N. Demler, of Valley road. Aprons, cake, candy and flowers were attractively arranged on booths and sold rapidly.

H. E. Hicks, of 604 East Second street, has removed to 600 East Second street.

Miss Gertrude R. Conover, of Jackson avenue, the borough, left today for Newburgh, N. Y., where she will spend her Easter vacation.

"NEW" DIGNITY OF FRENCH.

During eight months the French armies, assisted by only a small army of Englishmen, have checked the progress of the great German military "machine' and utterly frustrated the German plan of a rapid conquest of France. Therefore the Kansas City Star seriously inquires if it can be possible that French character is "changing," and quotes an American correspondent at the front as saying:

The nations who have wilfully imagined the French to be a gesticulating, laughing, crying, kissing, frog-eating set of people will have to readjust their views. Their big attitude toward the biggest war of all time commands our reverence—and apologies.

The real truth, of course, is not that the French have "changed," but that the people of other nations have grown wiser, no longer being inclined to base their knowledge of French character upon the half-baked impressions of hurried and prejudiced tourists or upon the ugly side of the life of gay and brilliant Paris so tirelessly depicted by decadent French novelists. Under present circumstances the narrow view of the insular English is being rapidly transformed and the uninformed American view is being correspondingly broadened.

After all, is is an unquestioned fact—though it seems to have been quite forgotten—that the Frenchmen now successfully blocking the wheels of the German war-machine are the grandsons of the victorious followers of the great Napoleon.

The Legislative appropriations committee, according to unofficial reports, have their hands full. It is said that $10,000,000 has been asked for by the various state departments, and the estimated revenue for next year is about $7,200,000. It is said that the committee, by careful paring, has brought the proposed appropriation bill to within the amount that will be available. If this is true and economy and intelligence in the handling and distribution of funds is shown during the next year, the deficit which is now staring the authorities in the face will be entirely wiped out. It is said that the result has been reached without sacrificing any good business principles, but by eliminating all proposed new work. Certainly let us hope that the proposed bonding of the State, or a State tax, will not be necessary.

The subject of public parks is being agitated in Perth Amboy. The Evening News of that city is carrying on a campaign against a proposed municipal lighting plant, which it says is not half so much needed as are the parks. The question is one which also should have more attention in Plainfield. One by one the available tracts here are being taken up by real estate promoters, and the people of Plainfield will wake up some day to a realization of the fact that breathing spaces are much needed. Even if the taxes are soaring, the City Council should seriously consider the purchase of land that could be used for park purposes, holding it if necessary until money is available to do the actual work of constructing the recreation center. This is one of the most important things that can be done for the comfort of future generations.

The Republican State Committee in its press sheet for this week calls attention to the fact that the Republicans are carrying out their campaign pledges. On the home rule question it says that "the Senate has passed the Hutchinson amendment." The inference is left that the party is entitled to the credit for its passage. This is amusing for just one Republican, Mr. Hutchinson, voted for the measure, ten Democratic votes having put it through the Senate.

"Movie" has become a pretty generally recognized word and it will probably be found in new editions of the dictionary. When a movie magazine asked 1,000 newspaper editors whether it should be considered pure English, 511 voted in the affirmative and 222 in the negative.

Building Inspector T. O. Doane, chief of the Plainfield Fire Department, has prepared the contributed editorial for tomorrow. In it he tells why he thinks that the building ordinance should be changed so that no more shingle roofs can be placed on houses in the city.

The baby saving show is open in the Stirling building on Park avenue. It is well worth visiting, and should do untold good during the month that the various exhibits will be shown.

LENTEN MUSICALE ENJOYED BY MANY

First Baptist Church Choir Sing "The Story of the Cross."

"The Story of the Cross," by Dudley Buck, together with other appropriate numbers, was the feature at the Lenten musical service given by the quartet and chorus choir at the First Baptist church last night, under the direction of Howard M. Case, organist and choirmaster. It was an impressive service throughout, and was enjoyed by a congregation that filled the large auditorium. The assisting artists were Miss Florence Wohlfert, violinist, and Miss Mildred Dilling, harpist.

The program opened with the selection, "Andante Religioso," Gounod, by violin, harp and organ, which was followed by the singing of "By Babylon's Wave" by the chorus. As an interlude, Miss Dilling rendered the "Prelude in C Minor," by Chopin, which was an appropriate introduction to the next selection from "Penitence, Pardon and Peace," by Maunder, in which William Holmes, baritone, and Mrs. Edith Hallett-Frank, soprano, and Miss Leontine de Ahna, contralto, had beautiful solo parts. After the Scripture lesson by Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong, Miss Dilling and Miss Wohlfert rendered "Le Cygne," by Saint-Sans. Following prayer by Dr. Strong and the singing of the hymn, "When I Survey the Wondrous Cross," by the congregation, the rest of the program was devoted to the singing of "The Story of the Cross."

This beautiful work by Dudley Buck was given in a faultless manner by soloists and chorus, deeply impressing the worshippers present. The words tell impressively "The Story of the Cross," and the music is unusually appropriate from the time that the chief priests and elders took counsel together against Jesus until the Crucifixion at Calvary. The work of Mrs. Frank, Miss de Ahna, Mr. Holmes and George Smith, the tenor, left nothing to be desired. In the duet and quartet numbers the voices blended in perfect harmony, while the sweetness and wide range of the individual voices were heard to the best advantage in the solo numbers. The accompaniment of harp and violin added greatly to the enjoyment of the musical. The chorus, as usual, evidenced the careful training and painstaking efforts of Mr. Case, as well as the singers, and altogether it was believed by many to be the best work yet given by the choir. The concluding number, "Meditation," by Mietzke, was given by the violin, harp and organ.

HOLY CROSS CHOIR GIVES LENTEN CANTATA

The Lenten cantata "Olivet to Calvary" was given by the vested choir of Holy Cross church last night assisted by a number of voices from the Grace church choir. This beautiful work was given a perfect rendition and was thoroughly enjoyed by an unusually large congregation. The musical service was in charge of Charles Davis, organist and choirmaster, and the results showed careful training on his part as well as conscientious effort on the part of the choir.

The solo parts were taken by W. J. R. Thiers, tenor, and B. F. Tallamy, bass, and their singing was a feature of the service which was greatly appreciated. The solo numbers as well as the selections by the combined choirs were given with true expression, the interpretation showing familiarity with the impressive cantata. Rev. Charles H. Kues, rector of the church, was in charge of the service.

HEEDED GREELEY'S WORDS

In addition, he carries the prosperous look that indicates the man who has made good through his own efforts.

Frank Overbaugh now claims Aberdeen, S. D., as his legal residence. He is the owner of the "O. B." ranch, near that city, at present rented to a cattle raiser, and is also coneced with the Burger Fruit Company, a big concern, which controls 2,000 acres of fine fruit land in Southern Colorado. It is one of the largest firms of the kind in the country, handling citrous fruits, purchased in carload lots in California, as well as its own products, and shipping them throughout the United States and Canada. When Mr. Overbaugh first went West he got all the hard knocks that was coming to him, but that only made him all the more determined to show the Westerners that New Jersey can produce the material that, with the proper environment, can be highly developed. He rode the ranges as a cowpuncher for seven years, took up a homestead claim, dipped into the theatrical game, scouted around Alaska for a chance to invest, and did many other things before he got to the stage where he could laugh at adversity. At the time his brother Herbert died he was in the wilds of Northwest Canada, and it was until Northwest Canada, and it was not unof the popular sergeant's death.

"Yes, sir, there is opportunity in the West today," Mr. Overbaugh said who thinks dollars are to be picked off "but it won't come to you any more than it did when I first hit the big country. You have to go after it, and you have to keep going no matter how many bumps and knocks you get. I was in the painting trade when I was here, and I decided that something was coming to me the other side of the Misisippi, and I started out without any definite idea as to where and when I could find it. Anybody who thinks I got as far as I have without hustling has another guess. The West needs young men, but only the aggressive kind. The fellow til many months later that he learned bushes out there had better stay right home and dream on, otherwise the awakening will provide a job for the undertaker."

Mr. Overbaugh added that he never came back to Plainfield after going away because he had interests that needed looking after, and he believed in staying right on th job. His visit, so far, has been filled with so many surprises and cordiality from friends, that he has extended it several times. He is going back next week, but he will return about Christmas to talk things over with the old schoolmates and acquaintances he has been unable to run across this time. Mr. Overbaugh has been making his headquarters at the Queen City Hotel, known to him at the time he went away as the old City Hotel, and he has been holding informal receptions there every day.

TWO AMERICAN CITIZENS ARE IN JAIL IN MEXICO

Washington, April 2—Two American citizens were reported today to be languishing in Mexican jails, prisoners of Villa and Carranza, and the State Department took immediate steps to ascertain the facts in the case. James M. Daugherty, manager of the Soledad estate, near Pueblo, was placed under arrest by Carranzistas and is now in prison in Vera Cruz, charged with having falsified his accounts. Leonard Worcester, an American mining expert, was arrested in Chichuhua on orders by General Villa, and is in jail on the ground that he made misleading reports in the assay of certain ores.

With the arrival of the Olympia at Vera Cruz the Navy Department announced today that the Battleships Delaware will leave Mexican waters and return to Hampton Roads for target practice with the fleet. The Olympia, the department is convinced, will be sufficient to care for the situation.

P. A. F. C. WILL HOLD A DANCE ON APRIL 9

The installation of officers of the P. A. F. C., Inc., which was to take place at the weekly meeting held last night at the club rooms, on South Second street, was postponed for a week. A dance will be held on Friday, April 9, in the Knights of Pythias Hall, on West Front street, and it was thought best not to change officers until after this affair.

Arrangements were completed for the dance at last night's meeting and it will undoubtedly prove a big success. At that time the trophies offered for the billiard tournament, which has just closed, will be presented. James Macree, the winner, will receive a handsome cup and solid gold medal and William Carmichael will get a silver medal as runner-up.

BAD COINS CIRCULATED.

The prevalence of counterfeit quarters and half-dollars has been noted in Plainfield during the past two weeks and merchants are cautioned to be on the lookout for coins of this denomination. The bogus pieces are almost an exact duplicate of the genuine articles and the only way to detect the "fake" is to sound them, the "ring" being missing in the counterfeits.

RECORD ATTENDANCE AT BABY SAVING SHOW

Interesting Exhibit Attracts Many People to the Stirling Building.

There was an almost record-breaking attendance yesterday at the "Baby Saving Show" being held in the Sterling Building on Park avenue, after Mayor Leighton Calkins formally opened the exhibit with a short address. The attendance throughout the afternoon was at the rate of about 200 an hour and the store was crowded to its capacity. This was gratifying to the committee and it is hoped that the future attendance will be equally as good, if not larger, especially in the evenings.

The "Baby Saving Show" is a unique exhibit devoted entirely to the welfare of the youngest members of the community set forth in pictures, placards, object lessons and electrical displays designed to convey their messages in the simplest and strongest manner possible. The committee on literature has secured a large amount of booklets and pamphlets which are being distributed at the show to those who inquire for them.

The Visiting Nurse Association also has an exhibit setting forth their activities in this locality, which are in line with the interests of the show. Tickets and hand bills are being distributed, and placards are being posted about the city by the committee on publicity. Admission to the show is free to all from 2 to 10 p. m.

HARRY BALDWIN'S FUNERAL.

The funeral of Harry Baldwin, whose death occurred yesterday morning after a long illness, will be held Sunday afternoon at 2:15 at his late home, 294 Somerset street. The services will be in charge of Rev. J. Y. Broek and burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

EASTER DANCE.

The Easter dance of the Park Club will be held on Thursday, April 8.

A SPECIAL PRODUCTION.

By a special arrangement with the Essanay Company, Proctor's theatre will present tomorrow one of the latest and costliest picture productions released this month. It is in three reels and features Francis X. Bushman and Edna Mayo in the dramatic vehicle "Stars Their Courses Change." Mr. Bushman has always been a great favorite with Proctor audiences and he is seen at his best in this film.

LITTLE GIRLS' FUNERAL.

The funeral of Margaret Schwarz, the five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Schwarz, of West Fifth street, who died in Muhlenberg hospital, will be held in the Monroe Avenue Methodist church Sunday afternoon at 1:30. It will be conducted by Rev. Dr. B. F. Randolph and burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

MORE GRASS FIRES.

The fire department responded to the following calls this morning: Carlton avenue, fire in underbrush grass; Union and Rose streets, several grass fire; Central avenue, near Elizabeth street, grass fire and blaze in old chestnut tree. After 1:00 this afternoon No. 3 company laid seven lengths of hose to fight a bad grass fire on Monroe avenue.

GOING TO IRELAND.

Miss Margaret Fitzmorris, of 729 West Third street, left yesterday for Boston, where she will spend today visiting relatives previous to her departure for Europe. Miss Fitzmorris will sail tomorrow on the Cunard Liner Lusitania for an indefinite stay at her former home, Ireland.

DEATH OF AN INFANT.

Walter Buianowgki, the four-weeks son of Mr. and Mrs. George Buianowgki, of Watchung avenue, died last night. The funeral will be held at the parents' home, and burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

THE EMPTY TOMB.

Its Story and Significance Told In Easter Sermon.

It is Friday afternoon. With "It is finished" his head drops upon his breast, and the hopes of his disciples are shattered. Pilate is glad to find some balm for his uneasy conscience by granting the request of the rich friend, Joseph of Arimathea, for the body. Nicodemus, scholarly, timid and shrinking, comes into the light again, joining in the embalming, because he cannot forget the evening's talk with the great Teacher. The tomb is sealed. He is alone, save for his watching enemies. The world's hopes are dead. In him they had flamed high; now they are ashes. They who loved him cherish the past, but have no future. The long sorrowful Sabbath day at last is waning; the first day is dawning.

Through the mists of the morning, hands laden with the treasures of the heart, while silver light of star and golden gleam of sun mingle, the Marys sadly seek the tomb, hoping to perform the last service of loving devotion. They approach with timidity, fear, awe, wonder.

Lo, the stone is rolled back! One sits upon it clothed in light. He has hastened from heaven to anticipate their coming and to change their sorrow into song by the announcement, "He is not here; he is risen." The women hasten to tell his disciples. Hope, the last spark of which had gone out, is kindled again in human hearts. Forty day he lingers on the earth until the most skeptical cries, "My Lord and my God!" Every disciple becomes a herald of his resurrection. They seal their testimony with their blood.

Only the fact of Christ's resurrection can explain the revived hopes of his despondent followers. Only a personality that lives can rule the world as Christ rules it today. Every believer may share this Easter morning the resurrection hope as it sends the sunlight of heaven into every darkened heart and into every open grave, revealing anew, "He is not here; he is risen."

Every tomb is now empty. May you who stand, in fact or in imagination, by the grave of loved ones today catch the vision and hear the voice, "He is not here; he is risen."

Death is not a wall, but a door into life. As evening promises morning, as winter spring, as the seed flowers, so death promises life.—Rev. Dr. George W. Shelton, Pittsburgh.

The Word Easter.

Easter to the French is known as Paques; to the Scotch, Pasch; the Danes, Paaske, and the Dutch, Paschen. St. Paul calls Christ 'our Pasch.' The English name is derived from that of the old German or Saxon goddess of spring, Ostera or Eastre, whose festival occurred about the same time of the year as the celebration of Easter. When the early missionaries went to Britain they found the people worshiping this goddess, to whom the month of April, which they called Easturmonath, was dedicated. The missionaries substituted the Christian feast for the old heathen one, but they allowed the people to give it the name of their goddess, and so the word Easter came to be used.

It was the active members of the Young Women's Hebrew Association that gave a dance in Debele's Hall, on Wednesday night, and not the Junior Y. W. H. A., as announced.

There will be no swimming class at the High School Monday because of the Easter vacation.

The Prize Egg

An Easter Story

THE shops all along the main street were full of Easter suggestions. One confectioner's window was entirely filled with chocolate covered eggs of all sizes, and a large placard announced:

"Each egg in this window contains a valuable and unique prize. All eggs are the same price, 25 cents. Each egg will open on Easter morning."

Passersby paused to look and read the notice, and not a few entered the shop to purchase.

Presently a winsome looking girl and a very tall young man paused in front of the window. He looked inquiringly at her, and she smiled; then they went in, coming out again in a few minutes carrying a small box.

That evening at the girl's home they opened the package and examined the egg.

"Shall we break it," she questioned, "or wait until Easter and see what happens?"

"Oh, let's wait!" he answered. "I don't suppose it will have anything worth while inside, and it may not even open, though of course that could be chemically arranged."

The egg was again put in its box and laid away where the girl promised it would remain until the arrival of the man on Easter morning.

Easter dawned fair and beautiful, and while it was quite early the man arrived to find the girl anxiously awaiting him.

They opened the box with care and gently laid the egg on the table. The surface of chocolate was as smooth as when purchased.

For half an hour they watched it closely and were about to give up when the girl noticed a faint crack across the top. Very slowly it spread—in fact, almost imperceptibly—until, quite without realizing how it happened or when, the two halves of the egg lay on the table and between them a small object wrapped in tissue paper. Very gingerly she tore off the paper and cried in disgust when she saw only a dirty old silver dollar.

"Still," he exclaimed practically, "a dollar is a dollar, no matter how old it is." He took it from her and looked at it closely, feeling it all over, when the eagle opened, and the face of a woman smiled up at him.

"Oh!" Suddenly he raised it to his lips, kissing it passionately.

The girl's expression instantly changed from sweet winsomeness to a jealous fury, and she snatched the dollar from him.

"How dare you kiss that woman when you say you love me!" She fairly hissed the words, and her angry eyes devoured the lovely features of the almost faded picture.

He took it gently from her, holding it tenderly in his hand, while he put his arm around her, and there was wonder in his voice when he spoke.

"Strange and improbable as it seems, that is my mother's photograph."

"How curious!" she murmured from his shoulder.

"You see how thin and worn the dollar is," he continued. "That is because my father carried it for ten years, and then one day absentmindedly he spent it. He never knew where or how, but it was gone, and he was never able to find a trace of it, though I don't believe he has ever given up trying. * * * I think mother felt it until she saw how it worried father; then she made light of it by saying she wondered whose husband was carrying her picture now. * * * How glad they will be!" He raised the eagle to look once more into the beautiful tender eyes that, so the girl thought at the moment, were exactly like his.

"I thought I would be afraid of her," the girl said slowly, "but I won't be unless she has changed. Has she?"

"Only to become more beautiful. This was taken before I was born. * * * You will change that way some day, dear, and I shall watch you as my father watched her. You do love me. I know it now," he said with conviction, "for you were jealous when I kissed the picture, and you couldn't be unless you cared."

Once more she gazed upon the picture; then, closing the dollar, she slipped it into his vest pocket.

"Take it to her, dear,"—she hesitated—"and tell her it came out of a prize egg, but that a girl who hopes some day to be loved as much as she is sends it, and"—

"Then," he interrupted, "you're going to say yes today?"

"I'm still in doubt about lots of things, but I do love you, and I want a beautiful mother to love me, and"—

"You darling!" He lifted her off her feet for a second and crushed her to him.

As he put her down they both noticed the egg had closed, and only a faint crack showed where it had been split.

"Yes, it's a strange egg," he said in answer to her questioning, "but what I said about the action of chemicals accounts for the closing as well as the opening. But whatever it is it has served its purpose here in giving me the prize."

In the Garden.

"She, supposing him to be the gardener"—
Dead is our Christ and our hearts cry
"Where?"
We would be true to the loved and fair.
Still we peer in the tomb behind thee.
Ah! Not there!
But as of old in the open air.

Baseball enthusiasts will get their st chance of the season tomorrow ternoon, if it is not too cold, to witss the initial scholastic game of the ason at Hyde Oval. Clinton will the boroughites' opponents, and a od opener is looked for. The ounds have been put into fairly od shape, and the "Canucks" have worked the kinks out of their ms. The team has been practicing rd for the past two weeks, and ach Mullin has a large number of od candidates from which to pick a m which will defend the championip annexed last year from Plainld.

As the air is still a little chilly a dseason game cannot be expected, t the borough boys intend to start with a victory, if possible. The orth Plainfield team will appear in new suits, which are of steel gray, immed with maroon, with black ps and stockings.

The team has practically been cked for tomorrow's contest, and l but one of last year's players will pear in the batting order. Ronie Conroy, who played second base st year, is on the sick list, and his ace will be filled by "Alf" Seidel. ob Hebert will adorn left field, with ther VanDeventer or John Dawe in nter. VanDeventer is also sick, d may not be able to get into the me. Duke VanMater will cover e ground behind first base. The ird base and shortstop positions ll be filled by Townley and Dilts, spectively, with Harold Meade at e initial sack. "Germany" Stahl is ated for the box work, and Smalley d Ed Day will handle the big mitt.

EXHIBITION BOXING FOR NEW JERSEY

Bill Introduced in Assembly May Shortly Become a Law.

Indications point to the probability that the bill introduced by Assemblyman Jacob J. Singer, of Jersey City, to legalize boxing exhibitions in New Jersey will shortly become a law. The bill has already passed the Senate Committee on Judiciary, but has been considerably amended. The bill originally was for the permission of bouts of ten rounds' duration, but, realizing that such a provision could not be approved by the Senate, those who are working hard for the restoration of boxing contests in New Jersey reduced the number of rounds to four. Eight-ounce gloves would be used in all contests.

The original provision for the appointment of a State Athletic Commission to be appointed by the Governor has also been eliminated, as the bill, after being amended by the Senate Committee, stipulated that the boxing contests be for amateurs only. No professionals will be allowed to participate in the bouts and all matches must be governed by the rules of the Amateur Athletic Union, with the power to issue permits for boxing shows resting with the police authorities of a municipality. Senator Read, chairman of the Judiciary Committee, in reporting the bill in its revised form, remarked.

"I believe the bill is in such shape now that not a single Senator will vote against it when it comes up for final passage."

Assemblyman Singer, who has for the past several weeks had his doubts as to the possibility of the bill passing the Senate Committee, was also much pleased with the prospect of the bill being placed on the New Jersey statute books. He said:

"I am much pleased with the situation and it will be a source of gratification to all lovers of real sport that the conservative Senate is about to agree to a piece of legislation of this kind. My aim at the outset was to enact a law that would promote wholesome sport. Clean athletics is one of the best safe-guards against crime and vice, and the young men of today have a right to expect the State to encourage rather than suppress good physical exercise and clean sport. I feel sure that Governor Fielder will sign the amended bill after it passes the Senate and after the amendment shall have been concurred in by the House of Assembly."

FISHER WINS TRIO OF POINTS IN FIVEBACK

H. M. Fisher took first honors in the Park Club handicap five-back tournament last night and won three points for the monthly prize. His best mark was 184, five ahead of the next highest. He made a net of 169, and was aided by a 15 handicap. The other three points were divided between T. C. Overton and Dr. Marcus Clawson, each making a gross of 179. They received one and one half points apiece.

A. M. Abbott and R. C. Campbell were placed at scratch and made scores of 150 and 135, respectively. The five-back competition will be held next Wednesday night instead of the usual time, on Friday. The results of last night's play follow:

Hand	111-40,	151
Dr. Currie	104-40,	144
H. M. Fisher	169-15,	184
Russell	104-30,	134

P. H. S. ATHLETES INDIGNANT BECAUSE THEY CANNOT GET FIELD FOR BIG COUNTY MEET

Despite the fact that the officials in charge of the Union County High Schools' Athletic League, at a meeting two months ago, decided to allot the one big "plum" of the field and track season to the Plainfield High School and hold the Union county meet here on Decoration Day, the local athletes are not yet certain whether or not they can secure Parker Field for that occasion. Coach Jack Fritts, of the local forces, made due application to the commissioners in charge of the playground for a permit to hold the event on that date but was informed that the Saurer baseball management had "leased the field for the summer," Decoration Day afternoon being included in the contract.

In view of the fact that this is the first opportunity the local schoolboys have ever had to stage a county athletic festival on a local field considerable feeling of an adverse nature has been stirred up over the refusal of the playground authorities to give their sanction to the affair. Coach Fritts has been working for this end all year, and his predecessors at the local institution, have also spent much time in working up a team of sufficient strength to warrant a demand being made for the county "plum." After being accorded the honor it is up to the Plainfielders to uphold their end of the agreement and in the event of their not being able to secure Parker Field they will probably never again be given a chance to hold the meet in this city.

Parker Field has the only adequate track for such a festival and the consensus of opinion among local followers of sport tends toward the supposition that the High School's amateur athletes should be given the one afternoon in preference to the Saurer's paid athletes who appear to have a monopoly on the rendezvous for the summer months. The High School athletes think that inasmuch as they have asked for but one afternoon, it would be no more than right for the authorities to give the right to use the public field on that one occasion.

MANY QUALIFIED IN SWIMMING TEST

P. H. S. Girls Perform Creditably in Aquatic Contests.

The swimming classes for girls at the Plainfield High School were given a test for points yesterday, the results showing the progress made during the season. One point towards graduation is given to each pupil who learns to swim, or if the pupil is already a swimmer, then for advancement in the art, and the ability to meet the required tests. Those who passed the tests will be the proud wearers of appropriate insignia, sewed on their bathing suits.

The first test was for beginners, who have learned to swim this year at the High School. These were required to plunge in at the deep end and swim one length of the pool (20 yards). The insignia is a letter S, in yellow. The following were given the letter:

The second test was for those who at the beginning of the year could swim a little but not well. These were required to plunge at the deep end and swim four times the length of the pool (80 yards). The insignia is the letter S in a diamond in yellow. This was given to the following:

The third test was for experts, requiring them to swim fifteen lengths of the pool (300 yards); to swim one length in street clothes and to undress in deep water; to dive to the bottom and bring up a weight of at least five pounds; to make one satisfactory dive, and to swim under water eighteen yards. The insignia for those qualifying as experts is the letter S in the diamond in red and a red diving cap. For this a number of the girls are working. Two were prepared to take it on Thursday, Jean Peacock, who swam in the trial 50 lengths, instead of 15, and Helen Peacock. There were given the experts insignia.

The girls take great intenest in the swimming lessons, and are making remarkable progress. It is expected that a number will be able, before the end of the year, to qualify as volunteer life savers, and a test will probably be made under the authority of the Volunteer Life Saving Corps.

WANT SECOND PLACE.

The Parrot and Dove five-man bowling teams, of the Columbus Club tourney that has been in progress for some time, will play the final match of the schedule, although the date has not yet been fixed. The Parrots are anxious to roll the final match as three wins would put them in second place, displacing the Sparrow five, which gave the Robin champs a hot run for a long time. The match will probably be played within the next week and this will probably end the real bowling although the members of the club are continually spilling the pins just to keep in form.

LOCAL BALLPLAYERS SIGNED FOR SEASON

Lidgate and Mathews Will Play With Hackensack Club.

The Oranti Field Club, of Hackensack, an organization that puts out one of the strongest semi-professional baseball nines in the State, has signed Gene Mathews, the promising young Bound Brook pitcher and Gene Lidgate, the greatest catcher that ever lived in Fanwood.

This pair will work against the Montreal International League Club, which is training in Hackensack on the Oranti Field Club grounds, as practice games between the semi-pros and the leaguers have been arranged.

Mathews is one of the best young pitchers in this vicinity. His work for Bound Brook High School and the Y. M. A. nine representing the South Bound Brook Reformed church has been excellent. Lidgate has played league ball in the Virginia League, the International League and the New York State League, but decided not to play ball this year. He was recently made a free agent by the National Commission after having been out-lawed for quitting a State League club because he hadn't received any back salary that was overdue.

SCORES DISAGREE IN P. H. S. GIRLS' CONTEST

Owing to the fact that the two scorers disagreed at the end of the game between the freshmen and sophomore girls' basketball teams of the Plainfield High School yesterday afternoon, the contest still remains undecided. One of the scorers claims that the contest was a tie, 21 to 21, and the other scorer claimed that the sophomores won 21 to 20.

The game was a thriller. The freshmen took the lead at the beginning of the contest and held it right up to the last few seconds of play, when Miss Crane scored a field goal and put the "sophs" in the lead, but Miss Peacock caged a foul goal and tied the score. The "freshies" were without the help of their center, Miss Ryder. The score at the end of the first half was 12 to 11 in the freshmen's favor.

The score:

FRESHMEN.

	G.	F.	P.
Miss Simons, f.	0	10	10
Miss Peacock, f.	5	5	11

ELK JUNIORS WIN TWO FROM PARKS

Match Staged on the Watchung Avenue Alleys Before Large Crowd.

The Junior Elks' bowling team maintained its supremacy over the Park Club Juniors on the Watchung avenue alleys last night by taking two out of the three games played. This gives the "Bills" seven victories out of nine games from the Washington Park quintet. There were a large number of supporters of both teams on the side lines and the rivalry was keen.

Both teams presented their strongest pinners and the home team had easy going in the initial roll. At the end they were 254 pins to the good, the team scores being 936 to 682. The Elks seemed to be at their best while the visitors could not hit the pins squarely for good marks. Stout registered a 201, and Waldorf's 217, which was high score of the match, helped materially in raising the team total. Hoyt hit for a 184 in this game. The Park Club men were unaccustomed to the lanes and rolled low scores at the start. In the first game Bauer's 161 was the highest made while Benjamin and C. Lyman turned in scores of 131 and 132 respectfully.

The Parks rolled better in the second game and turned in a total of 810 but even then were 28 pins behind. The Elks' were forced to accept defeat in the final roll, Strong making a 190 and Lyman a 203. The scores were 866 to 848.

After the match dancing was enjoyed in the reception hall by a large number. The scores follow:

TAKE SALTS TO FLUSH KIDNEYS

Eat Less Meat if You Feel Backachy or Have Bladder Trouble.

Meat forms uric acid which excites and overworks the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Regular eaters of meat must flush the kidneys occasionally. You must relieve them like you relieve your bowels; removing all the acids, waste and poison, else you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment; the channels often get irritated, obliging you to get up two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine and bladder disorders disappear. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive; harmless and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then, thus avoiding serious kidney and bladder diseases.—Adv.

Ventilation and pure air at all times. Our peculiar location gives us this advantage. In addition, there isn't a theatre in Plainfield that has as many exits and windows as the Astor Theatre.

The Astor Theatre was always considered a failure until we added it to our circuit of theatres, in fact it was a joke among a great many in Plainfield.

We had everybody's best wishes, but very few thought it could be made what we have made it in such a short time.

You can come to this theatre now any afternoon or evening and you will see not only the best pictures ever presented in Plainfield, but the finest class of people in this section, fast becoming U. S. patrons.

U. S. spells success in every city where we operate.

Because we know how.

Don't miss seeing "The Devil" and "The Quest."

We can assure you that these pictures will please the most critical.

NATIONAL HORSE DAY DATE SET FOR JUNE 7

S. P. C. A. Will Probably Arrange Fitting Demonstration for That Occasion.

Mrs. Stephen G. VanHoesen, local agent for the S. P. C. A., announced today that Monday, June 7, had been designated as "National Horse Day." On that date exercises of various kinds will be conducted throughout the country, the horse playing a prominent part in each observance.

Several cities have formulated tentative plans for their annual workhorse parade on that date and if sufficient enthusism can be aroused locally it is not unlikely that a similar demonstration will be held here. Mrs. VanHoesen is an advocate of the workhorse exhibition and if she receives the co-operation of other horse lovers in Plainfield she will assist in arranging details for the event.

Last year a "horse tag day" was held here, all equines being "tagged" by persons working in the interests of the S. P. C. A. While a success this form of demonstration is considered inferior to the parade idea and it is the belief of the society that more good can be done by having a public "lineup" of the animals, offering prizes to owners for the best kept equines and vehicles.

EXCELLENT OPPORTUNITY TO SECURE KINDLING WOOD

The Commission for the Relief of the Unemployed has about 500 barrels of kindling wood still to be disposed of. This wood is well seasoned and ready for immediate use. The Commission is willing to sell it at eight barrels for $1 and all orders telephoned to the office of the Charity Organization Society will receive prompt attention. This affords an excellent opportunity for householders to put in a supply of wood at a remarkably low price. After this wood is disposed of the woodyard will be discontinued.

EASTERTIDE PROGRAM WILL INCLUDE A CANTATA

An elaborate Easter program will be presented at the Seventh-Day Baptist church tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock, which will be as follows: Prelude, "Die Meistersinger," Wagner, violin, piano and organ; anthem, "Christ Has Won the Victory," Hawley; hymn, "Lift Up, Lift Up Your Voices Now;" offertory, "Barcarole," Thiessen, violin, piano and organ; Eastertide cantata, "The Resurrection and the Life," William Reed.

Part I.—"I Am the Resurrection and the Life." Soprano solo, "Sorrows are Passed;" tenor solo, semichorus and chorus, "In the End of the Sabbath." Part II.—Soprano solo and chorus of women's voices, "The Ransomed of the Lord;" baritone solo, "Let Us Not, Therefore, Sorrow;" quartet, semichorus and final chorus, "O, What the Joy and the Glory Must Be;" "Marche Heroique," violin, piano and organ.

BUILDING PLANS FOR NEW $45,000 STRUCTURE FILED

Plans for what promises to be one of the most elaborate apartment houses in this city were filed yesterday afternoon with Inspector T. O. Doane by the Crescent Realty Company, of 1216 Evergreen avenue, of which Charles C. Alexander is the president. The apartment, to be known as the Crescent Court Apartments, is to be erected at 217 East Seventh street, for several years known as the Will's estate, and will be constructed at a cost of $45,000, aside from about $15,000 for additional fittings and trimmings.

The building will be of hollow terra cotta block, four stories high, and will have twenty-three separate apartments. The structure is to have a frontage of 77 feet, a depth of 97 feet, and will be 92 feet in width in the rear. The first floor will contain four apartments, while the second, third and fourth stories will have six apartments each, with a caretaker's apartment in the basement. A modern steamheating plant is to be installed.

John C. Westervelt, of New York city, is the architect of this up-to-date structure. The contracts, as awarded, are as follows: Carpentry, The W. D. Lewis Company, of Roselle; masonry, William H. Dennick, of this city; electrical work, Charles L. Ryder, also of this city.

FINAL PERFORMANCE.

The motion picture program at the Young Men's Christian Asociation on Saturday, April 3, will include "The Passion Play," in three reels, and also "Jerusalem in the Time of Moses," and is particularly appropriate. It is quite probable that with this exhibition the association's activities in this line will end for the season.

—It pays to use the advertising columns of The Press.

ADDITIONAL CONTRIBUTIONS FOR ALBANIA SUFFERERS

The stream of contributions from Plainfield toward the "Christian Work Relief Ship," which is to be sent shortly to Albania by the Albanian Relief Fund, continues. Following is another list of Plainfielders who have sent in their contributions, either directly to the fund's treasurer, or to The Plainfield Trust Company:

Mrs. J. S. Schoonmaker, Fred W. Goddard, Florence M. Mallery, the Rev. D. B. F. Randolph, C. R. Markham, the Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, L. L. Manning, John B. Cottrell., Mrs William H. Riley, Miss A. M. Smith, M. E. Harrison, Adelaide N. Palmer, Mrs. Percy H. Stewart, Rev. Cornelius Schenk, Louis Sahm, Robert W. Wright, E. H. Booth, George M. Rittenhouse, F. J. Blatz, R. B. Moyer, Mrs. John Gray Foster, E. C. Suffern, Mrs. A. C. Penn, R. O Stewart, Mrs. John Abbott, Mrs. R. P. Pentecost, Mrs. William Griscom, E. L. Bonny, Elizabeth B. Mehlenbeck, Robert F. Hand and Jennie S. Roll.

'Plains & Fanwood.

The lecture in All Saints' Episcopal church tonight, at 8 o'clock, promises to be an excellent one, and will be especially interesting on account of the local collection of Tissot's wonderful pictures of the Passion. Holy communion was celebrated in the church at 10 o'clock this morning by the Rev. Oscar S. Michaels.

Miss Katherine Beardsley, of Cranford, is visiting Mr. and Mrs. S. W. McAnneny, of North avenue.

Captain S. B. Saunder, of "Wildwood," has returned from a business trip around Newport News and other places along the Middle Atlantic coast.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Henderson and daughter have returned to their home in Scotch Plains after spending the winter in New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Thrane, of Paterson road, are entertaining Miss Hanah Knabjelm, of New York. Miss Knabjelm was formerly soprano soloist in the Kaiser Wilhelm Memorial church in Berlin, and has sung in the Episcopal church here on several occasions.

It is now possible that local fishermen can get trout during the present season, which opened earlier in the week, without traveling any great distance, as the State Fish and Game Commission has stocked Green brook with about a thousand of them, and the section of the brook that runs through the 'Plains came in for its share.

Stoddard Nichols of North avenue, who entered Leal's School at Plainfield last fall, is scheduled to do most of the pitching on the private school boys' junior baseball team this summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Gere Paff, of Westfield avenue, are the parents of a boy born Wednesday.

Edward Brandt, who has been employed as a gardener by various local residents for the past thirty years, is in Muhlenberg Hospital, where he was taken following a fall on Tuesday night. He was coming from one of the buildings on Park avenue, Scotch Plains, and, missing his footing in the dark, fell heavily over a rock.

William Huff will be in charge of the prayer meeting in the Methodist church tonight.

The Sunday school of the Baptist church has been requested to meet in that edifice tonight to practice Easter music, which will be sung at the Sunday services.

The All Saints' Guild will meet in the Episcopal church tomorrow.

Tomorrow at a Saving of $3--- The Blouse "Prince Imperial II." That Is the Big Success of the Season

Satin-Striped Crepe de Chine At $3.95 Instead of $6.95

This is the blouse with the double frills—the very one which has already caused a furore among ultra modes. But tomorrow we shall present it at a medium price—$3.95. The beautiful silk of which it is made alone warrants it being $6.95. As you will see by the sketches, the blouse has the unique "Two-in-One" Collar, which may be worn as a choker or as a roll collar. In White or Flesh color.

$5 Shadow Lace Blouses, at $2.95

Two of the models are illustrated—but there are several others, and they are all lined with chiffon and trimmed with lovely laces.

"Pinehurst" Blouses of Blazer-Striped Crepe de Chine, $5

The 20 Styles in Corduroy Coats

That Have the Cachet of the Most Fashionable Women

Tomorrow at $10, $12.75, $15, $19.50

The new Sack model is stunning, the Empire style is effective, the Raglan model has a great deal of dash—indeed, many nice things might be said of each of the 20 models. A perusal of this list of colors will make you realize that they, too, make the coats effective:

Belgian Blue	Turquoise	Russian Green
Emerald	Salmon	Corn Color
Coral	Castor	Battleship Grey
Light Green	White	Army Khaki

A New Covert Cloth Coat, $15

A Modification of a Bernard Model—Illustrated

As this model is smart and yet is not extreme in style, we have also had it reproduced in wool khaki, black-and-white checked worsted, navy and black poplin. Third Floor.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

A Chaplin picture today and another one tomorrow is the announcement that comes from Proctor's Theatre. The whole town has gone wild over Chaplin and his funny antics and Proctor's Theatre is the place to see him in every one of his two-reel comedies. There is no need to say that Charles Chaplin is the funniest man in picturedom and Proctor audiences have been laughing themselves into hysterics since Manager Sanderson began presenting the funny fellow at all performances.

The change of vaudeville yesterday brought a big get to the popular Front street theatre which has elicited approbation from all the patrons who have seen it so far. It is entitled, "The Sierra Sunbeam," an idyl of the western hills and in addition to having a magnificent electrical and scenic setting, carries a company of ten people. It is replete with good comedy, numerous songs, and effective chorus work provided by six girls. Another hit yesterday was made by Arthur Milton, the talking musician, who produces marvelous music from a one-stringed violin, an instrument of which he is absolute monarch. The vaudeville program is completed by Miss Stewart and company in the sketch, "Joe's Vacation"; Dun and Stevens, in a singing and talking number, which serves to introduce marvelous imitations of birds and animals, and Maude O'Lora, the posturing beauty, giving a marvelous exhibition of contortion and equilibrist feats.

The feature picture for next Monday and Tuesday will be the big New York success, "The Fight," featuring John E. Kellar and Margaret Wickerly. It is another in the series of an elaborate five-part film put out by the World Film Corporation and which have drawn large audiences to Proctor's.

EXECUTIVE BOARD MEETING.

The regular meeting of the executive board of Newark Conference Woman's Home Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal church will be held Monday morning, at 10:30, in Central M. E. church, Newark. It is especially desired that every member be present, as business of importance is to be transacted.

A missionary meeting will be held under the auspices of the Christian and Missionary Alliance at the German Reformed church, Craig place and Duer street, this afternoon at 3:30. As the German Reformed congregation will hold its customary Good Friday service tonight, the Alliance will not have an evening meeting.

Library Notes.

Published Every Friday.

"Everyman's Garden Every Week," by Charles A. Selden. Books on gardening are interesting to most of us at this time of the year, and this book is entitled to uncommon interest by reason of the fact that the author is one of our neighbors. Mr. Selden is the city editor of the Evening Post but makes his home in Plainfield.

"Everyman's Garden Every Week" has something of interest and value to the amateur gardener and even to the semi-professional for all the seasons of the year. "To the true philosopher of the hoe, there is no winter," says Mr. Selden. So he begins and ends his book with December 31, which is the date that the days begin to lengthen and the time when a true gardener begins to plan for his next year's work. This planning, the seeing of one's coming garden in a vision, Mr. Selden shows to be very important, and the planting on paper has its part in the plan as full as the actual planting of the seeds.

Things are told in this book in a way which helps you to remember them. For instance, here are two gems:

"If the stems of plants are short and thin and wabbly, if the foliage is scant and turns yellow sooner than it should, that is a sure sign that nitrogen is needed.

"If the plant itself thrives but fails to produce its fruit, it is a sure sign the soil needs potash and phosphate."

There is a chapter on "Garden Mistakes of Various Sorts" which is full of good stuff; there is a splendid chapter on "Indoor Work" and there is a chapter for each month from April to November. The book is thoroughly to the point and is also good reading, which is more than can be said of many of our instructive books. The book is made complete by the addition of a good index.

These are some of the other books on gardening that are in the library:

Garden Making, L. H. Bailey.
Horticulturist's Rule Book, L. H. Bailey.
Manual of Gardening, L. H. Bailey.
Nursery Book, L. H. Bailey.
Principles of Vegetable Gardening, L. H. Bailey.
Vegetable Garden, I. D. Bennett.
Gardening for Beginners, E. T. Cook.
Treatise on Manures, A. B. Griffiths.
The Soil, F. H. King.
Garden Profits, E. L. D. Seymour.

It may not be generally known that W. B. Maxwell, author of "The Ragged Messenger," one of the best selling books of the times, is the son of M. F. Braddon (Mrs. John Maxwell), who recently died and who a few years ago was one of the most widely read writers of fiction. She published over sixty stories, nearly all of which had remarkably large sales. Mr. Maxwell is a first-lieutenant in the British Army and is at present on the firing line.

"The Sword of Youth," by James Lane Allen, is one of the prominent new books. Mr. Allen has returned to Kentucky in this story of his and has introduced many scenes from the Civil War. It is a story of a boy and girl each of whom is seventeen when the book opens and but nineteen when it closes, although the war has brought them to such maturity that it is as man and woman that they take their leave of the reader.

The story is written in Mr. Allen's happiest vein and breathes a love and knowledge of the country such as we have come to look for in him above all other present day writers. There runs through the whole story a spirit of romance such as distinguished his earlier volumes and made him so beloved to youth and imagination.

PERSONAL.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Steiglitz, of Allen place, are both confined to their home by illness.

Philip Kirch, son of Freeholder Kirch, of Somerset street, is home from Florida, where he has been spending the winter in the hope of regaining his health, is now confined to his bed at the home of his father.

Robert Fairchild, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Fairchild, who underwent an operation for appendicitis at Muhlenberg Hospital, has returned to his home on Franklin place.

John T. Green and family have removed from Grandview avenue, the borough, to New Brunswick, where Mr. Green is in business.

Samuel Kramers, a student of C. C. of N. Y., is spending the Easter vacation with his brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Kramers, of Elmwood place.

W. A. Everett, of Santa Barbara, Cal., is visiting relatives in this city.

Roundsman Andrew Saffron, of Spooner avenue, has been detained at home for the past few days by an attack of grip.

CANDIDATES NEAR ING SPECIAL GOAL IN THE RACE FOR COAST

Three Hustling Contestants Will Have Awards Worth From $100 Down to $35 for Efforts up to Tomorrow Night—and Then the Big Tour Free.

First Prize.
Second Prize.
Merchandise Certificate, good for $25.00 in trade at Woodhull & Martin Co., 163 East Front street, and $15.00 in gold.
Third Prize.

SPECIAL NOTICE:

The ballot which has been found on the second page of the Press since the start of the contest, will be discontinued on Saturday, April 3, and all these ballots must be in the ballot box on that date to be counted. From April 3 until the end of the contest, only subscription ballots will be accepted and credited to candidates.

The close of the contest is at hand, but in one day that remains in the special period contest, rapid additions will be made in the ballot column. Many positions may change. No one knows who will win. Nearly every reader thinks he can at least select one winner, but can he? Some are confident other candidates will win. It cannot be ascertained by any means how many thousands of ballots the various candidates will cast. It is not wise for one of them to make an estimate of the probable number of ballots she will accumulate.

Determination to win, in connection with relentless activity in vote-getting, will make a candidate a winner.

It is now the time to get busier than ever.

And there is the chaperone trip that is to be won by the woman who has the greatest number of votes in all the districts on April 17, and in this it is absolutely indeterminable even to estimate how the candidates will stand. We can't do it, nor can you. The candidate who finishes in the contest with the highest number of votes gets the choice of the chaperone.

There is no time to hesitate. What you intend to do, do now. Get in and wear the crowns.

Chance of a Lifetime.

The opportunity to cross the American continent, with all expenses paid, does not come to many people in natural life. It is, therefore, a thing to be envied, and to be labored for, because it is offered alike to all.

It will broaden your horizon of life. It will afford you pleasure throughout the future years. The opportunity is one that may never come again. You will never regret that you hustled like a beaver, for in all probability you will never be better repaid for any labor performed.

Every person, no matter where situated, may vote for his or her favorite candidate who may be entered from any district, simply by remitting to the contest department the amount of a subscription to the Press, and the number of votes allowed the candidate will be credited to her.

For the information of all concerned, we publish the subscription rate and schedule of votes:

Subscription Rate and Vote Schedule

Daily Edition.	Price.	Votes Allowed Old	New
Three months...	$ 1.25	135	270
Six months	2.50	310	620
One year	5.00	825	1,650
Two years	10.00	1,825	3,650

Prizes on Exhibition.

The jewelry prizes are on display at the above stores, and every person is invited to look them over, they are beauties, both of them.

Mr. Vail is willing to repurchase the diamond ring offered as first prize from the winner any time within one year for $90 cash.

Candidates Must Hustle.

Only votes issued on paid-in-advance subscriptions turned in between midnight, Wednesday, March 17, and 10 p. m., April 3, will count for the special prizes. No ballots cut from the Press will count for these prizes, but will be accepted and will count for the tours.

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

Wilson Barrett, and a mammoth supporting cast, appear on the screen at the Plainfield Theatre today and tomorrow, at all performances, in a stupendous film version of the famous dramatic triumph, "The Sign of the Cross," by Wilson Barrett.

The play is, foremost, a work of the imagination, yet strengthened and emphasized by the grim realities that inspired it. The play brings out the gorgeous pageantry of Paganism into sharp and clear relief against the towering dignity and primitive simplicity of the early Christian faith, and even discloses the riot and license of self-indulgent Rome as it were, at the very foot of the ascent to Calvary.

From its first inception, this daring was justified by an extraordinary success. Before the play had been a week upon the stage, it had created a furore in America. From countless pens poured a stream of eulogy. Eager crowds besieged the theatre doors. And throughout the many years, this amazing popularity has continued and increased, until today the drama has won a place in the literature of the stage unsurpassed by any other play of the past half century.

The motion picture version is naturally more elaborate and detailed than the original stage presentation of the play, and the great Roman gardens, baths, palaces and forums, with their incidental wealth of costume and settings, enrich the production and make it a faithful copy of the times and environments it typifies.

In connection with the presentation of "The Sign of the Cross," Edward Harding, Jr., of this city, will sing "The Rosary" at the performances tonight and also those of tomorrow afternoon and evening.

On Thursday night, April 8, at the Plainfield Theatre, H. H. Frazee will present "A Pair of Sixes," by Edward Peple, author of "The Prince Chap" and "The Littlest Rebel," which has been passed upon by New York, Chicago, London and Melbourne, Australia, theatre-goers as "the funniest farce in the world." The plot involves a quarrel between the partners in the Eureka Digestive Pill Co. as to which shall direct operations. The dispute is settled by a game of show-down poker. What happens to the losing partner produces the humorous situations. In the cast of the local presentation will appear Paul Nicholson, Curtis Benton, Angie Norton, Mildred Booth, Marta Oatman and others.

FANWOOD BORO MAKES A PROTEST

PROPERTY IS DAMAGED

Legal Proceedings Authorized Against Property Owners Near Springfield for Road Improvements —To Install New Culvert Basins.

Elizabeth, April 2.—Fanwood borough residents are up in arms about defective drainage in the Chelsea Park section of Plainfield which causes surface water to overflow within the Fanwood boundary line and damages property there. As the borough authorities have no power to remedy conditions, the source of the trouble being out of their jurisdiction, a communication was sent to the Board of Freeholders yesterday and the complaint referred to committee. It was stated in the communication that the water drains into an open ditch and runs into Green brook. From the ditch the water runs to Terrill road and passes through a culvert.

County Attorney Codington was authorized to start legal proceedings against property owners along Morris or Springfield avenue near Springfield and Summit, because the condemnation commission appointed to condemn land so that the road from Westfield to Summit may be straightened, has been unable to agree with the owners of land as to the price in this section. More than $10,000 was ordered paid to other property owners along the road, which is also known as Mountain avenue.

The Board indorsed a resolution for the payment of $20 to Nelson S. Gaskill, as the county's share of a fund to be paid him for drawing up a measure which changes the method of adminstering State roads.

It was decided to hold conferences with the Morris County Board relative to action on the inter-county bridge over the Passaic river at Berkeley Heights which will either be relaced, re-built or abandoned.

Two new basins to cost $250 in the inlets to culverts at Seventh and Richmond streets, Plainfield, were authorized. A new culvert at Chestnut street, Westfield, to cost $450, was also acted on favorably. A committee was appointed to investigate the need of guard rails in Jerusalem road near Johnson avenue, Fanwood.

A resolution of the Board of Managers of Bonnie Burn Sanatorium, Watchung Plains, calling for the installation of a lighting plant at the institution, was referred to the hospital committee.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

The Contract Record and Engineering Review, of Toronto, Canada, one of the leading periodicals on road construction, in its last issue has the following to say regarding Robert A. Meeker, of Plainfield, State highway engineer, who attended the Road Congress held at Toronto last week:

"Robert A. Meeker, of Plainfield, N. J., is one of the prominent speakers at Toronto this week. He has been in charge of road work for the last twenty-seven years, and was appointed to his present position in 1900. It is his official duty to supervise and inspect all plans, profiles and cross sections prepared by the several county engineers of the state. No grants of State aid are made until the plans for such improvement have received his approval.

"New Jersey appropriates $500,000 per annum to pay its 40 per cent of the cost of new work; therefore construction to the value of at least $1,250,000 is begun each year. The State's appropriation is also used to pay 20 per cent. of the cost of new bridges built on the line of the new work. The proportion of bridge work done brings the annual expenditure for roads and bridges up to $1,400,000. All of this design, as well as the construction, is subject to Mr. Meeker's supervision.

"New Jersey collects over $781,000 from motor vehicle licenses and fines. This fund is used for the repair and up-keep of roads. Upon the plans for this work also the State Highway Engineer is called to pass.

"Mr. Meeker holds membership in The American Road Builders' Association, and in The American Society of Civil Engineers."

CHAPTER XI.

I Resort to Diplomacy.

THE countess sprang to her feet with a sharp cry of alarm.

"Heavens, I—I forgot about that! There is a secret panel, and—heaven save us!—it opens directly into my bedroom!" Her eyes were very wide and full of consternation. She gripped my arm. "Come! Be quick! We must pile something against it or nail it up or do something!"

She fairly dragged me out into the corridor and then, picking up her dainty skirts, pattered down the rickety stairs at so swift a pace that I had some difficulty in keeping her pink figure in sight. Why is it that a woman can go downstairs so much faster than a man? I've never been able to explain it.

At last we came to the broad hall at the top of the main staircase. Almost directly in front of us loomed the great padlocked doors leading to the other wing. Passing them like the wind, she led the way to the farthermost end of the hall. Light from the big paneless windows overlooking the river came streaming into the vast corridor, and I could see doors ahead to the right and the left of us.

"Your bedroom?" I managed to gasp, uttering a belated question that should have been asked five or six flights higher up at a time when I was better qualified to voice it. "What the dickens is it doing down here?"

She did not reply, but, turning to the left, threw open a door and disappeared into the room beyond. I followed ruthlessly, but stopped just over the threshold to catch my breath in astonishment.

I was in "my lady's bedchamber."

The immense Gothic bed stood on its dais, imposing in its isolation. Three or four very modern innovation trunks loomed like minarets against the opposite walls half open. Some of my most precious rugs adorned the floor, but the windows were absolutely undraped.

"Don't stand there gaping!" she cried in a shrill whisper. "This is the mirror, the middle one. It opens by means of a spring. There is a small hole in the wall behind it, and then there is still another secret door beyond that, a thick iron one with the sixth Baron Rothhoefen's portrait on the outer side of it. The canvas swings open. We must"—

I was beginning to get my bearings.

"The sixth baron? Old Ludwig the Red?"

"The very one."

"Then by Jove he is in my study! You don't mean to say"—

"Please don't stop to talk!" she cried impatiently, looking about in a distracted manner. "But for goodness sake get something to put against this mirror!"

My mind worked rapidly. The only object in the room heavy enough to serve as a barricade was the bed, and it was too heavy for me to move. I

"Pull it over, quick!" she commanded promptly.

"Perhaps I'd better run out and get Max and Ru"—

"If my hus—if Mr. Pless should open that secret door from the other side, Mr. Smart, it will be very embarrassing for you and me. Let"—

I put my shoulder to the huge creaky bed and shoved. There were no casters. It did not budge. The countess assisted me by putting the tips of her small fingers against one end of it and pushing. It was not what one would call a frantic effort on her part, but it served to make me exert myself to the utmost.

"Don't do that," I protested. "I can manage it alone, thank you."

I secured a strong grip on the bottom of the thing and heaved manfully.

"You might let me help!" she cried, firmly grasping a side piece with both hands.

The bed moved. By means of great straining I got the heavy thing over against the mirror. One of the legs was hopelessly splintered in the drop from the raised platform.

"There," she said, standing off to survey our joint achievement; "we've stopped it up very nicely." She brushed the tips of her fingers daintily. "This afternoon you may fetch up a hammer and some nails and fasten the mirror permanently. Then you can move the bed back to its proper place. Goodness! What a narrow squeak!"

"Madame," said I, my hand on my heart, but not through gallantry, "that bed stays where it is. Not all the king's horses nor all the king's men can put it back again."

"Was it so heavy, Mr. Smart?"

I swallowed very hard. A prophetic crick already had planted itself in my back. "Will you forgive me if I submit that you sleep quite a distance from home?" I remarked with justifiable irony. "Why the deuce don't you stay on the upper floors?"

"Because I am mortally afraid," she said, with a little shudder. "You've no idea how lonely, how spooky it is up there at the dead hour of night. I couldn't sleep. After the third night I had my things moved down here, where I could at least feel that there were strong men within—you might say arm's length of me. I'm—I'm shockingly timid."

"Of course I don't mind, countess," I hastened to say. "Only I thought it would be cozier up there with Rosemary and the two maids for company."

She leaned a little closer to me. "We all sleep down here," she said confidentially. "We bring Rosemary's little mattress down every night and put it in the tin bathtub. It is a very good fit and makes quite a nice cradle for her. Helene and Blake sleep just across the hall, and we leave the doors wide open. So, you see, we're not one bit afraid."

"Um!" said I judicially. "And so my study is just beyond this mirror, eh? May I inquire how you happen to know that I have my study there?"

"Oh, I peeked in the other day," she said serenely.

"The deuce you did!"

"I was quite sure that you were out," she explained. "I opened Ludwig the Red an inch or two, that's all. You are quite cosy in there, aren't you? I envy you the grand old chaise longe."

We returned to the corridor. She closed the door softly, a mockery in view of the clatter I had made in shifting the bed and its impediments.

"Listen!" I whispered suddenly, grasping her arm. "Did you hear footsteps in the— Sh!"

Some one was walking over the stone floor in the lower hall, brisk strides that rang out quite clearly as they drew nearer.

"It is—it is Mr. Pless," she whispered in a panic. "I recognize his tread. As if I could ever forget it! Oh, how I hate him! He"—

"Don't stop here to tell me about it," I cut in sharply. "Make haste! Get up to your rooms and lock yourself in. I'll—I'll stop him."

Assuming a nonchalance I certainly did not feel, I descended the stairs. We met in the broad hallway below. Mr. Pless approached slowly, evidently having checked his speed on hearing my footsteps on the stairs.

"Hello!" I said agreeably. "How did you get in?"

He surveyed me coolly. "I know the castle from top to bottom, Mr. Smart. To be perfectly frank with you, I tried the secret panel in your study, but found the opposite door blocked. You have no objection, I trust, to my looking over the castle? It is like home to me."

My plan was to detain him in conversation until she had time to secrete herself on the upper floor. Somehow I anticipated the banging of a door, and it came a moment later, not loud, but very convincing just the same. He glanced at me curiously.

"Then how did you get in?" I repeated, cringing perceptibly in response to the slam of the distant door.

"By the same means, I dare say, that you employ," said he.

For a moment I was confounded. Then my wits came to the rescue.

"It is a cobwebby, unlovely passage," said he, brushing the dirt and cobwebs from his trousers. My own appearance was conspicuously immaculate, but I brushed in unison, just the same.

"I'd like to have your opinion as to the best way of restoring or repairing those mural paintings in the dome of the east hall," I said, detaining him. It was necessary for me to have a good excuse for rummaging about in the unused part of the castle. "It seems too bad to let those wonderful paintings go to ruin. They are hanging down in some places and are badly cracked in others. I've been worrying about them ever since I came into possession. For instance, that Murillo in the center. It must be preserved."

He gave me another queer look, and I congratulated myself on the success of my strategy. He took it all in. The mocking light died out in his eyes, and he became intensely interested in my heaven sent project.

For fifteen or twenty minutes we discussed the dilapidated frescoes, and he gave me the soundest sort of advice, based on a knowledge and experience that surprised me more than a little. He was thoroughly up in matters of art.

I looked at my watch. Assuming a careless manner, I remarked:

"Come along." I started off in the direction of the lower regions. He followed. I maneuvered with such success that ultimately he took the lead. I hadn't the remotest idea how to get to the confounded dungeons!

At last there came a day of deliverance. The guests were departing, and I can truthfully say that I was speeding them.

Elsie Hazzard took me off to a remote corner, where a little later on Betty Billy and the two husbands found us.

"John, will you ever forgive me?" she said very soberly. "I swear to you I hadn't the faintest idea what it"—

"Please, please, Elsie," I broke in warmly; "don't abuse yourself in my presence. I fully understand everything—at least, nearly everything. What I can't understand, for the life of me, is this: How did you happen to pick up two such consummate bounders as these fellows are?"

"Alas, John," said she, shaking her head, "a woman never knows much about a man until she has lived a week in the same house with him. Now you are a perfect angel."

"You've always said that," said I. "You did not have to live in the same house with me to find it out, did you?"

She ignored the question. "I shall never, never forgive myself for this awful week, John. We've talked it all over among ourselves. We are ashamed—oh, so terribly ashamed. If you can ever like us again after"—

"Like you!" I cried, taking her by the shoulders. "Why, Elsie Hazzard, I have never liked you and George half so much as I like you now. You two and the Smiths stand out like Gibraltars in my esteem. I adore all of you. I shan't be happy again until I know that you four—and no more—are coming back to Schloss Rothhoefen for an indefinite stay. Good Lord, how happy we shall be!"

I said it with a great deal of feeling. The tears rushed into her eyes.

"You are a dear, John," she sighed.

"You'll come?"

"In a minute," said she with vehemence, a genuine American girl once more.

"Just as soon as these pesky workmen are out of the place I'll drop you a line," said I, immeasurably exalted. "But I draw the line at noblemen."

Of Interest to Women and the Home

BY MRS EVA LEONARD

Madam Morton had brought her black silk to wear to church. Nell put a wide lace collar around her neck and fluffed her hair about her face. The old lady underwent the dressing operation as solemnly as if she were being prepared for a funeral. The little wife was very apprehensive about the success of her party with this hostile element suddenly injected into it, but Dick agreed to take charge of the old lady. Nell had not planned to play, so one of them could be spared from the card tables.

Madam Morton took a fancy to Mrs. Parsons at once and that tactful lady got Dick to take her place while she "rested" and talked with his mother. Miss Rudolph tried to be very agreeable, but was frozen into silence and withdrew discomfited. His mother remarked to Dick that evening that of all the unspeakably silly girls she had ever seen, Miss Rudolph was the worst, adding, "I am thankful, Dick, you didn't marry her." This doubtful compliment Nell took as a sign that she was gaining in favor.

Sunday morning there was no late sleeping, for Dick's mother had announced that she was going to church, and opined that people who spent Saturday afternoon playing cards stood in special need of church ministrations.

"Now, mother, own up that there was nothing so dreadful in the game you saw yesterday," said Dick persuasively.

"It's a wicked waste of time, and might influence some to gamble," was the only concession she would make.

When Nell came out of her room dressed for church her guest looked her over critically.

"My, you are an extravagant woman! How do you expect your husband, who is a poor man, ever to get ahead when you spend so much on dress?"

"This dress was part of my wedding outfit," explained Nell. "I have altered it a little myself, but——"

"That makes no difference, if you expect to dress as you have done in the past. Such reckless ways will ruin a man. I wasn't a load around my husband's neck when I married."

Nell felt the angry tears rising, and fearing to lose control of herself, turned and rushed into her room. She took off the offending garment and put on a house dress, announcing that as she did not feel very well she had decided to remain at home.

Dick had not heard what his mother said, but he knew something unpleasant had happened, so he ran back, under the pretense of a forgotten handkerchief, to kiss Nell and whisper to her not to care about the harsh criticisms or be unhappy on the first day of their second year. That little thoughtful act gave Nell power to get control of herself, so it was a smiling wife and a good dinner that awaited them on their return.

"By working together we made our anniversary a happy one, one we will remember with pleasure," said Dick that evening. "I am proud of you dear." And she was repaid for all her effort to please his mother.

Household Hints

CANDIES

Chocolate Caramels—Melt three ounces chocolate, two cups molasses, one cup brown sugar, two tablespoons butter, one-third cup milk. Mix thoroughly. Bring to a hard boil. Remove into buttered pans. When cool, mark off in squares.

Cream Candy—Two cups sugar, one-half cup water, three tablespoons vinegar, one teaspoon cream of tartar. Boil until it forms a hard ball. Add vanilla. Turn into buttered pans. When cool, pull until white.

Peanut Brittle—Heat two cups sugar until it boils. Stir it. Then add one cup peanut meats and turn into buttered pan. If you wish, add one-fourth teaspoon soda as soon as sugar boils.

THE TABLE

Mock Clam Chowder—Boil two chopped onions fifteen minutes. Add three medium-sized potatoes and salt and pepper to taste. When potatoes are cooked sufficiently, add half pint or more of milk. (For a family of six there should be about two quarts of milk.) Thicken with three crackers, pulverized. Fry three or four thin slices of pork, diced; turn over six or eight split crackers placed in a tureen, after which pour in contents of soup kettle. Serve at once. This is just splendid.

Dumpling Soup—Cut one pound round steak into small cubes, turn into hot frying pan and cook quickly. In a soup kettle place two generous tablespoons butter and medium-sized onion sliced; fry until brown. To this add four quarts cold water and the steak; cook very slowly two hours. Season liberally with salt and pepper and twenty minutes before serving add the dumplings as follows: To two well-beaten eggs add half pint milk, salt and flour enough to make a rather stiff batter. Drop by spoonful into hot soup, cover tightly and boil about twenty minutes, or until dumplings are light and thoroughly cooked. Vegetables may be added to this soup with what flavor the family likes. If, after your seasoning is added, you find it too salty, drop in several slices of raw potato, which will absorb salt, and add one teaspoon brown sugar, which restores the flavor.

Cornmeal Gems—One pint cornmeal, one pint flour, one tablespoon sugar, one teaspoon salt, three teaspoons baking powder, one tablespoon lard or butter, two eggs, one pint milk. Sift together cornmeal, flour, sugar and baking powder; rub in lard or butter cold; add eggs well beaten and mixed with milk; mix into batter of consistency of cup cake. Gem pans to be well greased and cold; fill two-thirds full. Bake in hot oven fifteen to twenty minutes.

WORTH KNOWING

Don't put away men's or boys' clothing for the winter or summer without first searching the pockets for matches. Mice will gnaw matches for the phosphorus. Bad fires are often started by them.

To Clean Windows—Wash with some good scouring soap, rinse and rub with flannel cloth wet in vinegar; dry thoroughly with an old stocking (will not leave lint). You are sure to be pleased with the effect.

Animal Jingles

FOR LITTLE FOLKS

BY ALICE CREW GALL

What Are You Like?

Just think a bit about yourself,
And see if you're inclined
To be like any animal
That you can call to mind.
Are you a sly and cunning child,
Deceitful in your way?
Whom no one cares to trust? If so,
You're like a Fox, I'd say!

OR

It may be that you are vain,
And often can be found
A-gazing in the looking-glass
Or proudly strutting 'round.
Some children are like that, I know,
It's sad but it is true,
And if you're one, I think you're like
A vain Peacock, don't you?

RUNAWAY JUNE

BY GEORGE RANDOLPH CHESTER AND LILLIAN CHESTER

Copyright, 1915, by Serial Publication Corporation

THIRTEENTH EPISODE

Trapped

CHAPTER I.

DRAPED as the Spirit of the Marsh, the beautiful runaway bride stood, dazed and trembling, on the sidewalk in front of the studio from which she had been driven. At the curb stood a limousine with its black silk curtains drawn. The white mustached man, who had sprung from it, grasped the lovely model by the wrist and drew her to the car as the dark, handsome, black Vandyked man who had followed covered her gauzily clad form with the voluminous black cloak which he carried.

Down the street at a tearing pace came the family car of the runaway bride's father and mother, and in it with them were two of her friends and the deserted groom, his teeth gritting and his fists clinched as he saw these two scoundrels bundle his pretty June into the car and hurry in after her.

Just behind the family came an electric coupe, driven by a sharp featured woman with a long nose and high arched brows, and as she saw this bold abduction she shrieked and ran her car into the curb. As the door of the luxurious limousine slammed shut the quiet block seemed suddenly alive. Around the corner of the studio came bounding a handsome collie, which ran to the car, loudly barking. A woman with high cheek bones and accompanied by a tall policeman followed the dog. She dashed up to the limousine as it started and jumped upon the running board, while the dog barked and leaped.

From a doorway on the opposite side of the street there sprang a short, wide man with a thick stub of a cigar in his mouth, who pursued the limousine, hopped upon the spare tires at the back of the car and hung there. The woman on the running board opened the door of the limousine and, forced her way in as they dashed around the corner, furiously pursued by the family car, the electric coupe and the barking collie.

The luxurious limousine was speedier than its pursuers, but not speedy enough entirely to lose the family car with the deserted groom. It had gained several blocks' headway, however, when it turned a corner and stopped abruptly in front of a house where a vivacious brunette and a large blond woman stood peering eagerly out of the window. Only for an instant it paused. The door opened. Out of it sprang the white mustached man and drew after him the half fainting girl in the voluminous black cloak. He put his arm around her and hurriedly forced her up the steps. The woman with the high cheek bones darted after her. She hesitated a moment and vaguely recognized the cloak; then she sprang after the beautiful young girl.

The man with the black Vandyke caught her by the arm and held her back. He spoke sharply to the driver, who was the treacherous Scatti, and the limousine jerked forward just as the door of the house opened and the beautiful girl was thrust inside.

The thick, wide man on behind struggled to get down from his uncomfortable position, but his cravat was caught in the strap of the tire covers, and so the well known and justly famous private detective, Bill Wolf, stooped over the tires, with his wide feet in the rack, his arms around the rims and his head held down, was carried swiftly away from the scene of his sleuthing. The black Vandyked man talked earnestly with the high cheek boned woman for an instant and gave her some money, hurried up the steps and let himself in with a latchkey, while the woman ran down to the basement door and pushed past the servant who opened it.

At that moment the family car swerved around the corner and flashed by, still pursuing the luxurious limousine. It had lost this scene of alighting through having stopped long enough to take on the handsome collie, which now sat on the front seat with the driver. There was no mistaking that luxurious limousine, with its black curtains tightly drawn and a bit of filmy gauze fluttering from the door and the faithful Bill Wolf still stooped on behind.

So it was that beautiful June Warner came into the boarding house of Mrs. Russel.

June was ushered into the parlor, where several of Mrs. Russel's guests were seated. All were impressed by the beauty of the girl as she was introduced to them. A young man suggested to one of the three young ladies present that they play a game of cards.

June stood before her new acquaintances hesitatingly. She did not know who they were, and yet she did not desire to offend them. Her chief thought was to get her clothes and try to procure some work that would provide for her expenses.

And as she paused at entering the card game the door to the parlor suddenly opened, and in came Orin Cunningham.

In Mrs. Russel's select boarding house was now a strange combination of people. These were Gilbert Blye, the maid, Marie; Orin Cunningham and June, the runaway bride.

VARIED PROGRAMS FOR EASTER SERVICES IN CITY CHURCHES

Christ's Resurrection Will Be Commemorated with Music and Sermons—Floral Decorations to Be a Feature.

Elaborate arrangements have been made for the observance of Easter in the churches of the city and borough, where thousands of worshippers will gather during the day to commemorate the resurrection of Christ, and all that is needed to make the observance complete is clear skies. The weather man does not promise this, however, and the day may be a stormy one.

Special musical programs are announced by the Protestant and Catholic churches and there will be appropriate music both morning and evening with sermons on the resurrection by the various ministers. In the Catholic churches there will be the processional by the Sunday-schools, each bearing an Easter lily. The programs in the churches will be as follows:

ST. STEPHEN'S.

Organ prelude; processional hymn, "Jesus Christ is Risen Today," Morgan; introit anthem, "Awake up My Glory," Barnsby; hymn, "The Strife is O'er," from Palestrina; offertory anthem, "They have Taken Away My Lord and I Know not Where They have Laid Him," Stainer; communion service in D, Woodward; offertory sentence, Whitney; Nunc Dimittis in D, Barnaby; recessional hymn, "Jesus Lives, They're Terrors Now," Gauntlett. Afternoon service at 4:30; procession of the Sunday-school from the parish house to the church at 4:15. Easter hymns and carols, short evening service, presentation of crosses, presentation of flowering plants to the children of the Sunday-school.

GRACE M. E.

"As It Began to Dawn," Reed; ladies' trio, "Victory," Shelley; soprano solo and chorus, "Hosanna," Granier; evening, "It is Fulfilled," Rogers and the chorus of twenty-four voices will sing the cantata, "The Lord of Love and Life," by Julian Edwards. The soloists will be Mrs. E. D. Young, soprano; Miss Jennie DeMott, alto; Clarence Steiner, bass. Miss Alice Carroll, the organist, will direct the program.

NETHERWOD REFORMED.

Solo and chorus, "Ressurection and Life," Lowden; "Christ is Risen," tenor and contralto duet. The soloists are Miss Mary Cooper, soprano; Miss Maude Morris, contralto, and H. J. Martin, baritone. These will be assisted by the grand choir.

CRESCENT AVENUE.

Morning prelude, "Praelurium," Hollins; "This Joyful Easter-tide," Old Dutch; "The Strife is O'er," Old German; offertory anthem, "Like a Choir of Mighty Angels," Tschaikowsky; postlude, Tocatta, Widor; afternoon: organ recital at 4:45, organ concerto No. 3, Handel; (a) Allegro, (b) Adagio, (c) Andante, (d) Presto; "Come See the Place," ancient carol; offertory, "Messiah," part 3, Handel; postlude, "Allegro from Sonata," Handel.

ST. MARY'S.

High mass, 11 a. m.; prelude, "Resurrection Morn," Johnston; "Vidi Auam," Pechee; processional, "Sing Ye Angels," choir and chancel choir; "Kyrie," "Gloria in Excelsis," Bergen; "Veni Creator," Warner; "Credo," Berger; offertory, "Regina Coeli," Giorza; "Santus," "Benedictus," "Agnus Du," Berger; solemn benediction, "O Salutaris," Wiegand; "Tantum Ergo," Giorza; "Te Deum;" recessional, "Alleluiah," choir and chancel choir; postlude, "Triumphal March," Brooks Day. The soloists will be the following: Miss Anna Daly, soprano; Miss Elnora McCarthy, alto; Albert Mathews, tenor; Thomas Roddy, bass, and Albert LaRock, baritone. Miss M. A. Smith, the organist, will direct the musical program.

PARK AVENUE BAPTIST.

Beautiful music, by choir and orchestra, will be rendered. Dr. Birney Hudson will preach an Easter message in the evening. The morning services will begin at 10:30 and will be in charge of the Bible school. Seventeen young people will be baptized during the day, morning and evening.

Children's exercises; "Morn of Glory," Ascher; "Christ is Risen," Simper; "We Declare Unto You," Matthews. Mrs. Grace Robinson will sing "Hallelujah." Miss Iona Wood will preside at the organ.

CONGREGATIONAL.

Sunday-school service; prelude, recitation, "A Little Blossom," Edith Gautier; recitation, "Do You Know?" Marion Hylan; scripture read by Miss Whitehall's class; tenor solo, James MacClymont; songs by members of primary department; recitation, "The Easter's Story," Ruth Barrett and Evelyn Mundy; recitation, "How Did You Know," Lillian Rice; cornet solo, Carl Evans; recitation, "The Little April Breeze," Shirley Way; recitation, "My Easter Egg," Margaret Barrett, Welles Clawson, Leona Curtis, Ronald Morgan and Ruth MacClymont; benediction; Mrs. Evans, 'cellist, and Henry Brandt, violinist, will also assist in the musical numbers.

ST. JOSEPH'S.

Solemn high mass at 10:30 a. m. Processional; "Kyrie," "Gloria," from Wiegand's mass in E flat; "Regina Coeli," Giorza; "Credo," Weigand; "Sanctus," Berger; "Agnus Dei," Weigand; recessional; "Rejoice for Christ is Risen," soprano solo by Miss Sadie Lee. Mrs. Harry DeMeza will preside at the organ. J. E. Bailey will direct.

WARREN CHAPEL.

Morning service, 11 o'clock; organ prelude, "Easter Down," Ashmall; anthem, "All Hail, O Morn of Glory," Geibel; organ postlude, "Religious Mediations," Decq; evening service at 7:45: "Festival March," Ashmall; anthem, "To Thy Great Name," Fearis; anthem, "Rejoice, the Lord is Risen," Sheldon; anthem, organ postlude in F Westenholme.

GRACE P. E.

Processional, "Welcome Happy Morning;" special psalm, "Christ Our Passover;" "Te Deum Jubilate," Jordan in C Festival; "Messa Solenelle," Gounod; anthems, "Break Into Joy," Barnby; "He is Risen," Clare; recessional, "Jesus Christ is Risen." The choir of forty men and boys will be augmented with trumpets and drums and will be under the direction of S. Frederick Smith, organist and choirmaster.

HEAVENLY REST CHURCH.

Holy Eucharist, 7 a. m., 8 a. m. and 11 a. m.; children's service and address, 3 p. m.; evensong and address, 7:30 p. m. At the 11 o'clock service a special musical program will be rendered under the direction of Juan A. Babcock, choirmaster, and Miss Laura Long, organist. The offertory anthem will be "Christ the Lord is Risen Today," by Roberts, and Simper's communion service in E flat will be sung throughout the service. In the evening the offertory anthem will be "Christ is Risen from the Dead," by Hall.

FIRST M. E.

Morning, organ and violin; anthem, "As It Began to Dawn," Gloria Patri; offertory, violin solo, sermon; anthem, "Now If Christ be Preached," Rogers; prayer and benediction; organ; evening: organ and violin; anthem, "As It Began to Dawn," Harker; Gloria Patri, offertory, violin solo; cantata, "Death and Life," Shelley; anthem, "Christ Being Raised," Rogers; benediction, organ. The following soloists will render selections: Miss Laura E. Gustafson, soprano, Miss Ethel Kinnaman, contralto; Alexander MacGowan, tenor; Edgar A. Cole, baritone. Clifford A. Braider, the organist, will direct the musical program. Miss Edith Rubel is to accompany on the violin.

FIRST BAPTIST.

Special music by the choir at the morning service at 11 o'clock. Prelude, "Cantilene," Gotterman; violin and organ; anthems, "The Strife is O'er," Mendelssohn; "Upon the First Day of the Week," Foster; selection from "Penitence, Pardon and Peace," (part 3) Maunder; offertory, contralto solo, "There Is a Green Hill," Gounod; chorus, "Unfold, Ye Portals," from the "Redemption," Gounod; organ postlude, "Taceta," Bach. There will be no evening service.

Wide Range of Bids on New Post Office; Charles Gilpin of Philadelphia Is Lowest--Two Local Firms In Twenty-One Bidders

(Special to the Daily Press.)

Washington, April 3—Charles Gilpin, of Philadelphia, was found to be the lowest bidder for the construction of Plainfield's new postoffice building when the bids were opened in the Treasury Department late yesterday afternoon. He submitted three bids, one of $82,978, using limestone, and the other, $105,100, using marble, and a third bid of $120,950, if Georgia marble is used.

The J. Krorse Company, of New York, was the lowest bidder on sandstone construction, its bid being $89,000 and the second lowest bidder on limestone construction. There were twenty-one bidders in all. The estimates went as high as $139,600 for marble, $117,000 for limestone and $115,000 for sandstone construction.

S. W. Mathew & Sons, of Trenton, were the third lowest bidder. B. F. Tallamy & Brother and John C. Abbott, both of Plainfield, submitted bids. Among the highest competitors were New Jersey bidders on the contract. It is expected that the award will be made in the course of a month.

The new structure will be a classic building of Italian renaissance design, having a collonnaded front. It will be one story high, about one hundred feet square, with splendid interior accommodations for the postal business. The exterior facing for the walls will be stone, the roof composition and the building will be of fireproof construction throughout.

The public lobby will have a terrazzo floor, marble wainscot, cast metal screen and windows. The room set apart for the postmaster will have the usual office finish and will have every convenience. The building will face Watchung avenue and the only entrance for the public will be on that thoroughfare. The total appropriation for land and building amounts to $150,000.

DEATH COMES TO J. PHILIP KIRCH

Following an illness of several years with a pulmonary complaint, J. Philip Kirch died yesterday afternoon at 5:30 at the home of his parents, Freeholder and Mrs. George Kirch, of 116 Somerset street. He had sought relief at many places and returned to the borough only a week ago from Florida, where he had been during the winter.

Mr. Kirch was in his thirty-seventh year and had resided in the city and borough practically all his life. He was engaged in business locally at one time, conducting a tobacco store on North avenue and had also had been employed as a traveling salesman. His friends and acquaintances numbered in the many hundreds as he had been active in local affairs while his health permitted. He was a member of the North Plainfield Exempt Firemen's Association.

Beside his parents, Mr. Kirch is survived by the following brothers and sisters, all residing here: Augustus, Robert, Joseph and Harry Kirch; Mrs. Lafayette Rosenstiehl, Mrs. Charles O. Smith and Mrs. Laura Cronin. The funeral will be held at the parents home, Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock and will be in charge of Rev. J. Y. Broek. Burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

ANNOUNCE ENGAGEMENT OF REV. JOHN Y. BROEK

Mrs. William Tubbs, of New York, today announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Florence B. Tubbs, to the Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, this city. Miss Tubbs belongs to the Collegiate Reformed church, of New York, is a member of the Women's Board of Domestic Missions, the Council of Women for Home Missions and is actively interested in religious and philanthropic work in New York.

Rev. Mr. Broek has been the pastor of Trinity Reformed church for the past six years, coming here from the Grand Avenue Reformed church, Asbury Park, his first pastorate. He has been very successful in his work here. No date has been set for the wedding.

HOLY CROSS.

Holy communion will be celebrated at 7:30. There will be no Sunday-school in the morning. Morning prayer at 10 o'clock. Second celebration of holy communion at 11 oclock. Evening prayer at 7:45 when the Lenten Sunday school offering will be taken up.

OPPOSE BUILDING CODE AMENDMENT

PASS A RESOLUTION

Craftsmen Discuss Appointment of Out of Town School Inspecor—Claim That Eight-hour Law is Violated on Local Sewer Work.

At one of the most entnusiastic meetings the Building Trades Council has held in several months, four important matters were given thorough discussion last night, one of them resulting in the Council going on record as being absolutely unanimously opposed to the proposed anti-shingle amendment to the building code. A resolution was passed to this effect and copies of it will be sent to the Mayor and Common Council.

In the general talk which followed the introduction of the shingle proposition, numerous points were advanced which put the matter in another light from that in which it is generally viewed. It was declared by several of the speakers that the percentage of fires started through shingle roofs was very small, that many houses are so built they cannot stand the weight of slate or other fireproof material and others are so constructed that shingles have to be used to prevent too much heat being generated in the top floor. Numerous other opposing points were mentioned and they will be embodied in an open letter at the proper time.

The fact that the city Board of Education has appointed an out of town man as inspector for the new Evergreen Avenue School was also taken up by the Council. It was made known that eight local men, all competent to fulfill the duties required, had applied for the position but had been turned down. Several of them it was said, were offered the place at a salary at about one-half less than that which the appointee is said to be receiving. Owing to the fact that authentic figures and other details were lacking the matter was put over until the next meeting for final action.

The Council's attention was directed to the fact that the State 8-hour law on the new joint sewer work is being violated. The statutes makes it imperative for all Federal State and municipal work to be done on the eight-hour day basis and it was said that the sewer employes are working nine. The violation does not interfere with any branch of the Trades Council but is in direct contradiction of the law. The mayor

ACCUSED PHYSICIAN HELD IN $300 BAIL

After being found guilty by Judge DeMeza in the city court, this morning, of practising osteopathy without a State license, Chester L. Brown, colored, of 319 Plainfield avenue, was held in $300 bail to await the action of the Grand Jury. Health Officer Randolph Chandler testified that Brown's license had been revoked by the State Board last June. This Brown denied, stating that he had not been barred until October.

It was alleged, however, that he had practised in this city, having attended two patients since the first of the year. He offered no satisfactory explanation for not removing the sign on his house after being barred last October.

The defendant was arrested by Sergeant Maurice Higgins, yesterday afternoon. He claims to have been graduated from the Still School of Osteopathy in Des Moines.

NOTT ENGINE OFFICIAL TEST POSTPONED BY TODAYS STORM

Today's unusual and unlooked for snow storm has compelled a postponement of the official test of the new Nott Fire Engine, scheduled for this afternoon. A large number of visitors from neighboring fire departments came to town this morning to witness the try-out but at noon Chief T. O. Doane gave up all hope of making any attempt. The new date for the test cannot be set until the Board of Underwriters give its sanction.

The storm of today brings relief to the fire department from the many grass fires which have occurred during the dry spell. The firemen answered a total of nine calls yesterday for blazes in grass or woods and several of them were very bad.

ALL DAY MEETING.

The Christian and Missionary Alliance Society will hold an all-day meeting on Monday in the German Reformed church at Duer street and Craig place. From 10 to 12 a. m. there will be a prayer service and from 2 to 5 in the afternoon reports of the various branches in New Jersey will be read. At 7:45 in the evening there will be addresses by the Rev. W. W. Newberry and Rev. Mr. Gates, of Asbury Park, and others. All are cordially invited to attend the meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Gloak sailed today on the Creole of the Southern Pacific Line for Oakland, California, where they will visit relatives.

TWO REVISIONS TO BE ACTED ON

Second Amendment to Police Ordinance Will be Presented to Council.

SUGGESTED BY BOARD

Will Give That Body Power to Act on Salaries of Policemen on Sick Leave—New Ranking Amendment Also to Come up for Discussion.

When the Common Council meets for its April session Monday night, one of the most important issues to be presented will be the amendments to the present police ordinance creating new rankings and the provision of a pay clause for sick and disabled policemen. In addition to the previously outlined ranking change the Council will be requested to act on an amendment making it optional with the Police Board to pay an officer detained from work, whether or not the cause is due to an illness contracted or an injury sustained while on duty.

Section 3 of the present ordinance provides "That members of the force shall be paid, at the discretion of the Police Board, for any time they severally shall be disabled from the performance of duty by reason of physical injuries, provided that the Board shall be satisfied that such injuries were the direct result of personal violence inflicted upon them, respectively, in the performance of their respective duties; and that any member of the force who is temporarily absent from duty because of illness or disability of any nature, shall receive full pay during the first two weeks of such absence or disability, and half pay during the following two weeks."

The amendment, drawn by Assistant Corporation Counsel Walter L. Fretfield, Jr., give the Police Board power to extend payment or provide the regular salary of a policeman who is temporarily incapacitated, whether or not his illness or injury is incident to the performance of duty. In other words, it makes it unnecessary to bring the matter before the Council for a special resolution after the four weeks' time limit is reached and gives the Police Board the power to extend payment as it sees fit.

The ranking amendment eliminates the offices of detective-sergeant and roundsmen and introduces the following order: Chief, captain, lieutenant, sergeants, patrolmen and patrol driver. The last named office is created from the former rank of doorman. If the amendment is passed the roundsmen in the future will be known as sergeants and the number will be increased to three. They will do night desk duty work and the work of roundsmen, on shifts. This will relieve Captain John J. Flynn, of night duty and give the city, in Flynn and Sergeant Higgins, who will be known as lieutenant, two capable men for outdoor day work.

The Board of Police will also frame new department rules fixing posts and the regular assignments of patrolmen, as well as the duties of officers. The change, if it meets with the favorable consideration of the Council, will mean no additional salaries, except the $100 increase pay for the patrolmen to be raised to sergeants.

P. H. S. GIRLS ENJOY A MOUNTAIN "HIKE"

Eight girls from the Plainfield High School took a long "hike' yesterday over the mountains. The party started early in the morning and returned late in the afternoon. They took their lunch with them, and ate this near Smalley's stone crusher, which they explored. After returning from the hike the party enjoyed a swim in the High School pool. The following young ladies took the trip: The Misses Dorothy Simons, Jennie Peacock, Ruth Fuller, Florence Ryder, Mary Simons, Nathalie Goetter, Helen Peacock and Lois Goetter.

EITEL MAY HAVE STARTED FOR SEA

Washington Unable to Confirm Report as Blizzard Has Cut Communications.

LOCHWOOD TORPEDOED

British Vessel Latest Victim of Submarines in English Channel—Son of Former French President Has Been Killed at the Front.

Philadelphia, April 3.—The Evening Telegraph says that the Prinz Eitel Fredrich has made a dash for the sea. The paper states that the information is as authentic as it gets from any source.

Washington, April 3.—Reports that the German auxiliary cruiser Prinz Eitel Friedrich had seized the chance offered by the blizzard that now is raging along the coast, and had started on its dash, aroused officials here today. All wires, both telephone and telegraph, are down between here and Newport News and Norfolk and confirmation of the unofficial information has been found impossible. Assistant Secretary Peters admitted having heard the rumor but said he had been unable to get in touch with Collector of the Port Hamilton at Newport News.

Sweeping down from the northeast on a high wind blizzard arrived in the Capitol today. The snow has interferred with telegraph communication.

The rumor that the Eitel Friedrich had made its escape from Newport News emanated from the weather bureau today, it was learned. A fragmentary message coming over the wire this morning evidently from Newport News conveyed the information that the ship had left its pier. No verification of the rumor could be made as the message was lost before the full text could be ascertained. Officials of the bureau stated later that they could not tell where the message came from. While Assistant Secretary Peters, of the Treasury Department, in charge of custom matters, was of the opinion that this was an ideal day for the sensational escape of the German ship, he doubted whether Capt. Theireichens had put to sea. Supplies taken aboard, Mr. Peters said, could at best only have lasted for a few days and that the ship in its present condition could not make better speed than 18 knots.

New York, April 3.—The Cunard Line Steamer Lusitania, one of the finest vessels crossing the ocean, did not leave her pier today and is now tied up with no indication of getting away this afternoon. Everything had been made ready for the sailing of the big vessel when the rumor became persistent that the German converted cruiser Prinz Eitel Friedrich had slipped out to sea from Newport News, under cover of the storm. It was then announced that the Lusitania would remain in her dock until the storm had cleared away. Officials of the line said that it would be impossible for the ship to leave until the snow abated. They deny that the possible movements of the Eitel Friedrich had anything to do with stopping the vessel.

Middlesborough, Eng., April 3.—The British Steamer Lochwood, 2,042 tons registered, was torpedoed last night in the English channel by a German submarine. The crew was allowed to leave in boats before the steamer was destroyed and all were landed safely this morning.

Paris, April 3—The Red Cross has informed his relatives of the death of Captain Claude Casimir Ferrier, son of the former President of France.

Rome, April 3.—Signore Tittoni, the Italian Ambassador to Paris, is expected to arrive in Rome today. Great importance is attributed to the errand on which he has returned to his home capital. The ministry will meet this afternoon.

Berlin, April 3, (by wireless).—The following statement was given out at German headquarters today:

"Belgian troops attempted yesterday to win back Klesterhoek farm, which we occupied March 31, but failed. A French charge in Priestwall La Pretre Forest, failed. French attacks on the Heights near the south of Lower Aspach, west of Muelhausen were repulsed. On the Eastern front there were no important events yesterday."

"THE LAW OF ATTRACTION."

W. Frederick Keeler, of New York, will address the Practical Christianity meeting at the Waldorf, 134 Crescent avenue, tomorrow afternoon at 3:30. Subject: "The Law of Attraction."

TWENTY CHICKS CONSUMED IN BLAZE AT NEW MARKET

A chicken coop belonging to Joseph Penrose burned to the ground yesterday morning. A brooder containing twenty chicks was in the coop at the time and it is believed that the fire was the result of the lamp exploding. All of the chicks were destroyed. The fire, which broke out shortly after eleven o'clock was discovered by Mr. Penrose, who notified the New Market fire department over the telephone. The New Market fire laddies arrived on the scene in short order and with a line of hose and chemicals did good work in preventing the fire from spreading to a nearby barn.

President Alvah Gray, of the local bank, has been visiting his sister at Califon since the middle of the week.

Mrs. Helen Brakeley and sons, Maxwell and Russell, departed this afternoon for Easton, Pa., where they will visit relatives over Easter.

The condition of Mrs. Charles Dodwell, of Jackson avenue, who has Bright's disease, shows no improvement.

Fred Tallamy will sing at both services in the Congregational church at Bound Brook tomorrow.

Mrs. John Renouf, of Bound Brook, a former resident of the borough, was a visitor here Thursday afternoon.

Bernard McGovern, of Greenbrook road, who has been suffering with throat trouble, returned to his duties as towerman in Tower No. 1 at Elizabethport yesterday after an absence of six days.

Mrs. Paul Ratti, of North avenue, is suffering with a bad cold.

Marshal Shugars put a suffering dog out of misery last night. The animal had been run over by an automobile on North avenue early in the evening.

George Cameron, of New Market road, returned yesterday morning from California after an absence of six weeks.

PARENT-TEACHER'S ELECT.

At the annual meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association held in the Lincoln School recently the following officers were elected for the year: Mrs. George V. Vander Veer, president; Guy H. Rentschler, first vice-president; Mrs. W. A. Houghtaling, second vice-president; Mrs. J. E. Dix, recording secretary; Mrs. Mahlon R. Dayton, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. J. N. Newton Apgar, treasurer.

Holy Innocent's church—8:30 a. m., celebration of the Holy Communion. 2:30 p. m., Sunday-school; 3:30 p. m., Easter church service with special music.

St. John's church—Easter music at both masses.

South Plainfield.

Easter will be observed at the Baptist church with appropriate services and exercises. At 11 o'clock the pastor will preace on "The Resurrection." Special music will be rendered by the choir and soloists. At 8 o'clock in the evening the children of the Sunday-school will give an emblematic service entitled "Easter Day Around the World." This service will be educational and its aim is the deepening of missionary interest. In connection with this service the choir and congregation will render a musical service entitled "The Living Christ." Great care is being given to the decorations. The public is invited. Bible school at 10 a. m., Junior Endeavor at 3:30 o'clock and young people's meeting at 7 o'clock.

The annual business meeting of the Baptist church and congregation will be held in the Baraca room next Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. Two trustees are to be elected and other important business to be transacted. Reports from the church officers and from the co-operating organizations will be given. The ordinance of baptism will be administered to a number of candidates as soon as Rev. J. J. Allen recovers from his illness.

Mrs. John Hogan and son, John, have returned home after spending a day with friends at New Brunswick.

Miss Nellie Carter, of New Market, is spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Thornton.

Miss Marjorie Soper and Miss Dorothy Zimmerman, of Newark, are spending the week-end with Miss Soper's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Soper.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Klinger, of Newark, are spending a few days with Mr. Klinger's brother, Harry Klinger, of this place.

Bound Brook.

Special Easter music will be rendered at the services in the Presbyterian church tomorrow, the regular quartette, Mrs. R. H. Brokaw, soprano; Miss Cressence Maier, alto; Andrew Higgins, tenor; Hayden D. Austin, bass, will be assisted by Miss Mae Higgins, Mrs. William Lair and Miss Bessie Snyder, sopranos; Misses Edner Yawger and Sarah Davies, altos; LeRoy Veghte, Walter Rugen and John C. Maier, tenors; Jacob Byer and John Staats, basses. The morning sermon will be by Rev. C. J. Culp, and the subject, "The Easter Victory"; evening topic, "The Outlook for Human Immortality."

The following musical program will be given at the Congregational church tomorrow by a double quartette, consisting of Miss Brokaw, Mrs. McGill, LeRoy Fisher, assisted by Mrs. Theodore Mantz, Mrs. H. R. Moyer, F. B. Tallamy, Wyckoff Suydam and William B. Smith. The sermon will be by Rev. William T. Boult, the subject being, "Souls That Go Marching on."

There will be special music at the Methodist church tomorrow. The sermon will be by Rev. Daniel C. Dorchester, and the theme, "The Easter Lillies and Their Messages." Evening service at 7:30 p. m.; sermon, "Not Far from the Kingdom."

'Plains & Fanwood.

Miss Carrie Bettman, the borough real estate agent, closed a transaction yesterday whereby Bradley Norton, brother of Thomas H. Norton, of Martine avenue, purchased the property of Spencer Talmadge, on Midway avenue, taking in the triangle bound on the other two sides by Woodland avenue and Forest road. The place is widely known as "The Old Station," as it was remodeled from the old Fanwood station when the New Jersey Central ran along what is now Midway avenue, about thirty years ago. It is said that after making extensive improvements Mr. and Mrs. Norton will take up their residence there.

Word has been received from Mobile, Alabama, where Spencer Talmadge has been stopping for the past six months, that he has been permanently transferred by the company with which he was connected and will not return to the borough. During the five years he resided here, Mr. Talmadge took an active part in local affairs, and was president of the Scotch Plains Parish House council. He was also at one time a member of the Borough Council.

Miss Margaret Henderson returned home today from New Haven, Conn., where she had been visiting friends.

A large number of people attended All Saints' Episcopal church, last night, to listen to a very interesting sermon by the pastor, Rev. Oscar S. Michaels, which was illustrated with Tisot's wonderful pictures of the Passion, depicting the Crucifixion.

It is expected that Rev. Robert E. Marshall, the new pastor of the local Methodist church, will have charge of the services for the first time tomorrow. The members of the Epworth League will meet in the evening as usual and Easter exercises of the Sunday-school will be held in the afternoon at 3 o'clock. A program of music and recitations has been arranged.

Rev. Oscar S. Michaels will celebrate Holy Communion in All Saints' Episcopal church at 8 o'clock tomorrow while the Easter exercises of the Sunday-school will be at 10:15, when a special program will be rendered. At the 11 o'clock service the pastor will again administer Holy Communion and the choir will sing the piece composed by Bumet, "If We Believe that Jesus Died and Rose Again." The text of the pastor's sermon will be "Go Tell His Deciples and Peter."

The services in the Baptist church will be held at the usual hours tomorrow and will be in charge of Rev. J. Madison Hare. The church choir will render special music at the morning service and a program of music will also be included in the Sunday-school exercises. The B. Y. P. U. will meet in the evening.

The Adult Bible class and Sunday-school will meet together at the Willow Grove chapel tomorrow for exercises under the direction of William Sisserson.

Those residents of the township living near King street were kept busy early last night putting out grass fires. It is thought that tramps or others were responsible. The residents of Plainfield just across Terrill road, not far distant, had the same trouble, but the engine at the Netherwood firehouse extinguished the blaze.

Following the advice of the Borough Council the residents of the West End of town sent a petition to the Board of Freeholders about the drainage conditions and it has evidently done some good as a committee has been appointed to give them immediate relief.

The young people of Scotch Plains enjoyed their weekly social in the lecture room of the Baptist church, last night, in the form of an Easter party. The room was prettily decorated and a pleasant program of music and games filled the evening. Refreshments were served by the committee.

The annual election of vestrymen for the ensuing year will be held at the Episcopal church Monday at 8 o'clock.

The borough Board of Health is scheduled to meet in the Fanwood firehouse on Monday night and the Council on Wednesday night.

RECEIVER NAMED FOR I. M. M. STEAMSHIP LINES

New York, April 3.—United States District Court Judge Hough today appointed Philip A. S. Franklin, vice-president of the International Mercantile Marine Company, receiver for the company on the application of the New York Trust Company, trustee for the $52,744,000 4½ per cent. collateral trust bonds on which interest has been defaulted.

The application was made this morning for the appointment of receivers in connection with a suit brought by the New York Trust Co. against the International Mercantile Marine Company, The Fidelity Trust Company and the International Navigation Company, Limited. Judge Hough was not at his office today and the lawyers went to his home.

It is understood that the receivership will only relate to the properties directly owned by the company, such as the American Line and Red Star Line. It will not in any way affect the so-called English subsidiary companies, such as the White Star Line, Atlantic Transport Line, Dominion Line or Leland Line.

Emerson E. Parvin, of Watchung avenue, is secretary, and Horace G. Phillips, of Kensington avenue, treasurer of the International Mercantile Marine Company. It is said that the action is friendly and has been brought about because of the loss in business due to the war.

TRINITY MISSION BAND HOLDS ANNUAL MEETING

The Young Women's Mission Band of Trinity Reformed church held an enthusiastic meeting at the home of Miss Helen Smith, on Central avenue, yesterday afternoon at which time reports of the various officers were read and officers for the ensuing year were elected. After a short devotional service led by Miss Mable Wilson, Mrs. A. B. Cole, president of the band, took the chair and conducted the meeting.

The secretary read a very encouraging report of the work done by the Band during the past year in helping the poor and needy of Plainfield. It has been instrumental in helping the foreign and domestic boards in their work beside doing much individual good. At Christmas time the Band sent a box to the Sunday School Mission in the west, fourteen garments to the mission in Arabia, while thirty garments were distributed among the poor in Plainfield. The report of the treasurer showed receipts of $160.00 for the past year.

The following officers were re-elected for the coming twelve months at the meeting yesterday: President, Mrs. A. B. Cole; vice-president, Mrs. Arthur Stevens; secretary, Mrs. William Stafford, and treasurer, Miss Ethel VanZandt.

AUTO PUSHES TROLLEY CAR OFF THE TRACK, NONE HURT

An automobile owned and driven by B. J. Harris, of Central avenue, collided with a Netherwood trolley car at Seventh and Richmond streets at 1 o'clock this afternoon. The force of the crash caused the front of the auto to be stove in and the trolley was pushed off the track.

According to eyewitnesses the accident was an unavoidable one, the blinding snow being responsible, as neither the motorman nor the car driver saw the other vehicle approaching. No one was injured.

EXPERIENCED COMMITTEE TO ACT AT THE CHARITY BALL

The following excellent floor committee has been selected to assume charge of the dancing at the charity ball to be held Easter Monday night in Columbus Hall: Floor manager, Thomas A. Moore; assistants, Garret Keating, John J. 'OBrien, William V. Sullivan, Joseph G. Carty, William H. Brown, D. R. McCormick and M. H. Ward, of Plainfield, and J. A. Traynor, of Westfield.

All of the above mentioned have had long experience in dance and social affairs and can be counted upon to perform their duties in an absolutely successful manner. One point they have in mind is to make every person dance each number, if they so desire, the committee making certain to bring about introductions and pave the way.

COMPLAINANT GOT HIMSELF IN "DUTCH" IN THIS CASE

Because he was accused of killing chickens instead of allowing the rabbi to do the work, Frank Moschowitz, a West Third street butcher, punched Benjamin Epstein, of Plainfield avenue, in the face last Sunday and was hailed to the city police court this morning, to answer to a charge of assault and battery.

During the examination of witnesses, it was brought out that the complainant was the aggressor and in making disposition of the case Judge DeMeza found the two parties equally guilty and fined each $5 with the option of a twenty days' sojourn in Elizabeth. J. Henry Crane appeared as counsel for Epstein and Isaac Kunzman represented Moschowitz.

MRS. MARY REID DIES IN HER SIXTY-EIGHTH YEAR

Mrs. Mary Reid, widow of James Reid, died last night at her home on Liberty street, following one week's illness with erysipelas. She was sixty-eight years old and had been a resident of Plainfild for half a century, her home always being on Liberty street. Mr. Reid, whose death occurred many years ago, was a veteran of the Civil War and will be remembered by many Plainfielders. Mrs. Reid had many acquaintances and was well liked by everyone. She was a communicant of St. Mary's church and a member of the Rosary Society and the League of the Sacred Heart.

Surviving are one daughter, Mrs. William O'Connor, of Orange, and eight grandchildren. The funeral will be held in St. Mary's church Monday morning at 9 o'clock and burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

The Women's League of St. Joseph's church will hold its monthly meeting in Debele's Hall on Monday evening. Following the business routine, there will be an informal social hour and special entertainment.

The Young Woman Home from School can settle the clothes question very pleasantly by a visit to Little Gray Salons.

If it is a suit she wants (one can't get along without at least one suit), there are scores of the smartest little tailored and novelty suits at $18.75 to $68.50, every color from midnight blue to soft biscuit shades and putty color, not to mention English-looking tweeds and checks.

Lovely little silk frocks for street and afternoon wear and just right for the informal dress one wears to dinner at boarding school or college are $15 to $55. Sizes 14 to 20 years.

Second floor, Old Building.

Boys' Week

Parents who will put only the best clothing on their boys usually know where to find it.

Wanamaker standard knicker suits for boys, $9.75 to $16.50.

Wanamaker standard first-long-trouser suits for boys, $10.50 to $20.

Wanamaker washable Norfolk suits for boys, $5.

Wanamaker standard topcoats and reefers for boys, $5 to $18.

Second floor, Old Building.

Awnings, Window Shades or Slip Covers

Awnings

Wanamaker awnings are put up to stay. Rods and every bit of framework are guaranteed not to rust. The screw eye which holds the cord is grooved especially deep to hold. The awning materials are the best to be had anywhere. Green and white stripes are the favorite.

Window Shades

We use the gold medal winning King and Son Scotch Hollands and the rollers and fixtures are equally superior.

But window shades may be had here for 25c up!

Slip Covers

How cool a room seems with its furniture primly covered with a striped fabric or summery cretonne; nor is the cost exorbitant.

Pretty slip covering materials at 25c yard upwards.

Upholstering store—Third Gallery, New Building.

Last of All-wool Imported Dress Crepes at 28c Yard

Thousands of yards have been sold by us this year in special sales at a higher price.

But to close out this last shipment we shall place 4,500 yards on sale Monday morning at 28c a yard—a lower price than such materials ever sold for before.

They will make charming spring and summer dresses and negligees. Widths 38 to 42 inches.

Main Aisle Main Floor, Old Building.

Brides' Pianos

To any one less to be honored than a bride, a just good piano might be acceptable.

A SCHOMACKER
An EMERSON
A LINDEMAN
or the celebrated KNABE.

The Wanamaker Store is sole headquarters in New York for three of these four of the world's famous pianos, and for the

Angelus

—the most wonderful thing in the world; the player-piano mechanism that is to be had in any of the four great pianos named, and only here in all New York.

Pianos $220 up.
Player-pianos $395 up.
Used instruments accepted in part exchange. Music rolls for all 88-note player-pianos. Light terms of payment on all purchases.

AWARDS ARE READY FOR BEST WORKERS IN RACE FOR VOTES

Tonight Brings End of Special Period in Contest and Winners Will Have Good Start Toward Goal in Trans-Continental Tour Race.

First Prize.

Second Prize.

Merchandise Certificate, good for $25.00 in trade at Woodhull & Martin Co., 163 East Front street, and $15.00 in gold.

Third Prize.

The above extra prizes will be awarded in the order named above to the three candidates, regardless of district limitations, who have to their credit the greatest number of votes issued and voted between midnight Wednesday, March 17, and 10 p. m. tonight. By 10 o'clock tonight means that the door to the Press office will be locked at 10 p. m. sharp and all candidates inside the office before the above hour will be able to get their subscriptions in and have the votes issued to count for the special prizes.

When turning in subscriptions it is positively necessary to plainly indicate whether the subscriptions are new or old. An old subscriber is one who is regularly receiving the Press by carrier, newsdealer or mail. It is not permissible for a subscriber to discontinue the Press and then start the paper in another's name in order that votes may be issued as on a new subscription.

No subscription will be accepted by the contest department unless turned in on a regular subscription blank. In other words, the contest department will not have time to fill out blanks for candidates. Take care in filling in the blanks that all spaces are filled in properly; do not get the name of the subscriber in the space for the candidate's name on the ballot. Be sure that all dates are filled in and proper addresses. Try and have your total amount of cash all figured out and separated from the subscription blanks, and by no means have each subscription folded up with the cash inside. Hand your subscriptions in in one package and the money to correspond in another. If this is carried out it will aid the contest department greatly, and delays will be greatly minimized. A big lot of business will naturally be crowded into the last few hours, and if the candidates have everything in good order the work of recording subscriptions and issuing of receipts can be accomplished with dispatch.

The three winners of the special prizes will be announced in the Press just as soon as the work of verification as to old and new readers has been accomplished, which should be the early part of next week.

The Week's Work In Brief

Plant hardy roses, pruning these more severely than old roses of the same sort already established.

Plant outdoors radishes, lettuce and onions.

Plant indoors muskmelon, watermelon and cucumber. For the flower garden sow in flats indoors seeds of China asters stocks and zinnias.

Transplant to other flats or to pots such seedlings as may be crowding.

APRIL is a month of sudden changes. Light and even severe freezes are to be expected. Most of these, however, can be anticipated and protection against them easily provided. A light covering of newspapers will usually prove sufficient. This is quickly applied and the average city or suburban gardener, cultivating a limited area, every foot of which must be made to yield its utmost, does not begrudge the labor involved since it insures crops a fortnight or more in advance of the regular season. He must take chances, in other words, in the hope always that the end will justify the risk. Almost always it does.

Work in April, it must also be remembered, is subject to interruptions by rainy weather. Every favorable day, therefore, must be turned to full advantage, and delayed work brought rapidly up to date. But, while haste is essential, it should never be gained at the expense of thoroughness. On the latter, three-fourths of all gardening success depends.

As soon as possible plant hybrid perpetual and rugosa roses. The best soil is a deep loam, the best site is one where the sun shines the greater part of the day, remote from large trees, with a southern, or, next best, eastern exposure, and well drained. Hybrid perpetuals prefer a stiffer soil than the tenderer varieties. Set these two feet apart and the rugosas 30 inches apart, and all a half-inch deeper than they were grown in the nursery field or in pots. Prune severely, taking care that the topmost bud points outward. The rugosas and climbers, however, should be pruned as little as possible. Removing the weakest canes and shortening back the stronger is sufficient. Among the best and most reliable hybrid perpetuals are General Jacqueminot, Paul Neyron, Ulrich Brunner, Frau Karl Druschi, M. P. Wilder and Anne de Diesbach. In the rugosa group the best are Conrad Ferdinand Meyer, New Century and Sir Thomas Lipton. The best climbers are Dorothy Perkins, Excelsa, Hiawatha, Lady Gay, Trier and Tausendschoen. Avoid the Crimson Rambler.

Annual vines serve admirably to shut out an unpleasant view or to cover a fence. Gain time in accomplishing the end desired by starting the seed indoors. For this purpose, use two-inch pots. Gourds, moonvine, coboea scandens, scarlet runner and hyacinth bean are excellent for the purpose. Plant the seed one-eighth inch deep in the pots. Prune the hardy vines immediately. Clematis, as a rule, blooms on new wood; prune back severely, especially the large-flowered sorts. Wisteria will give more bloom if the shoots are shortened back to within a few inches of the main stem.

Herbaceous perennials, such as iris, funkia, hemerocallis, phlox should be lifted and divided every second or third year. This should be done at once and if new perennials are to be planted, these should go into the ground at once. All transplant successfully in spring; peonies, however, should be set out in September.

Sow lettuce and radish seed in drills, the former one-fourth and the latter one-half inch deep. Between the lettuce drills, which should be twenty inches apart, sow the radish seed—these will mature and be out of the way before the lettuce demands the space. Spring-sown seed of onions produces the fall crop. Sow thickly one-half inch deep in drills one foot apart. Muskmelon watermelon and cucumber require in the early stages, practically the same treatment. Sow in berry boxes or five-inch pots—paper pots preferably—half a dozen seed of either of the melons or of cucumber to a pot. Plant one-half-inch deep the watermelon seed eye down. A seedlings appear, thin to the strongest plant in each pot. Bush muskmelon, it may be remembered, takes up the least space.

It is of vital importance at this time to keep three or four suggestions constantly in mind. Remember that as seedlings planted in flats increase in size and begin to crowd, no time should be wasted in getting them into roomier quarters. Transplant to other flats or to pots. On warm, pleasant days, give the seedlings as much air as possible; this is the beginning of the "hardening off" process and also is a safeguard against loss by "damping off." In staking out the vegetable garden, run the rows north and south wherever possible. In planting trees, shrubs or perennials or laying out beds for annuals, avoid isolated, specimen planting and geometric designs, unless in a formal garden. Group in borders along boundary lines, and lay these out in long, graceful curves. Throughout the month, observe flowers, bulbs, shrubs and trees in bloom and note the names of attractive varieties to the end that these can be planted in the fall in your own home grounds.

BETWEEN The Bayonne Building Association No. 2, Complainant, and Vincenty Yaneczko et als., Defendants. Fi. fa. for sale of mortgaged premises. Returnable May 26, 1915. Benny & Gruden, solicitors.

By virtue of the above stated writ, to me directed and delivered, I shall sell at public vendue at the office of the Sheriff of Hudson County, in the County Court House of said county at Jersey City, N. J., on Thursday, the Fifteenth day of April, A. D. nineteen hundred and fifteen, at two o'clock in the afternoon, all the following described land and premises, with the appurtenances, being the same premises described in said writ, that is to say:

ALL, that tract or parcel of land and premises, hereinafter particularly described, situate, lying and being in the City of Bayonne, in the County of Hudson and State of New Jersey: Beginning at a point on the Northwesterly side of Prospect Avenue (formerly known as Railroad Avenue) distant two hundred (200) feet Northwesterly from the corner formed by the intersection of the Westerly side of Prospect Avenue with the Northerly side of East Twenty-first Street; thence running (1) Northwesterly along the line of lands now or formerly of John Thompson one hundred (100) feet to the right of way of the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey; thence running (2) Northeasterly and along the said right of way twenty-five (25) feet; thence (3) Southeasterly and at right angles to Prospect Avenue one hundred (100) feet to the Northwesterly side of Prospect Avenue; thence (4) Southwesterly and along the said Northwesterly side of Prospect Avenue twenty-five (25) feet to the point or place of beginning. Being known as lot number six (6) in block three hundred and three (303) on the Tax Maps of the City of Bayonne now in use. Being the same premises conveyed to the said defendants Wincenty Yaneczko and Brunislava his wife, by deed dated March 14th, 1911, the said mortgage having been given to secure a portion of the consideration money for said conveyances.

ALSO all those other certain lots, tracts or parcels of land and premises, hereinafter particularly described, situate, lying and being in the Township of Fanwood, in the County of Union and State of New Jersey, known and distinguished on a certain map of building lots at Fanwood, New Jersey, said map being entitled "Map of Westfield Golf Park" and laid down on said map as lots numbered three (3), four (4), five (5), and six (6), each lot being twenty-five (25) feet in width front and rear by a depth of one hundred and fifty-one feet on each side, fronting on the West side of Plainfield Avenue; said map being on file in the office of the Register of the County of Union. The said second parcel being the same premises conveyed to the said Wincenty Yaneczko and Brunislava Yaneczko his wife by Euphemia E. Pierine, and husband, by deed bearing date the 21st day of May, 1907, and recorded in Liber 485 of Deeds for Union County, on page 512, together with all and singular the rights, privileges, hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging, or in any wise appertaining, and the reversions and remainders, rents, issues and profits thereof, and all the estate, right, title, interest, use, property, claim and demand of the said defendants of, in and to and out of the same.

The above described premises situate in the County of Hudson are subject to liens and encumbrances which, with their approximate amounts, are as follows: Taxes for the years 1912, $69.30; 1913, $65.80; 1914, $70.65, and water rents, $16.43, besides penalties and interest thereon.

The above described premises situate in the County of Union will be sold subject to liens thereon for taxes, assessments and other municipal encumbrances, the amount of which will be announced at the sale.

Dated, March 20th, 1915.

SHINGLE ROOFS

The proposition to amend the present building ordinance to include a clause prohibiting the further use of shingles for roofing purposes was not of my suggestion at the outset, but since it has been brought to my attention I give it my most hearty approbation. A letter from a far-sighted citizen called the attention of Mayor Calkins to the danger existing from inflammable shingles as a source of fire and its spread and already the idea has met with ready response from scores of citizens. However, any amendment to the ordinance depends upon the view taken by the Common Council, therefore what I have to say can only be taken in the light of suggestion. I know from my own experience that several fires have taken place in Plainfield in the past year that were indirectly due to shingle roofs. The wood becomes covered with a peculiar fuzz that is susceptible to any kind of flame, hence when bonfires are continually sending sparks into the air it is not to be wondered at when the covering of a barn or a house suddenly springs into a blaze without any apparent origin. Again when a conflagration starts while a stiff wind is blowing, roofs in every direction become ignited and the result is the partial destruction of a city as we witnessed at Salem, Massachusetts, last summer; Chelsea, Massachusetts seven years ago and Baltimore about nine years ago. Shingle roofs and innumerable air currents, caused by the various fires creating heat vacuums are the recognized causes of all three of these memorable devastations.

As I was hurrying to the Babcock Building fire on the morning of March 6, 1902, I saw a cinder larger than a man's hand drop on a roof at Central and Fifth street, immediately springing into a blaze. The fact that snow covered everything is all that saved that particular building and, I firmly believe, the entire city as fiery embers were carried from the blaze as far south as Eighth and Ninth streets. It is needless for me to ask how many people remember the query that was expressed everywhere after the Babcock fire: "Where would Plainfield have been if it hadn't been for the snow?"

From an economical point of view, it occurs to me that a slate roof or other familiar fireproof material, is cheaper in the end than shingles. Slate and shingles as material cost about the same, the only difference being there is an increase of about 5 per cent. in preparing a roof to receive the slate. Slate of almost any grade will last about thirty years while I know of one house that has had the same roofing for half a century. When shingles were made for roofs one hundred years ago they were made to stand all sorts of weather anywhere from seventy-five to a hundred years, but those used now-a-days seldom last more than fifteen years, frequently having to be entirely renewed in ten or twelve. A house which stood for many years on Watchung avenue and was torn down only a short time ago had its shingle roof put on in 1787 and when I was a contracting carpenter thirty years ago, I took the shingles off, trimmed up the ends and put them back on again. When the job was finished I can positively say no modern shingle roof could compare with it.

In speaking of the proposed change, a local architect remarked to me the other day: "How can we design a suitable Colonial building without shingles?" The question seems fair enough, but on the other hand I know of at least one residence in Plainfield of the strictly Colonial type that has a slate covering and so far as I can see it does not conflict with the established Revolutionary idea of what a home should look like. Another architect was with me at the time the question was put and he volunteered the remark that shingles could be dispensed with and the residences could be produced just the same. However, what I have to say is only written with the idea of showing why it would be a good idea to abolish any further use of shingles and to take precautionary measures now instead of saying "I told you so" when something happens. It is always best to be on the safe side and I am sure the Common Council will act upon the citizen's suggestion either one way or the other within the very near future.

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

"A Pair of Sixes," which is to appear at the Plainfield Theatre, Thursday night, April 8, is a farce by Edward Peple, and he has demonstrated that it is a mirthmaker of no mean capabilities. It is difficult for those who know something of the author's earlier efforts to believe that he could have produced a piece so full with fun and boisterous humor. "The Prince Chap," which was written by Mr. Peple, relies largely for its effect upon sentiment and bits of gentle comedy. Another of his plays, "The Littlest Rebel," is remembered for its old-fashioned sentiment. All of which shows that Mr. Peple is a versatile writer.

The policy of the Plainfield Theatre in providing the first "run" of Paramount pictures for its patrons has met with unqualified success. Several of the finest productions ever brought to this city have been shown during the past few weeks and the standard will be maintained during the coming week as the following announcements will indicate. Monday and Tuesday, Daniel Frohman's picturization of "The Crucible," with Miss Marguerite Clark in the leading role; Wednesday afternoon and night only, the dramatic sensation, "False Colors," featuring Lois Weber; Friday and Saturday, Mrs. Leslie Carter in "Du Barry" in six parts, taken from the manuscript of the play as produced under the direction of David Belasco. The last named film has only just been placed on the circuit and will undoubtedly draw capacity houses when shown here.

The attraction at the Plainfield Theatre this afternoon and tonight is "The Sign of the Cross," and in connection with it Edward Harding, Jr., will sing "The Rosary" this afternoon and tonight. Those who have not heard the vocal efforts of this well known Plainfielder should make certain to hear him render "The Rosary," one of his best numbers.

The Plainfield Theatre offered on Tuesday of the past week the initial episode of "The Black Box," the latest serial detective story. It made an instantaneous hit and will undoubtedly draw large audiences during all subsequent presentations. Tuesday will be kept as the regular day for "The Black Box," except when the house is given over to legitimate attractions, at which time special announcement will be made.

U. S. ASTOR THEATRE

Photo-plays de luxe continue to be the rule at the U. S. Astor Theatre on West Front street. "The Devil," the five-reel Mutual Master Picture from the famous book and play, which is to be shown for the last time today, being followed Monday and Tuesday by "The Quest" another Mutual Master production in which the marvelous skill of D. W. Griffiths is again evidence in unmistakable fashion. For Wednesday and Thursday patrons of the theatre are to have a treat in the presentation of Charles Richman in the title role of "The Idler," the powerful society drama of C. Haddon Chambers, produced under the direction of Lloyd B. Carleton. The play is notable for its dramatic intensity, and the supporting cast is also remarkable, Catherine Countiss giving able support to Mr. Richman and others appearing being Claire Whitney, Stuart Holmes, Walter Hitchcock and Maud Turner Gordon.

The hero of the play is an unscrupulous young Englishman who does not hesitate to try to win the affections of his friend's beautiful wife, using his knowledge of incriminating circumstances involving the husband to aid him in his persuasions for her to elope with him. The denouement is startling, and the moral of the play is pointed with dramatic force. The second episode of "The Black Box" will be an additional feature of the program on Wednesday. Big houses have been the rule throughout the present week. The management of the United States Theatres Company of New Jersey has been placed on a par with the best New York theatres.

THE New York building at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition at San Francisco is one of the largest of the state buildings. The structure is four stories in height and cost $200,000. The architecture, Greco-Roman in style, is finished in travertine to conform with the exhibit palaces. Many interesting historical records will be on exhibit. The building is over 200 feet in length and 100 wide. The legislature of New York appropriated $700,000 for her part in the Exposition. New York city also has a building.

It Is Difficult to Translate a Feeling Into Words

The thousands of people who find their shopping-home in this store FEEL that it is unlike any other store. They say so. They even say that it is not a store at all.

It is difficult to put this feeling into words. Yet we shall try. We begin by saying that this is NOT a department store. Then we try to explain what it is.

We invite the public carefully to

ANTI-SUFFRAGE

Conducted by New Jersey Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage.

To the Editor of the N. Y. Times:

Having read the many letters brought out by your excellent editorials against woman suffrage (for which please accept our hearty thanks) may I mention one or two points, which I do not think have yet been discussed?

In arguing upon this subject the speakers and writers seem to confine themselves to two distinct classes—namely, the woman or complete or comparative leisure and the wage earners. As a matter of fact, the majority of American women are the wives of workingmen and farmers, who in spite of all the modern aids to housekeeping (of which we are so frequently reminded by the suffragists) spend most of their time doing housework and when those duties are accomplished the workbasket awaits them. In addition to this, these women usually have the planning of the expenditure of the family income. The man, in daily contact with his fellow-workers, finds opportunity then and in his leisure hours to discuss the questions of the day. To his wife the paramount issue of the day is that of making both ends meet. No amount of voting will ever help her there!

As to the question of pure food, sanitation, etc., each year brings forth new evidence of the increased interest of the male voter in these subjects, and we must not forget that 75 per cent. of food contamination takes place in the kitchen, over which the vote has no control. Legislation on this subject calls for experts, and whatever has already been accomplished in this line has been brought about largely by feminine agitation unhampered by politics.

As things are now the intelligent woman interested in public affairs brings the full force of her influence to bear on legislation, and is able to offer her assistance to all political parties from a disinterested standpoint. In this way her influence is direct and can be used where most needed. It is this possession of an unprejudiced, unrestricted power that we must highly prize, and we depend upon the men to enable us to retain it.

MARIE M. JOOST,
President Plainfield Branch New Jersey Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage.

WOMEN IN OCCUPATIONS.

To the Editor of the N. Y. Times:

I notice that the "8,000,000 women workers" are still doing duty in industry—in your letters from suffragists. What is the truth about the "8,000,000 women who work in store, factory, and shop," or "already complete with men in industry?" Simply this, that the suffragists have massed the entire 8,075,000 gainfully occupied females over 10 years of age, called them women, and put them where they please—apparently without any respect for the census whatever.

1. There are 8,075,772 gainfully occupied women over 10, as against 30,091,64 gainfully occupied males over 10.

2. Fifty-three per cent. of the gainfully occupied women are engaged on the home farm or in domestic and personal service.

3. There are 4,4355,804 women workers over 10—not 8,000,000—who are "working outside the home," of which 1,346,905 are under 21, leaving 3,088,899 who could avail themselves of the vote.

4. Competing with these 3,000,000 women actually employed in industry are 25,122,392 males over 21.

Now, you simply cannot get anything with the ballot unless you can out-count the other fellow. If it is true, as suffragists say, that men have "established an absolute tyranny over women" and they cannot get what they want without the vote, will some suffrage statistician please tell us how 3,000,000 women are going to take anything away from 25,000,000 men with the vote?

Then again, Table VI. of the same report shows that of the 17,805,845 individual dwellings in America, 16,772, 133 remain without servants, after we have subtracted all the cooks, housekeepers and servants listed in that table. That is, nine homes out of every ten are requiring the attention of a wife and mother who has no outside help. But if a woman on the "home farm" sells butter and eggs, in addition to running her home, or a woman does needlework for her neighbors, the census lists her as "gainfully occupied," and the suffragists put her behind counters or in sweat shops or anywhere else they please.

A woman need not be "self-supporting" to get on the "gainfully occupied" list, where as the overwhelming majority of the men, "gainfully occupied" are not only self-supporting, but supporting a family as well. With over 55 per cent. of all the males over 15 married, and only a very small percentage of the married women earning money at all, it is obvious that there is a great fundamental division between men's work and women's work.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

The special photo-play offering at Proctor's Theatre next Monday and Tuesday will be "The Fight" based upon the play of the same name which was produced at the Hudson Theatre by the Henry B. Harris estate, Bayard Veiller, the author, also wrote "Within the Law."

Margaret Wycherley plays the part of Jane Thomas, who owns a bank in a western city of which she desires to be mayor. The young woman's candidacy, however, disturbs the vested vice interests of the city. Vance, a dance hall keeper, is Jane's bitterest foe, and between him and his supporters, and Jane Thomas, "The Fight" is a fight on the part of this high principled young woman against gambling, drinking and dance hall immorality which prevails in all large cities.

The change of vaudeville for the first half of the week will bring the following acts to the theatre next Monday: Roeder's marvellous European acrobatic novelty, two men and two women; dramatic sketch, "The Black Sheep," presented by a company of four people; DeLange Trio, offering a repertoire of operatic and classical musical numbers; Kaima and company, the Colonial Wizards, and Gilmore and Castle, black face comedians.

TO SUBSCRIBERS

Subscribers to the Daily Press who are served by the route boys will confer a favor by promptly reporting to the Press office, either in person, by telephone or by mail, any negligence on the part of the route boys. Phone 1300.

LONG WINS POINTS FROM BELOW SCRATCH

Makes Scores of 202, 164 and 178 and Wins Three Points at Ten Pins.

Long, Hall and Brakley were the winners of points at the Park Club, last night, in the Handicap Ten-pin Tournament: Long had the highest score of all who took part and annexed three points. Hall made two points and Brakley copped the odd one. Long deserved all the points and credit he received as he was placed five points behind scratch in each game, which took 45 pins off his total score, and still he rolled well enough to come out far ahead of his opponents who were allowed to add to their marks.

Long's real mark was 514, but the score that counted was 15 below that. There were several others below scratch. The scores follow:

NOVEL WAY TO ANNOUNCE N. P. H. S. BASEBALL GAMES

Manager Roscoe VanCamp, of the North Plainfield High School baseball team, has adopted a way of advertising the baseball games of the borough team which should prove very successful and keep local and borough fans in touch with what takes place at Hyde Oval this spring. He has suspended a large canvas across Front street near Somerset which has the announcements of the games on it.

All the lettering but the name of the opposing team and the date is painted on in the High School colors, maroon and black, and the opponent's names are removable. The canvas can be drawn into one of the buildings and the necessary changes made every week. The sign is in plain sight of all pedestrians and no one on Front street will need ask who North Plainfield is scheduled to play.

HAROLD ZEEK IS NOW A JUNIOR LIFE SAVER

Harold Zeek, of the Y. M. C. A. Boys' Department, has the honor of being the first member of the association to win a "Junior Life Saving" medal. He has taken all of the tests from the first, which include seven, each one being harder than the previous one until the "A" test, which consists of nine parts. He will receive a solid gold medal for his work.

The test includes the following events: 220-yd. swim, breast stroke; 100-yd. swim on back; 3 dives for form, averaging 95 per cent.; plunge for distance, 35 feet; lift a 10-pound stone from a depth of 20 feet without a dive; 50-foot under-water swim; carry person of own weight 40 feet; swim with coat, pants and shoes on for 60 feet, shed coat and shoes in water.

JACK MARTIN RELEASED BY PHILADELPHIA TEAM.

Jack Martin, of this city, who has been in training with the Philadelphia team, of the National League this spring, has been released to the St. Paul team of the American Association.

He left the Quaker City team, which is now at Norfolk, Va., for this city this morning and will probably arrive here tomorrow. From here he will go to Forth Smith, Ark., where he will join his new associates.

The Phillly team released him with an option to recall so he may go to the big league ranks before the season is over.

"NIBS" HAND TO REPORT.

Frank "Nibs" Hand, of Scotch Plains, will report to the Worcester team of the New England League, on April 10. He will probably do the bulk of the catching for this club and should have no trouble in making good, as he played fine ball with the Perth Amboy team of the Atlantic League last season. He will practice with his old teammates tomorrow and will probably work with "Cliff." Randolph, of this city, who will be on the Pacers' pitching staff this season.

MAROONS GETTING READY.

The manager of the Maroon Field Club, of Lincoln, is preparing for the coming baseball season and expects to have a fast team to represent that hamlet this year. E. D. Hayes will have charge of the club and is working already to get the field in trim. Any player in this vicinity wishing to join a fast team is requested to report to practice at the M. F. C. grounds tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.

HEAVY HITTERS QUICKLY NABBED

YANKS LANDED THREE STARS

New York Americans Were Fortunate to Obtain a Trio Who Can Clout Above the .300 Average—Pirates Grabbed Two .300 Pill Picklers.

Most of the players who led the minor leagues in batting last season landed in the big leagues, either through draft or purchase. Some, however, were not asked to crawl into the big tents. There was a reason. They were old timers who had been up in the big show and went back because of being too slow, although their last year records demonstrate they did not lose their batting eyes.

Among these was Jake Gettman, who topped the Nebraska league hitters with a mark of .336. Jake was one of the charter members of the American league and can still clout the cork center. Stinson, who led the South Atlantic leaguers with an average of .322, is another. Stinson has been in the minors for fifteen years. Bill Hulsman, who led the Union association with the hefty figure of .434, was a member of four American league clubs in 1904. Moneymaker, who topped the Western association with .379, and Thrasher, who showed the way in the Georgia State and Virginia leagues, are other veteran bush leaguers. Gus Fisher, former Nap, led the Pacific Coast league with .355. He remains with Portland.

Frisk, who led the Northwestern league with a record of .322, was purchased by Minneapolis, but had the misfortune to meet with an accident which has ended his baseball career. Wakefield, formerly of Cleveland, manufactured an average of .347 in the Three-I league, but remains in that circuit, being a veteran who carries considerable weight. Harris, the South Michigan league batting premier, was drafted by Chattanooga. He batted .386.

But most of the others landed in either the National or American leagues, the American getting the majority of the young sluggers. None jumped to the Feds. The list is as follows:

Hinchman, Columbus, American association, now with Pirates; average, .306.

Mullen, Lincoln, Western, now with Yankees; average, .381.
Smith, Waterbury, Eastern, now with Indians; average, .332.
Weiser, Charlotte, North Carolina, now with Phillies; average, .333.
Kauffman, Elmira, New York, now with Browns; average, .329.
Shorten, Worcester, New England, now with Red Sox; average, .345.

LEAL'S DIDN'T SHOW UP.

The St. Joseph's baseball team appeared on Cricket Field, yesterday afternoon, ready to play the Leal School aggregation a practice game, but the private school boys did not show up and so the borough team held light practice.

MASONIC BOWLING.

The Tyrian and Orient teams, of the Masonic Bowling League, are scheduled to meet in Elizabeth next Monday night.

Miss Louella Harris, of Elizabeth, for a number of years soprano soloist at the First Baptist church, this city, will be present at the Bible school session tomorrow morning and sing a solo.

LARGE ATTENDANCE AT UNION SERVICE

Local Clergymen Speak on "The Seven Words From the Cross."

Featured by an unusually large attendance the Union Good Friday service of local churches was held in the Crescent Avenue church last night, Plainfield clergymen being in charge. Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie presided and the following ministers spoke on "The Seven Words from the Cross:" Rev. Dr. Birney S. Hudson, of the Park Avenue Baptist church; Rev. Evarts C. Conover, of the Temple Baptist churc; Rev. J. Y. Broek, of Trinity Reformed church; Rev. C. L. Goodrich, of the Congregational church; Rev. E. S. Ralston, of the Netherwood Reformed church, and Rev. Dr. E. G. Read, chaplain of the State Senate.

Dr. Zelie opened the meeeting with prayer and the various talks were delivered in the order named. Appropriate music was rendered throughout the evening, the following hymns being sung: "Beneath the Cross of Jesus" and "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name."

MRS. ROGERS DIES IN NEW ENGLAND

Native Plainfield Woman Passes Away at Her Home in Providence.

Mrs. Rebecca T. Rogers, widow of Prof. William A. Rogers and a native of this city, died yesterday morning at her home in Providence, R. I. She had been in failing health for several years. The body will be brought to Plainfield and the funeral will be held in the Seventh-day Baptist church tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. Burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

Mrs. Rogers was the daughter of the late Isaac and Hannah Ann Titsworth, numbered among Plainfield's pioneer residents. She was born on December 28, 1834. After her marriage to Prof. Rogers, who was in charge of the observatory at Harvard for many years, she removed to New England, making her home in various cities since that time. She is survived by two sons, Dr. Fred T. Rogers, of Providence, noted eye and ear specialist, and Prof. Arthur T. Rogers, a member of the Yale faculty. She also leaves one sister, Mrs. William Potter, of Plainfield, and five brothers, Thomas and Lewis T. Titsworth, of this city; B. Frank Titsworth, of Alfred, N. Y.; Rev. Judson Titsworth, of Milwaukee, and Prof. A. A. Titsworth, of Rutgers College.

WOMEN SHAKEN UP WHEN CASTLE TRUCK HIT TAXI

An automobile owned by the Plainfield Cab Company was struck by a truck belonging to the Castle Ice Cream Company at Ninth street and Park avenue at 3 o'clock this afternoon, the former vehicle being badly damaged. The local car was traveling north on Park avenue and was in charge of William Skillman, a chauffeur.

The Castle truck struck the taxi just in back of the rear door and two women, giving their names as Mrs. Duncanson and Mrs. Sullivan both of 808 Park avenue, were shaken up.

GRAND AND PETIT JURORS.

Among the Grand and Petit Jurors for the next term of court which begins April 13, the following North Plainfielders were drawn by Judge Beekman, in the Somerset county court, Thursday: Grand Jurors, George Mobus, John P. Emmons and Allan Cowperthwaite; Petit Jurors, John Dickson, Charles L. Voorhees, Peter Bowers, Isaac Bradley, Edgar Brokaw, William J. Barlow, William J. Trembath, Raymond G. Schenck, James M. Way and John C. Crotsley.

GSOPEL ADDRESS.

"The First Covenant—The Law," will be the subject of the Gospel address to be given by Samuel Ridout at the hall, 209 East Front street, at 7:30 tomorrow evening. This will be an interesting and instructive subject and hope for a large attendance. All are welcome.

ALBERT JOHNSON.

Albert Johnson, the five year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Johnson, of 627 West Fourth street, died Thursday afternoon. The funeral was held at the parents' home this afternoon and burial was made in the Plainfield avenue cemetery.

and corporation counsel will be apprised of the report as it was before the Building Trades.

At a meeting held sometime ago, the Council went on record as favoring former Mayor Newton B. Smalley's proposition for a new county. Many of the members wished to be fully enlightened on the subject in order to vote intelligently at any time in the future and it was decided to invite Mayor Smalley to speak at the meeting next Friday night. A number of other propositions will be taken up at this session and it promises to be an interesting one from several points of view.

Mr. and Mrs. William B. Zimmerman, of Jackson avenue, the borough, are parents of a girl born to them this morning.

PUT STOMACH IN FINE CONDITION

Says Indigestion Results from an Excess of Hydrochloric Acid.

Undigested food delayed in the stomach decays, or rather, ferments the same as food left in the open air, says a noted authority. He also tells us that indigestion is caused by hyper-acidity, meaning, there is an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach which prevents complete digestion and starts food fermentation. Thus everything eaten sours in the stomach much like garbage sours in a can, forming acid fluids and gases which inflate the stomach like a toy balloon. Then we feel a heavy, lumpy misery in the chest, we belch up gas, we eructate sour food or have heartburn, flatulence, water-brash or nausea.

He tells us to lay aside all digestive aids and instead, get from any pharmacy four ounces of Jad Salts and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and drink while it is effervescing and further more, to continue this for a week. While relief follows the first dose, it is important to neutralize the acidity, remove the gas-making mass, start the liver, stimulate the kidneys and thus promote a free flow of pure digestive juices.

Jads Salts is inexpensive and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and sodium phosphate. This harmless salts is used by thousands of people for stomach trouble with excellent results.

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody Will Know.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and abundant. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is messy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking any drug store for a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get this famous old recipe which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, feverish, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and abundant.—Adv.

PROGRESS AND PROSPERITY IN PLAINFIFLD

BUILDING MARKET ALMOST NORMAL

April Opens With Bright Prospects for Contractors in All Lines.

LOWER INTEREST RATE

Prospective Builders Are Taking Considerable Hope in Changed Condition of Local Market Which is Developing Rapidly.

New York, April 3.—April opens the building material market with much better prospects of normal building conditions. Portland cement is much firmer. There is a general advance expected in single and double window glass. Plate glass is firm at 90-30 and 90-35 dscount from May, 1914, lists. Steel at Waverly is firm at 1.85c with prospects of an early advance for structural material. Trap rock held its own despite a five-cent decline in crushed bluestone, making the current price 85 and 95 cents. Linseed oil is one cent higher, and is now quoted on card at 62 and 63 cents. Sand is 5 cents a cubic yard lower.

In the money market the tendency is to drop from 6 to 5½ per cent. in mortgage loans, and outside of lower Manhattan heavy premiums for accommodation are rare. In Manhattan, below 125th street, accommodations for financing commercial buildings bring about 6 per cent. and carry with it brokers' premiums of varying amounts, depending upon location and character of building.

More common brick is being quoted at wholesale, New York, at $5.75 a thousand than in any time so far this year.

Prospective builders who have found it difficult to raise money on building projects during the last year are taking considerable hope in the changed condition of the local market, which in the last two days of March developed a million shares traded per day, and confirms the prediction made two months ago that almost normal conditions would prevail in the money marts by the time builders were ready to make engagements for fall and winter construction work.

The Portland cement situation continues to show signs of clearing. The Vulcanite and the Dexter companies each threw in one additional kiln this week, making 154 kilns in operation in the Lehigh district, as against 89 in the same time last year. This is within two of as many kilns as were being operated in the district in middle of May a year ago. In other words, there are 42.2 per cent. more capacity employed in the Lehigh district this year than last year. It is learned that shipments in March were 30 per cent. in excess of those for March, 1914, and one company not included among the larger operators has been making shipments at the rate of 150,000 barrels for the month just closed.

The normal supply of Portland cement for the Metropolitan district is between 6,000,000 and 7,000,000 barrels. Dealers are carrying an excess of 300,000 barrels, which is sufficient for only two weeks' work. If this estimate is correct, it is apparent that manufacturers will not be long contented to sell cement at prices below 7 cents mill. Local prices are nearer $1.32 than $1.23 for immediate shipment.

Considerable work is now coming out from road contractors and municipal improvements, requiring a large amount of cement. Railroad requirements have not been made known owing to the general feeling in their directorates that it is not wise to lay out large sums for improvements while hostile Legislatures are in session. Contractors need not expect a large development from this source until after the Legislature adjourns. One man said that if Legislatures would heed the best interests of their constituents, by using their repealler power and postponing new business-disturbing legislation for the time being, and thus permit the railroads to earn enough to make profitable their securities, local shops would begin to hum with railroad orders and reconstruction would proceed. He said that until the railroads have some assurance that business legislation for the time being has ceased, supply orders will continue to be retarded.

IMPROVEMENTS TO STORE.

C. O. Smith, the Liberty street grocer, is having a number of improvements made to his store building at Fourth and Liberty streets. They include a new main floor, a new entrance, and a new window front, one large plate glass, taking place of the four smaller ones on each side of the entrance. The work will cost about $300, and is being done by William Harding.

A NATTY BUNGALOW

DESIGNED BY CHAS. S. SEDGWICK, ARCHITECT.

THIS five-room bungalow is well suited to an ordinary city lot. It is 29 ft. in width by 37 ft. in depth. It is planned somewhat on the California bungalow order with wide projected eaves showing timber supports. The outside studding is 10 ft. in height, with the exterior walls cemented from the grade line to the top of the windows, and above this the walls finished in wide drop siding. An artistic touch is given to the front by using bowlder stone under the main corners and porch columns. All of the outside trimmings may be painted white or a very light cream color and the roof shingles stained dark red. The estimated cost according to this description is placed at $3,000 to $3,-500, exclusive of heating and plumbing.

There is one central hall with living room and dining room on the left connected together with wide arch opening and in the rear is the kitchen. At the right of the hall are two bed rooms of equal size with convenien bathroom and closets between and coat closet opening from the hall. A the rear end of this hall is a smal staircase leading up to the attic spac designed to be used for storage pur pose only. Basement stairs lead dow from kitchen with grade entrance an small glazed porch, space for refrig erator, etc. This main story may b finished in Washington fir or yello pine or birch, there being very litt difference in the cost, the floor of nat ural oak. There is a good full base ment with ample space for laundr heating apparatus, fuel, etc.

The construction is thorough an substantial, the outside walls bein sheathed, papered and cemented o the outside with drop siding on th upper portion and with back plaster ing to make the walls warm.

BUILDING SHOWS MARKED INCREASE

Permits for March Indicate a Gain of $12,305 for New Work.

COMPARATIVE TABLES

Statistics for First Three Months of 1915 Show That Construction Work More Than Doubled the Record for Same Period in 1915.

While journeymen and master carpenters are discussing as to whether a raise of wages is warranted at the present time under existing conditions, figures have been compiled by the editor of the building and real estate page of the Daily Press showing that construction activities in this city are on the increase as in comparison with conditions at this time a year ago. While it is no wise an established fact that times are normal in local building circles, conditions are so rapidly readjusting themselves that it will be only a matter of a few short weeks when practically all of Plainfield's building craftsmen will be at work.

Two tables are printed below indicating that the permits as issued last month by Inspector T. O. Doane call for the expenditure of over $20,000 in excess of the permits as issued during March of last year, thus following the course of the preceding two months in going above the figures of 1914. The gain, as may be noted in the tables, cover both new buildings, and in alterations to older building in various parts of the city. A gain of $12,305 was made in the matter of the cost of the new buildings covered by the permits, while a gain of $7,785 is evidenced in regard to alterations.

Figures compiled covering the first three months of the new year show that building operations of 1915 more than double the record of the same period of time of last year. This large gain has been made possible by the starting of a large number of new buildings, thus offsetting the falling off of work on alterations during that period of time. New buildings which were started during the first three months of the current year will cost in the vicinity of $117,293, as against $44,735 for the same type of work of last year.

	New Bldgs	Alterations	Totals
MARCH, 1915.
1st ward	$ 9,800	$ 585	$10,385

THIRTEEN PERMITS; TOTAL COST $65,800

Local Building Activities Experience Brisk Revival During Week.

As a most fitting climax to three months of steady progress in gainin strength, the activities of the pas week has in a most excellent wa opened the official building season for this city. During the past week thirteen permits have been granted by Inspector T. O. Doane, calling fo the erection of one apartment house two business buildings, one dwelling six garages, one wagon shed, an three alteration jobs. The permit call for the expenditure of $65,800

The past week means the placin at work of a large number of loca building craftsmen, and means tha before long conditions will hav reached normal conditions, as far a this city is concerned. With an ad dition to the South Plainfield Schoo to be started in the near future, an an entirely new school for Fanwoo township already contracted for, th local situation finds an outlet for a portion of its construction mechan ics. As the present season pro gresses, contractors become mor convinced that it will outdo man of its predecessors.

The permits as granted during th course of the past week by Inspecto Doane are as noted below:

FIRST WARD.

The Plainfield-Union Water Com pany is to erect a 39 by 25 foot ce ment hollow block garage on Nort avenue, east of Leland avenue. Th cost is estimated at $300. Willian C. Smith, of the borough, is the con tractor.

A 16 by 20 frame garage, to cos in the vicinity of $150, is to be erec ed at 26 Norwood avenue, by Merce R. Vail.

SECOND WARD.

A. C. Thompson is having a ce ment hollow block building erecte at a cost of $8,000. The structur was described in another issue earl ier this week.

E. M. Laing is having a brick building erected on Sycamore ave nue, midway between East Fourth and East Fifth streets, at a cost of $6,000. This building was also described in another column.

The Crescent Realty Company has been granted a permit for the erection of an apartment house at 217 East Seventh street at a cost of $45,-000, and will be described in detail next week.

George H. Frost, of 745 Watchung avenue, is having an 8 by 15 foot brick extension built on to the rear of his home at the above address. The addition will be two stories high, and will cost $400. Harvey Apgar, of the borough, is the general contractor for the work.

Alterations are also called for by the permit issued to Mrs. Violet Truell Evans, of 816 Third place. An extension to the southwest corner of the residence at that address is to be erected at a cost of $600. The addition is to be of frame construction, two stories high, and will measure 10 by 20 feet. William H. Kirch, o the borough, is the general contractor.

Mrs. Rhoda H. Jenkins is to have a 12 by 16 foot frame garage erected at 929 Watchung avenue at a cost of $225. E. V. French, of North avenue, is the architect, while Charles L. Force, of the borough, is the contractor.

Councilman P. Hamilton, of 1210 Denmark road, is to have a 13 by 20 foot frame garage erected at that address to cost $430. George H. Fisher, Jr., of Manson place, is the architect, and J. W. Carver the contractor.

THIRD WARD.

In addition to other building activities in which he is interested at the present time, and for which permits were issued some time ago, Adam C. Blair is to erect a 36 by 26 frame wagon shed at 114 West Sixth street, the cost having been placed at $250. Alexander Milne has the contract.

John S. Higham is to have erected at 967 West Sixth street, a 14 by 20 foot frame garage which is to cost $380. George D. Wilson is the contractor.

A 12 by 18 foot frame garage, the cost of which will be $265, is to be erected at 740 West Eighth street by Isaac Rushmore. The Apgar Construction Company, of Dunellen, has the contract.

Extensive alterations, including a 38 by 12 foot addition in front, and a 10 by 12 foot porch in the rear are to be made to the residence of Dr. Edward S. Krans, at 920 Park avenue. The addition is to be of frame construction, and will cost $1,300. Wilder & White, of New York, are the architects; B. F. Tallamy & Brothers, of this city, the mason contractors; while Stahl & Kinney, of the borough, will care for the carpentry work.

FOURTH WARD.

Alfonso Cioci is to erect on West Third street, just west of Manson place, a two-family dwelling of hollow terra cotta block. The building will have a frontage of thirty feet, and a depth of twenty-eight feet, being two and a half stories high. The cost has been placed at $2,500. W. H. Clum, of Park avenue, is the architect, and Alfred Johnson the carpenter contractor. The masonry work will be cared for by the owner

JUST NOTES

With the awarding of contracts during the course of the past week for the new Fanwood Township School and the Piscataway Township School addition at South Plainfield, bids received, it will be only a matter of a week or two before $135,000 of school work will be in the course o construction in Plainfield and vicinity. Other Union county municipalities interested in school construction at the present time include Linden, Kenilworth and Roselle Park.

Bids for the construction of the new post office were received at Washington yesterday, and actual work of construction should be started within the course of a short time.

In another column of this page appears tables showing that the building activities in this city during the course of the first three months of his year are more than double the record of last year for the same period as far as money values are concerned. We wonder if this condition will have any bearing on the local wage question now being discussed between the journeymen carpenters and the masters.

Aside from the carpenter wage, the local building world is being confronted with a number of questions of general interest. The doing away of shingled roofs and the charging of small fees for the issuing of building permits are now being discussed on all sides and many interesting points are being presented from both sides of each of the problems.

The opening of the official building season on Thursday of this week is sufficient for a great impetus to the local building activities, and the present month should prove to be a record-breaker in the number and varue of permits issued by Inspector T. O. Doane.

The erection of garages appears to be quite as popular in building circles this season as last. Evidently the money market is easing up to some extent.

Another contracting concern is going to put up five dwellings in this city. Houses are going up in bunches this year, clearly showing that there are those who believe in the possibilities of Plainfield as a residential city. May this policy be continued, for the city can stand such a movement as this.

TO ENLARGE CLUB HOUSE.

The trustees of the Park Golf Club have decided to make a number of improvements to the club house on the golf grounds. The plans call for a large addition to the rear that will be suitable as a hall for the holding of dances, dinner parties, and other forms of entertainment. There will be also a new porch and a general overhauling. The contract will be given out at once in order to have the building ready as soon as the spring season is under way.

HURLEY PROPERTY BEING DEVELOPED

Although building booms have been scarce in the borough during the past year, there is one section that is now being developed that promises wonderful growth. This is on upper Belmont avenue, where James Hurley, Jr., has just completed the erection of his sixth fine house on a tract of eleven acres. The location is one of the prettiest in North Plainfield, overlooking Hyde Terrace, and commanding a view that is unsurpassed.

Mr. Hurley's property comprises the original Hurley farm of eight acres and a portion of the Simpson tract of three acres. The six house just built have been placed upon lots measuring 42 by 200 feet, affording plenty of room for a garden, chickens, or the many things that go to make suburban life "a thing of beauty and joy forever." Mr. Hurley proposes to open a street through the property leading to Farragut avenue, and improvements that will benefit the entire community.

The six houses are of the popular cottage type and cost $2,600 each. They have three rooms and a large reception hall on the first floor and four rooms on the second floor. Each one is finished off with all modern improvements. One of them has been sold to Frank Lievers, who is already in possession, and four more have been rented. The sixth one has just been finished and Mr. Hurley has placed it on the market at $2,-300. He proposes to build more as the demand becomes known and judging from the popularity of the first half dozen, his entire tract will soon be covered with fine dwellings. The sanitary sewer has just been placed along the fronting street and there is nothing left wanting to make the Hurley development a complete success. The houses are suitable for New York men who like outdoor recreation and it is probable that a commuting colony will be established.

COUNTY ACTIVITIES.

Eleven contracts of various sizes were filed at the office of County Clerk James C. Calvert during the course of the week ending last Saturday, all parts of the county being represented. An aggregate expenditure of $30,040 is called for by the contracts.

Kline Realty and Improvement Company with Cohen & Israelsky, entire work, five new buildings, Plainfield, $9,975.

Angelo Guiditta with Epraim Leva, plumbing work, new building Central avenue, Westfield, $250.

MR. DRAKE'S NEW OFFICE.

Charles L. Drake, the local contracting carpenter, has leased the apartment over Thorn's bicycle store, at 407 Park avenue, and has fitted the front as an up-to-date office. It has been made attractive in many ways and will be a great convenience to Mr. Drake's many business friends.

WHAT PLAINFIELD WANTS TO KNOW.

The Answer is Found in the Statement of a Plainfield Resident.

From week to week, from year to year, there have been appearing in these columns statements made by neighbors, which we have all read with great interest, and many of us with great profit. But what we want to know is, do they stand the greatest test of all—the test of time? Here is conclusive evidence on this point from a Plainfield woman:

Mrs. E. Dorflinger, 400 Clinton avenue, Plainfield, says: "The first symptom of kidney trouble was a dull, heavy pain in my back and head. This was followed by a tired, languid feeling and I knew that my kidneys were gradually giving out. I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised and getting a box at Randolph's drug store, I began using them. Before long I improved and I continued until cured."

Over five years later Mrs. Dorflinger said: "I hold just as high an opinion of them now as when I gave my former endorsement recommending them. The cure they made has been permanent."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Dorflinger had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.—Adv.

A FOOL AND HIS MONEY

BY GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON.

CHAPTER XII.

I Am Invited Out to Dinner.

MR. PLESS went away with the others at half past 11, and that was the end of his first visit to my domain. For fear that you, kind reader, may be disappointed, I make haste to assure you that he was to come again.

Of course there was more or less turmoil and—I might say disaffection—attending his departure. He raised Cain with my servants because they did this and that when they shouldn't have done either; he (and the amiable baron) took me to task for having neglected to book compartments for them in the Orient express; he insisted upon having a luncheon put up in a tea basket and taken to the railway station by Britton, and he saw to it personally that three or four bottles of my best wine were neatly packed in with the rest. He said three or four, but Britton is firm in his belief that there was nearer a dozen, judging by the weight.

"Well, thank the Lord!" said I, as the ferry put off with the party, leaving me alone on the little landing. The rotten timbers seemed to echo the sentiment. At the top of the steep all the Schmicks were saying it, too; in the butler's pantry it was also being said; a score of workmen were grunting it, and the windlass that drew me up the hill was screaming it in wild, discordant glee. I repeated it once more when Britton returned from town and assured me that they had not missed the train.

Conrad, grinning from ear to ear, was waiting for me outside my bedroom door late in the day. He saluted me with unusual cordiality.

"A note, mein herr," said he, and handed me a dainty little pearl gray envelope.

"I shan't be home for dinner, Conrad," said I, my eyes aglow. "Tell Jackes, we'll you?"

The countess welcomed me with a radiant smile. We shook hands.

"Well, he has gone," said I, drawing a deep breath.

"Thank the Lord!" said she. And then I knew that the symphony was complete. We all had sung it.

It must not be supposed for an instant that I had been guilty of neglecting my lovely charge during that season of travail and despair. No, indeed! I had visited her every day as a matter of precaution. She required a certain amount of watching.

I do not hesitate to say at this time that she seemed to be growing lovelier every day. In a hundred little ways she was changing, not only in appearance, but in manner.

Now, to be perfectly frank about it, I can't explain just what these little changes were—that is, not in so many words—but they were quite as pronounced as they were subtle. I may risk mentioning an improvement in her method of handling me. She was not taking quite so much for granted as she did at first. She was much more humble and considerate, I remarked. Instead of bullying me into things she now cajoled me; instead of making demands upon my patience and generosity she rather hesitated about putting me to the least trouble. She wasn't so arrogant nor so hard to manage. In a nutshell, I may say with some satisfaction, she was beginning to show a surprising amount of respect for me and my opinions.

Her devotion to Rosemary was wonderful to see. By the way, while I think of it, the child was quite adorable. She was learning to pronounce my name and getting nearer and nearer to it every day. At the time of which I now write she was calling me (with great enthusiasm) by the name of "Go-go," which reduced to aboriginal American means "Man-With-the-Strong-Arm-Who-Carries-Baby."

"It is very nice of you to ask me up to dine with you," said I.

"Isn't it about time I was doing something for you in return for all that you have done for me?" she inquired gayly. "We are having a particularly nice dinner this evening, and I thought you'd enjoy a change."

"A change?" said I, with a laugh. "As if we haven't been eating out of the same kettle for days!"

"I was not referring to the food," she said, and I was very properly squelched.

"Nevertheless, speaking of food," said I, "it may interest you to know that I expected to have rather a sumptuous repast of my own to celebrate the deliverance. A fine, plump pheasant, prepared a la Oscar, corn fritters like mother used to make, potatoes picard"—

"And a wonderful alligator pear salad," she interrupted, her eyes dancing.

I stared. "How in the world did you guess?"

She laughed in pure delight, and I began to understand. By the Lord Harry, the amazing creature was inviting me to eat my own dinner in her stalle manger! "Well, may I be hanged! You do beat the Dutch!"

She was wearing a wonderful dinner gown of Irish lace, and she fairly sparkled with diamonds. As I looked at her standing there by the big oak table I couldn't help thinking that the count was not only a scoundrel but all kinds of a fool.

"It was necessary for me to bribe all of your servants, Mr. Smart," she said.

"You did not offer the rascals money, I hope," I said in a horrified tone.

"No, indeed!" She did not explain any further than that, but somehow I knew that money isn't everything to a servant after all. "I hope you don't mind my borrowing your butler and footman for the evening," she went on. "Not that we really need two to serve two, but it seems so much more like a function, as the newspapers would call it."

It was my turn to say "No, indeed."

"And now you must come in and kiss Rosemary good night," she said, glancing at my great Amsterdam clock in the corner.

We went into the nursery. It was past Rosemary's bedtime by nearly an hour, and the youngster was having great difficulty in keeping awake. She managed to put her arms around my neck when I took her up from the bed, all tucked away in her warm little nightie, and sleepily presented her own little throat for me to kiss, that particular spot being where the honey came from in her dispensation of sweets.

I was full of exuberance. An irresistible impulse to do a jig seized upon me. To my own intense amazement and to Blake's horror I began to dance about the room like a clumsy kangaroo. Rosemary shrieked delightedly into my ear, and I danced the harder for that. The countess, recovering from her surprise, cried out in laughter and began to clap time with her hands. Blake forgot himself and sat down rather heavily on the edge of the bed. I think the poor woman's knees gave way under her.

Whereupon the girl that was left in the countess rose to the occasion and she pirouetted with graceful abandon before me in amazing contrast to my jumping jack efforts. Only Blake's reserve and somewhat dampening admonition brought me to my senses.

"Please don't drop the child, Mr. Smart," she said. I had the great satisfaction of hearing Rosemary cry when I delivered her up to Blake and started to slink out of the room in the wake of my warm cheeked hostess.

"You would be a wonderful father, sir," said Blake, relenting a little.

I had the grace to say, "Oh, pshaw!" and then got out while the illusion was still alive. (As I've said before, I do not like a crying baby.)

It was the most wonderful dinner in the world, notwithstanding it was served on a kitchen table moved into the living room for the occasion. Imposing candelabra adorned the four corners of the table and the very best plate in the castle was put to use. There were roses in the center of the board, a huge bowl of short stemmed Marechal Niel beauties.

"Have I told you, Mr. Smart, that I am expecting my mother here to visit me week after next?"

She tactfully put the question to me at a time when I was so full of contentment that nothing could have depressed me.

"You don't say so!" I exclaimed, quite cheerfully.

"That is to say, she is coming if you think you can manage it quite safely."

"I manage it? My dear countess, why speak of managing a thing that is so obviously to be desired?"

"You don't understand. Can you smuggle her into the castle without any one knowing a thing about it? You see, she is being watched every minute of the time by detectives, spies, secret agents, lawyers and heaven knows who else. The instant she leaves Paris, bang! It will be like the starter's shot in a race. They will be after her like a streak. And if you are not very, very clever they will play bob with everything."

"Then why run the risk?" I ventured.

"My two brothers are coming with her," she said reassuringly. "They are such big, strong fellows that"—

"My dear countess, it isn't strength we'll need," I deplored.

"No, no. I quite understand. It is cunning, strategy, caution and all that sort of thing. But I will let you know in ample time, so that you may be prepared."

"Do!" I said gallantly, trying to be enthusiastic.

"You are so wonderfully ingenious at working out plots and conspiracies in your books, Mr. Smart, that I am confident you can manage everything beautifully.

"And now let us talk about something else," she went on complacently, as if the project of getting the rest of her family into the castle were already off her mind. "I can't tell you how much I enjoyed your last book, Mr. Smart. It is so exciting! Would you be entertained by a real mystery?" Very promptly I said I should be. We were having our coffee. Hawkes and Blatchford had left the room. "Well, tradition says that one of the old barons buried a vast treasure in the cellar of this"—

"Stop!" I commanded, shaking my head. "Haven't I just said that I don't want to talk about literature? Buried treasure is the very worst form of literature."

"Very well," she said indignantly. "You will be sorry when you hear I've dug it up and made off with it."

I pricked up my ears. This made a difference. "Are you going to hunt for it yourself?"

"I am," she said resolutely.

"In those dark, dank, grewsome cellars?"

"Certainly."

"Alone?"

"If necessary," she said, looking at me over the edge of the coffee cup.

"Tell me all about it," said I.

"Oh, we shan't find it, of course," said she calmly. I made note of the pronoun. "They've been searching for it for two centuries without success. My—that is, Mr. Pless has spent days down there. He is very hard up, you know. It would come in very handy for him."

I glowered. "I'm glad he's gone. I don't like the idea of his looking for treasures in my castle."

She gave me a smile for that.

EVERY WOMAN ADORES THIS SHIRRED SKIRT OF SPRING.

Small doubt that this corded and gathered skirt will be one of the popular styles of the season, for every woman who sees the model immediately wants one for herself. The skirt pictured is of black pussy willow taffeta and there are six bias ruffles, each attached under the corded edge of the next above. The yoke is extended by a shirred band which is drawn in at both corded edges.

Of Interest to Women and the Home

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

On Monday Nell went to the station to see Mrs. Parsons and the children off for the east, leaving Dick's mother alone in the house. When she came up the street, she noticed the clothes line stretched in the yard.

Had Mary changed her day for washing? She hurried into the house. Her guest was up to her elbows in suds, vigorously rubbing a garment on the board; the kitchen curtains had been taken down. Nell stood speechless in the kitchen door.

"You had better look around; I may not have found everything. I gathered the clothes in the basket and laundry bag. I thought you'd be back in time to get the other things."

"Why, my laundress comes Thursday. I do not want you to do such work," said Nell, when she recovered her voice.

"This is nothing." There was a note almost like cheer in the old lady's voice. "A little handful of clothes like this isn't worth paying a woman for. You can save that much this week."

"Dick always sends his shirts to the laundry." There was a note of helpless despair in Nell's voice.

"That's wasteful, and it's hard on the clothes." There was a note of finality in the voice. "I'll show you how to iron shirts and you can save that money. The way people are brought up to do, in these days, I never would have believed. You go about whatever you planned to do. I'll have this little dab of clothes out of the way in an hour. It's a good drying day; they will be ready to iron by 10 o'clock. I'll have the curtains up by the time Dick comes to dinner."

Nell went into the bedroom and took off her hat. She laughed as she straightened the room, realizing how helpless she was before the vigorous force of her indomitable mother-in-law.

Poor Father Morton! She could see how he had been swept along on the tide of her strong personality.

"Now, mother, let me hang those things out, and you go and rest a while before dinner," said Nell when she finished preparing the vegetables.

A contemptuous snort was followed by "I never wear out beds in the day time."

"My, this makes me think of my boyhood days." He paused in front of the board and gazed into her flushed face. She smiled grimly and said, "It's a long time since I ironed shirts for you. The farm couldn't hold you long," she sighed, "and your father encouraged your going."

When Nell protested to Dick because she was working so hard he laughed. "Can't you let my mother enjoy herself? She's happy today for the first time since she came. Poor mother," he added sorrowfully. "She has only one way of expressing affection, that of working for those she loves. Ironing those shirts gives her joy. How terrible not to be able to express love!" and he caught Nell in his arms.

Household Hints

SOME DATE RECIPES

In many a household dates are served as fruit, but are seldom used in making cakes, desserts and other dishes. Here are a few recipes:

Date Pudding—One cup dates, stoned and cut in half; one cup chopped nut meats; one cup of sugar; one and a half cups of flour. Beat two eggs, add slowly one-quarter cup milk in which a teaspoon of soda has been dissolved. Thoroughly mix; bake in moderate oven. Serve with pudding sauce or whipped cream.

Date Waffles—The yolks of two eggs beaten light; add teaspoon salt, tablespoon of sugar, tablespoon melted butter, one-half pint of milk, one and a half cups flour, cupful of chopped dates, heaping tablespoon baking powder. Fold in whites of eggs. Serve with maple syrup.

Tea Cakes—One-half cup butter, creamed, one cup sugar, three well beaten eggs, one-half cup cold water, one and a quarter cups of flour, one cup chopped dates, level teaspoon of baking powder. Pat out and cut in fancy shapes.

Date Whip—One-half pound of chopped dates, one-half cup of hot water. Cook mixture until smooth. Beat up whites of four eggs. Fold fine one-half cup pulverized sugar. Then add the date paste. Pour in buttered baking dish, bake until set. Serve the dessert with boiled custard made of the yolks of the eggs, pint of milk and sugar to taste.

MACARONI DISH

Macaroni With Tomato Sauce—Place macaroni in salted boiling water and parboil for five minutes. Then pour off first water and add more boiling salted water. Cook for thirty-five or forty minutes in double boiler. When tender drain and rinse with cold water. If macaroni is cooked in a double boiler it will be more tender than if boiled over the flame and will not require watching.

Macaroni with tomato sauce may also be made as follows: Put macaroni in buttered casserole and pour tomato sauce over it. Bake twenty minutes. This is delicious and much less trouble while no more expensive than making the tomato sauce.

One cup of macaroni serves six people and one-half can of soup is sufficient for that amount of macaroni.

FISH BALLS

Good Codfish Balls—One cup shredded codfish, two cups fashed potatoes, one egg, beaten separately; season lightly. Soak codfish, shred one cup, mix with the potatoes, add the yolk of egg and season; then add the beaten white. Mold into balls, fry in deep fat till brown.

Mackerel Balls—Two cups of shredded boiled mackerel, free from bones; two cups of cold mashed potatoes, one-quarter teaspoon of pepper, two eggs beaten well. Mold in balls; fry in deep fat.

CHEAP MENU

The woman's society of a church recently served 150 persons with the following dinner at a cost of 15 cents per plate, the food cost being $11.64.

The same dinner served to a family of six, and purchased in that quantity, it was estimated, would have cost 32½ cents each.

Bouillon (with Cubes)
Roast of Lamb
Boiled Potatoes with Brown Gravy
Mashed Turnips

Animal Jingles

FOR LITTLE FOLKS

BY ALICE CRAW GALL

What Are You Like?

Do you act like an animal?
Give it a thought or two;
Do you just "grunt" an answer when
Somebody speaks to you?
Or if you're asked to take your choice
Of little piece or big,
Do you select the larger piece?
If so, you're like a Pig!

OR

Maybe you are obstinate
And very much inclined
To stick to it through thick and thin,
When you make up your mind.
Now, firmness is all very well,
But don't be stubborn, pray,
For if you have that fault, you're like
A Donkey, I should say.

RUNAWAY JUNE

BY GEORGE RANDOLPH CHESTER AND LILLIAN CHESTER

Copyright, 1915, by Serial Publication Corporation

CHAPTER II.

FAR out on Broadway the luxurious limousine, with the black curtains drawn and the bit of filmy gauze fluttering from the door, turned toward the river, with the faithful Bill Wolf still stooped over the tires, his cravat still firmly clutched in the strap of the tire cover and his empurpled face turned partly up, so that the corner of one pink eye could gaze back imploringly at the pursuing car.

In that car, strained tensely forward, Ned Warner sat with gritted teeth and clinched hands, never removing his eyes from the fleeing limousine into which he had seen his lovely runaway bride bundled by the scoundrelly Gilbert Blye. Again he urged the driver, Jerry, to greater speed. He was determined that this time the chase should not end until he had his fingers clutched around the throat of that dark, handsome man with the black Vandyke and had strangled him to death. He had wrecked Ned's life, this dastardly Blye, and nothing but a life would pay. On the very day of Ned's marriage the fellow's evil machinations had begun.

The black curtained limousine just ahead wheeled around the corner and dashed up the hill at high speed, with the faithful Bill Wolf wabbling on behind like a Japanese balloon.

As Cunningham entered, June, afraid, called for Gilbert Blye, and he came hurrying into the room, a scowl upon his dark, handsome face. Gilbert Blye pointed sternly to the door, and Cunningham, after a moment of sullen hesitation, affected to treat the matter lightly and swaggered from the room, twirling his white mustache. At the door he turned and cast upon June a malevolent glare.

The boarders looked on in surprise.

"Please! Please, Mr. Blye!" begged June.

Come! His low voice soothed her. "You must lie down and rest for a few moments, and I promise that no one shall disturb you." He led her to a room. She turned up her pleading eyes to him, and he smiled down at her. He covered her with the folds of the voluminous black coat. "I shall return in ten minutes," he said.

In the basement Marie stood with Gilbert Blye's money in her hand. She started for the door. She came back and started for the stairs. She turned again to the door, again to the stairs, then stood and looked at Gilbert Blye's money, her high cheek bones white and indecision on her brow.

Uphill and downhill rushed the black curtained limousine with the Moore family car still in hot pursuit.

Occasionally the well known and justly famous private detective, Bill Wolf, loosened his clutch for an instant, but tightened it immediately.

The sharp featured woman with the long nose and the high arched brows rolled her electric coupe up to the door of her own house and went into the parlor.

June closed her eyes. Suddenly she sprang to her feet and, running to the door, placed the tilted back of a chair beneath the knob; then she stood for a moment in earnest thought. She walked slowly to the wardrobe and opened it. Half a dozen pretty costumes hung there. She was about hastily to bring down the least conspicuous of these, and she chose instead one of the most elaborate, an afternoon gown richly trimmed with fur. With feverish speed she donned this exquisite garment, congratulating herself that it fitted her beautifully.

In the parlor Orin Cunningham sat with two young women. The young man was playing the piano, and a third young woman in the middle of the floor was laughing and executing a fancy dance step. Over by the window stood Gilbert Blye with Mrs. Russel. In his hand he held a tiny gold watch, and in the open lid there smiled a portrait of lovely June Warner.

"She is simply stunning," said Mrs. Russel appreciatively. "Do you suppose she will live here?"

Gilbert Blye smiled, and, shutting the watch with a decisive click, he put it in his pocket and walked into the hall. As he started up the stairs he stopped, surprised by the beautiful figure which emerged from a room and came down toward him with queenly grace. It was June, an entrancing vision of loveliness in her borrowed finery, and in her eyes was a new light.

"Will you give me a cigarette, please?" she gayly requested him, and he looked at her in astonishment.

"Why—why, yes!" he stammered.

He produced his case, and she took a cigarette. Still studying her curiously, he lit his pocket lighter for her, and a slight frown twitched upon his brow as, puckering her beautiful red lips, she blew a long thin stream of blue smoke into his face.

"Come on," she called, and, taking his arm, she tripped smilingly into the parlor, with a sidelong glance, however, as she left the hall, at the stalwart attendant who guarded the front door.

"Whose dress am I wearing?" she cheerfully demanded.

"It's mine," said one of the girls, jumping up from the side of Cunningham and walking all around her. "But, honey, I'm bound to say that it looks better on you than it does on me." And there was a trace of envy in the compliment.

"By George, you're a dream!" said Orin Cunningham, who had been too much astonished to rise until now, and, with a sidelong glance at Gilbert Blye, he walked across to her, and from his pocket he drew a long white leather case closed with a golden clasp. He opened it, drew something from it and, his eyes sparkling, held up a string of milk white pearls.

"How about it?"

She flashed her large, lustrous eyes at him, and her rosy lips parted in a smile; then she looked at Gilbert Blye. He hesitated a moment and nodded. Then she bent her head, and Cunningham threw the string of pearls around her beautiful white neck.

She put her arm through his and merrily danced across the room to a mirror, where with sparking eyes she admired the pretty bauble.

"I think I'll have a cocktail, please," she said, turning suddenly to Mrs. Russel. "Why has no one offered me one?"

"Bless your heart, honey," laughed Mrs. Russel. "I didn't suppose you knew how to drink a cocktail."

June was a bubble, a sprite, a dancing effervescence, a gay little tantalization, until Mrs. Russel returned with cocktails for all of them. June drank hers with enchanting abandon.

Suddenly she whirled to the door, and Cunningham was after her in a flash.

IT is sometimes a difficult problem to tell how to invest safely the fund collected from life insurance so that it will yield a sufficient income to live on.

It is a particularly big problem even to a woman with some knowledge of safe investments.

It is no problem at all, however, if the fund is bequeathed in the form of a Monthly Income policy,—something that does away with the danger of subsequent investment and that returns a stated sum the first of every month.

JOHNSON BOWS TO WHITE MAN

Jess Willard, Texan Cowboy White Hope, Regains Lost Laurels for His Race.

FIGHT SETS PRECEDENT

(By Telegraph to Daily Press)

Havana, April 5.—In one of the greatest prize fights that ever decided a title Jess Willard knocked out Jack Johnson in the twenty-sixth round here this afternoon.

Both fighters took much punishment, especially Willard, who was battered and banged around the ring during the greater part of the milling by the ebony title defender. He showed rare gameness and in the early stages of the game gave Johnson a taste of real competition for the crown. Johnson's confidence and broad grin, so characteristic of all his battles, were in evidence at all times while Jess took the matter seriously from start to finish. Willard upheld his end with a rare gameness while Johnson exhibited his well known cunningness.

At the end of the ninth round the odds had shifted to the white man's favor. Money began to change hands in great quantities and there still appeared to be plenty of Johnson money in evidence.

One hour before Johnson and Willard were called into the ring to begin their battle for the championship of the world, 4,000 people were in the Mariana race track, and the crowd was coming in fast. The afternoon was an ideal one for the fight, although it was somewhat chilly for the spectators and many overcoats were in evidence.

As soon as the five hundred armed Cuban troops arrived they were distributed to the stations at various parts of the track. At noon the betting was eight to five on Johnson. The betting on the mutual machines showed that two persons were choosing Johnson against one for Willard. The machine betting on the number of rounds showed that 75 per cent of the betters were wagering that the fight would end before the twenty-fifth round.

At noon there were 6,000 persons in the track and the crowd was still pouring in, while a band entertained the spectators. Before the fighters

TRI-CAR CHEMICAL MAKES GREAT RECORD

Cyclists Defy Blinding Snow Storm in Run From New York to Plainfield.

In the midst of the juvenile blizzard that almost paralyzed local traffic Saturday afternoon, Plainfielders started back in surprise at the approach of a strange-looking vehicle which plunged through the Park avenue drifts as though they were so much paper. The contrivance was a motorcycle affair, carrying large cylindrical tanks, and kept straight along under the guidance of two men until fire headquarters on East Second street was reached. It was learned there that the odd affair was a Dayton tri-car chemical, an absolutely new idea in fire fighting apparatus. It is handled by the Woodhouse Manufacturing Company, of New York, of which David Woodhouse, a former Plainfielder, is the head, and was sent out by him for exhibition during the scheduled test of the new Nott engine.

The tri-car chemical is nothing more than a complete chemical engine mounted in motorcycle form. It carries all the equipment of the old style chemicals, and with room for two men, can hit up a speed of forty-five miles an hour. It has been put on the market only recently, and will undoubtedly be adopted in hundreds of cities to take care of first runs and telephone alarm fires.

In the trip to this city from New York on Saturday the machine stood up under a gruelling test its makers never counted on. The riders, Messrs. Jeanroy and Reynolds, left the metropolis by way of the Staten Island ferry at 10 o'clock. The storm delayed them in transit, and it was not until noontime that they reached Perth Amboy. Despite warnings that they would encounter huge drifts, the riders took their departure from that city at 2 o'clock, and battled with the storm all the way to Plainfield. They passed a score of automobiles stuck fast and numerous trolleys imprisoned in drifts, but finally arived in this city without a stall at 3:30, making the run in an hour and a half. Both men were soaked through from melted snow, and Jeanroy, who is a former Dayton bicycle expert, said it was the worst ride he has ever had in his life. The Dayton tri-car is being kept at fire headquarters and will be demonstrated at the Nott engine test Wednesday afternoon.

"HOPE TRIUMPHANT" GIVEN AT NETHERWOOD CHURCH

The Netherwood Reformed church was filled last evening with the largest audience that ever gathered in the building, to enjoy the Easter service of the Sunday-school. An orchestra of ten pieces led the music and played for the offertory. Hope Triumphant was the title of the service, and held the attention and interest of all to the end. Among those who took part were the following:

Recitation, "The Easter Message," Elsie Frazier; solo with chorus, "Glad News of Easter," Grace Gedney; from the Beginners' Department, a recitation by Roland Prudhon; duet by Jeanette and Junior Rush; recitations by Blanche Hughes and Rene Scott; recitation, "Unto Him Who Hath Redeemed Us," by Gertrude Steer; recitation, "Seeking Jesus," Della Dunn; recitation, "Little Boy Blue," Russell Ackor, exercise, "Had I Been There," T. Mallinson, George Gardner, Norman Staats; exercise, "Tell Me the Easter Story," Claudia Gonod, Evelyn Hughes; recitation, "Resurrection and Life," Tessie Haines; duet and chorus, Maud Morris and Horace J. Martin; exercise, "An Easter Message," Augusta Carson, Mabel Rhodes, Ruth Shiner, Beatrice Potter; exercise, "The Easter Call," Loretta Hurst, Muriel Kennedy, Lola Wyckoff, Bertha Drake. Miss Mary Cooper was the pianist for the service.

MISS COOLEY A BRIDESMAID.

Miss Marjorie Cooley, of North Plainfield, was the bridesmaid at the wedding of Miss Edna Willetts Hicks, daughter of the late John S. Hicks, of Roslyn, L. CALKINS FAVORS PUBLIC HEARING

Mayor Suggests Putting "Anti-Shingle Question" up to the Taxpayers.

AGITATION IS AROUSED

Sentiment Appears to Be Evenly Divided—Building Trades' Council Active in Issue—Mayor Takes Neither Side.

That it would be advisable to hold a public hearing on the agitation for an "anti-shingle ordinance" in Plainfield, is the belief of Mayor Leighton Calkins. In his message to the Common Council, in January, the Mayor advocated the holding of public hearings on all questions of interest to the taxpayers in general and in commenting on the topic that has recently attracted so much attention to a Daily Press reporter, this morning, he said:

"This is one of the issues on which a public hearing should be held. Numerous taxpayers have become interested in the measure and the only adequate method of placing this topic before the public in general is to advertise a public mass meeting. There are numerous reasons for the introduction of such an amendment to our building code and there are also a number of good objections to be pointed out. Serious consideration should be given the proposition in any event."

Indication of the sentiment aroused by an article appearing in the Daily Press early last week relative to this proposed amendment is evidenced in the bulk of mail received by Mayor Calkins from citizens interested in the topic. A number of these communicants write for information and some of the points could be cleared up satisfactorily only by a public hearing.

In the opinion of Mayor Calkins there are individuals in Plainfield well qualified to speak on both phases of the issue and the expediency of adopting such an amendment would be settled at the hearing.

It is a well-known fact that several councilmen are in favor of the measure and have openly expresed their views on it. On the other hand the Building Trades' Council, one of the ruling forces among Plainfield mechanics, has placed itself on record in the public press as being opposed to the proposition. Further data on the question is being sought by the Mayor and he has communicated with his brother, an alderman in Newton, Mass., where a similar measure is being considered.

According to Fire Chief Doane a majority of the big conflagrations recorded throughout the country in past years have been due primarily to the presence of shingle roofs, this style of covering having been instrumental in spreading the flames. Besides Chief Doane, Councilman Charles C. Graves has declared that he is in favor of the proposition and other councilmen, while they remain non-committal, are understood to be ready to vote in favor of the amendment.

INTEREST MANIFESTED IN "FATHER AND SON" DINNER

Elaborate preparations are being made by the committe for the "Father and Son" banquet, which is to be given on Thursday night, April 15, at the Y. M. C. A., at which time several prominent speakers will be in attendance. Any boy who is a member of the Y. M. C. A. can bring his father to the banquet, or any father that belongs to the association can bring his son, provided the lad is over twelve years of age.

Dr. George J. Fisher, head of the physical department of the national committee of the Y. M. C. A., will be one of the principal speakers of the evening, while Alexander Millar, of Plainfield, will speak on "What a Father Ought to Be to a Son." Roscoe Blanchard will take the other side of the topic and will address the gathering on "What a Son Ought to Be to a Father."

CIVIC ASS'N MEETING.

The regular meeting of the East End Civic Association will be held in the Nethedwood Reformed church tomorrow evening. The subject will be "Clean Up, Paint Up and Beautify the City." A series of lantern slides will show what can be done by individual and united effort in these matters.

LEWIS T. MATLACK WEDS MISS HENRY

RECEPTION FOLLOWS

Bride is Attended by Miss Marie Moore—Melville Roseberry is Best Man and Charles Cregar and James Steenson Are Ushers.

Miss Leora M. Henry, daughter of Mrs. G. W. Henry, of Liberty street, and Lewis T. Matlack, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis H. Matlack, of Clinton avenue, were married in the First Baptist church this afternoon in the presence of about two hundred guests, including relatives and intimate friends from Philadelphia, New York, Connecticut, Westfield and this city. Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong, pastor of the church, performed the ceremony.

The bride was gowned in white chiffon taffeta, trimmed with tulle and orange blossoms. She wore a white picture hat and carried a shower bouquet of bride roses, lilies of the valley and sweet peas. She was attended by Miss Marie Moore of this city, as bridesmaid, who wore a gown of pink crepe de chine, trimmed with little rosebuds and carried a bouquet of pink carnations.

The best man was Melville Roseberry, of this city, and the ushers were Charles Cregar and James Steenson, also of Plainfield. J. C. Dushanek, organist of the Episcopal church, Westfield, was at the organ and played several selections while the guests were arriving and the wedding march as the bridal party entered the church.

CHURCH WORK DURING THE YEAR REVIEWED

Seventh-Day Baptist Hold Annual Meeting and Election of Trustees.

Reports submitted by Treasurer William M. Stillman at the aanual meeting of the Seventh-Day Baptist church yesterday afternoon indicate that work of the various societies and the church has been about normal during the past year, no increases or decreases of any special note being recorded. During the session Alexender W. Vars, who presided, was elected to the board of trustees for a period of four years to fill the unexpired term of the late David E. Titsworth, the latter having been named at last year's annual meeting to succeed himself for a term of five years. William M. Stillman was re-elected for five years and Asa Randolph was reappointed clerk.

Officers of the church committees made encouraging reports of the year's work, all of which indicated progress. Following the meeting a social hour was enjoyed, during which members of the congregation rendered a number of selections.

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED OF ROSEWELL G. ROLSTON

Mr. and Mrs. George D. Munson of Wallingford, Conn., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Marjory Jean Munson, to Roswell Graves Rolston, formerly of New York, but now of Englewood. Mr. Rolston, who was graduated from Princeton in the Class of 1910, is the son of William H. Rolston. The wedding will be in May.

Mr. Rolston is a brother of Brown Rolston, of North Plainfield, and has frequently visited here where he has many friends and acquaintances. He has on numerous occasions taken part in plays given by the Plainfield Comedy Club and other entertainments at the Park Club.

MOTHERS' LUNCHEON.

The Mothers' Association of the Plainfield High School will give a luncheon at 12:30 o'clock and a card party at 2 o'clock on Saturday, April 17, at the Plainfield High School building. Tickets for the luncheon are limited. The proceeds of the affair will be used to extend lunches to other schools. Tickets for the affair may be procured from any member of the association, or Mrs. G. Stewart Simons, of 247 East Ninth street.

RASORES MEETING.

The Rasores will meet with Mrs. Henry Elliott Bowen, of Watchung avenue, tomorrow morning.

SECRET SERVICE MEN GET SAFFORD

Former Clerk of Hotel Kensington Arrested in Brooklyn.

ON PERJURY CHARGE

Will Be Arraigned Before Commissioner Houghton Today—Prisoner Admits That Watervliet Woman is His Wife.

Charged with perjury, Frank D. Safford, formerly a clerk in Hotel Kensington, who declared under oath, before Commissioner Houghton, at the examination of Rae Tanzer, that James W. Osborne was the man who visited the local hostelry with the girl on October 18, will be arraigned before the commissioner today. He was arrested by Secret Service men Saturday night at Hotel Clarendon, Brooklyn, where he had been registered under the name of "S. D. Franklin" for less than twenty-four hours.

When arrested Safford at once admitted his identity, gave his age as sixty, and said he came from Philadelphia. He is at present a prisoner in the Greenwich street jail, apparently resigned to whatever fate may befall him.

He is in an extremely nervous condition, according to the New York police, who say that his condition has been brought on by excessive drinking since the hearing. He asks repeatedly to be allowed to send out for whiskey, but this request is denied him.

"I'm an old man," he said; "I am used to a few drinks. If I don't get them I may not be able to stand the ordeal of being locked up."

In the arrest of Safford the government has dealt a blow at one of the chief points in the case against Mr. Osborne. William T. Kitchen, proprietor of Hotel Kensington, had testified at the hearing that Osborne had not visited his place of business on October 18, Safford took the stand, and not only said that James W. Osborne was "Oliver Osborne," but that he was a "dead beat," and that he always remembered a "dead beat."

At 5:30 yesterday afternoon a short, dark man visited the police station to call on Safford. He gave the police lieutenant on the desk the name of "Mr. Engel, 154 Nassau street." He said he was counsel for Safford. Safford received him, and the two men talked for not more than five minutes. The visitor refused to tell newspaper men his name or business, and denied that he was counsel for Safford.

After being locked up Safford admitted that the woman in Watervliet, N. Y., who had requested the New York police to find out whether or not Safford was her husband, was his wife.

TO AID THE POOR CHILDREN OF THE SOUTH

One of the most attractive affairs of the Easter season will be the The Dansant which is to be given by the Pine Mountain Association at the Park Club, Saturday afternoon from 3:30 to 7 o'clock. A general invitation is extended to the public and those who do not dance may enjoy the music of Frantzen's orchestra and be served with tea and ices.

The members of the Pine Mountain Association hope that a generous sum may be realized in this way for the betterment of the poor children of the Pine Mountain region of Kentucky.

LYCEUM'S EASTER SERVICE.

Under the auspices of the Plainfield Lyceum an Easter service was held in Bethel chapel yesterday. The program included solos by Mr. Blair and Miss Jones, recitation by Miss Stewart, solos by Dr. Hobson and Miss Gladys Robinson, recitation by Miss Ruth Alexander and a solo by Mr. Lambert. The chapel was attractively decorated with palms and Easter lilies. The offering amounted to $7:30, and of this $5 was given to the Charity Organization Society, and the balance put in the Plainfield Trust Company.

ANNUAL PARLOR MEETING.

The annual parlor meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A will be held Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Philip Suffern, 944 Kensington avenue. An interesting program including a presentation of a comparatively new department of the association's activity is being arranged. There will also be a good speaker at this meeting.

HEALTH BOARD MEETING.

The monthly meeting of the North Plainfield Board of Health will be held tonight at 8 o'clock. Business of importance will be discussed.

FINDS THE CUBANS "SOAK" AMERICANS

Edward Carty Home From Trip During Which He Had Chance to Observe.

Edward Carty, of Orchard place, returned home yesterday after a thirteen weeks' business trip in the Southern States and Cuba as southern sales manager for the Durham Duplex Razor Company. Mr. Carty visited all the principal cities in Florida, Georgia, Alabama, and crossing over to Cuba spent several weeks in Havanna and adjacent towns.

Speaking of business conditions, Mr. Carty said the outlook is very promising and from observations made during his stay in Cuba declares the Americans have a chance of a lifetime for developing Southern trade. Every dealer on the Island is anxious to be agent for all American goods and the busines hitherto held by the French and Germans is rapidly being supplanted while the war is on. There is one thing he discovered, however, and that is that the Cubans, like the Europeans, regard the Yankee as a "sucker" to be fleeced at every turn. If he lets them do it, the man from the "States" is charged about five times as much as anybody else for everything he gets or buys. The Plainfielder stopped at the Royal Poinciana at Palm Beach and also enjoyed the mid-winter activity at Daytona, Ormond Beach and other cities in Florida.

Thomas Sheehan, a former Plainfield man, is vice-president of the Durham Duplex Company, and he and Mr. Carty will leave tomorrow for a trip to points in Kentucky and Tennesee.

LUCKY DAY FOR JOHNSTONS IN THE CITY POLICE COURT

Thomas and George Johnston, colored, although they lay claim to none of the versatile "Jack's" pugilistic blood, were arraigned in the city police court this morning for complicity in a couple of fistic duels, and both got off lucky. Whether Judge DeMeza was observing the "Johnston Day of Cuba" or not is a matter of conjecture, but he saw fit to deal out suspended sentences to each of the Johnstons.

Thomas Johnston, who lives at 334 East Fourth street, purchased a supply of Bock beer Saturday night, and put it away for Sunday use. A "nightmare" told Johnston that something was happening to the booze, and he got out of bed at 2 a. m. to see if the fluid was where he had left it. The liquor had disappeared, and Johnston accused William Edwards and George Gilbert, who live in the same house, of taking it. A "free-for-all" ensued, and during the mix-up Edwards, who had consumed a large portion of the beer, got hold of a Flobert rifle. The other two men, seeing the weapon being flourished in a menacing manner above their heads, became allied, and managed to get it away from Edwards, but only after it had been discharged. A cop appeared and placed all three under arrest. In court this morning Edwards was fined $20, with the option of spending forty days in the county jail, and Gilbert got $10 or twenty days. Johnston was sent on his way with a warning.

George Johnston got into a fight with James Hill on West Third street. After hearing the case Judge DeMeza fined Hill $10, in default of which he will have to go to Elizabeth for forty days.

BOROUGH COURT.

Peter Gorden, of New Brunswick, was arrested in the borough yesterday for general disorder in the Park section. He is an umbrella mender, and came to town with a companion, who succeeded in getting away. They went from house to house, and, it is said, were abusive to women. Gorden was given twenty days in the county jail before Recorder Hand this morning, and will be taken to Somerville tomorrow.

ITALIANS IN FIGHT.

John Dellepash, of Jackson avenue, and Michael Lindieroloth, of 768 St. Mary's avenue, got into a scrap yesterday at the latter's home, Lindieroloth coming out of the fray with a razor gash over his left eye. Dellepash is alleged to have inflicted the cut. Both were arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court this morning, Dellepash getting a sentence of $20 or forty days, while the other Italian got $10 or twenty days.

COMMITTED TO JAIL.

In default of the necessary $300 bail, under which he was held for the grand jury by Judge DeMeza Saturday on a charge of practicing medicine without a license, "Dr." Chester L. Brown, colored, was committed to the Union county jail at Elizabeth yesterday.

Czar's Army Has Forced Beskid Pass in Carpathians, With Hungary Before It.

MORE SHIPS ARE SUNK

Rumors of Peace Mission of Djavid Pash Persist in Cropping up—Turks Say Two Muscovite Ships Have Been Sunk.

London, April 5.—An overwhelming Russian army has seam-rillered its way through the Beskid Pass into the Hungarian plains. News of the victory, the result of two weeks of the most desperate fighting, comes from Vienna, which admits that "the presence of large Russian reinforcements arriving from Przemysl compelled the Austrian army to withdraw from the Beskid region in the Carpathians."

The official Petrograd report of the operations says:

"In the Carpathians on Friday we gained a great success in the section north of the roads leading to Bartfeld and also in the region between Mezo Laborcz and Lutowiska.

"During that day we captured on the Carpathian front more than 2,000 soldiers and three guns and [illegible] machine guns.

"In the Zaleszitrow region the Austrians essayed an offensive, but all their attacks failed completely. We captured two officers and about 100 men.

"In the direction of Chotin, Bessarabia, after the grave defeat inflicted on them March 30 by portions of our cavalry, who delivered an irresistable attack while on foot, the Austrians evacuated our territory and withdrew to their frontier, where they are fortifying themselves.

Vienna, April 5.—Retreat of the Austrian forces in the Beskid region was announced today at army headquarters. The statement is as follows:

"The presence of large Russian reinforcements, arriving from Przemysl, compelled the Austrian Army to withdraw from the Beskid region.

SUCCESSFUL PLAYS FOR BELGIAN RELIEF

"Twelve Pound Look" and "A Many of Destiny" to Be Given April 15.

Each of the two plays to be given at the Plainfield Theatre on Thursday evening, April 15, for the purpose of raising funds to buy milk for the Belgian babies is one of the most interesting and successful by its famous author. J. M. Barrie's Twelve Pound Look," a one-act comedy, made a great hit when produced in New York some years ago with Ethel Barrymore in the leading role. It is a play that is very much in the spirit of the times, depending upon the revolt of a young woman from matrimonial tyranny and her struggle for independence. In fact "The Twelve Pound Look" is that expression which comes into a woman's face when she has formed the determination to make the break for independence.

Like most of Barrie's plays, there is beneath the fun which keeps the audience laughing throughout, a real meaning—at least for husbands.

Shaw's "Man of Destiny," also a one-act play, but a long one, is appropriate in this day of war. It reveals the character of the greatest of conquerors in the midst of his first campaign when he had everything to gain and nothing to lose, except honor. It is his honor that is at stake in this play. He must and does choose between that and his career. It was in the part of this young General Bonaparte, when he was not more than thirty at the time of the Italian campaign against the Austrians, that Arnold Daly made his greatest hit.

The plays are to be presented under the auspices of the Plainfield Belgian Relief Committee, of which Mrs. Frederick W. Wallace is chairman, and the cast includes some of the best known amateurs in the city.

PLEDGE ALLEGIANCE TO AMERICAN COLORS

Pleasing Easter Program at First Presbyterian Church.

The Sunday-school of the First Presbyterian church had charge of the Easter service yesterday, and gave an interesting program. The call to the colors and the pledge of allegiance to the American and Christian flags was used as the opening ceremony which were followed by verses of "America" and "Brightly Gleams the Banner." The church choir rendered an anthem entitled "As It Began to Dawn." "The Cross and the Flag," a tableau, recitation and chorus, was given, Mrs. F. B. Moffett, contralto, and Miss Ruth D. Sadler, soprano, singing a duet, while members of the Sunday school draped the American and Christian flags over the arms of a white cross on the pulpit.

Alfred Estes, secretary of the local Y. M. C. A., made the address, and talked on the subject of "What Easter Should Mean to Every Individual." For the offertory the choir sang "Lift Up Your Glad Voices," by Bernald.

A special musical service was held in the evening, several anthems being rendered by the choir, and Elmer Winckler giving several violin solos, including "Humereske." Miss Ruth Sadler sang a soprano solo, "Allelujah." Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, pastor of the church, took for his sermon topic, "The Truth As It Is in Jesus." There was a large congregation at both services.

BIBLE SCHOOL GIVES EASTER DAY PROGRAM

Pleasing Easter services were held at the Temple Baptist church yesterday morning, in which the Bible school took part. There was an unusually large attendance. Rev. Evarts C. Conover, pastor, and L. W. Randolph, superintendent of the school, were in charge of the services. The program: "O. Day of Rest and Gladness," school; salute to the flag, responsive reading, led by L. W. Randolph; prayer, Frank Stewart; "In the Cross of Christ," school; solo, Mrs. J. B. Cottrell; "The Easter Story," Mrs. Edward Baker, Jr.; "Christ is Risen," school; "The Easter Cross," Alice Simons, Gladys Stites, Helen Waldron, Cora Harper; the application; Rev. Evarts C. Conover; solo, Mrs. J. B. Cottrell; secretary's report, H. R. Bouton; "The Head that Once was Crowned with Thorns," school; benediction, Rev. Mr. Conover.

BENEFIT ENTERTAINMENT PROMISES TO BE A SUCCESS

Tickets are selling rapidly for the entertainment and dance which is to be given by the Polish people of Plainfield for the benefit of their suffering people in Poland, on Saturday night, April 10, in Saengerbund Hall. The principal feature of the program will be a three-act play, which will be enacted by local amateur talent, entitled, "A January Night." Joseph Dukszta is coaching the players, and expressed himself highly elated with the showing of the performers. Beside the local young people, there will be several out-of-town soloists who will render vocal selections.

EASTER SERVICE AT PARK AVE. BAPTIST

Attractive Program by Bible School Followed by Baptism.

The Easter program of the Park Avenue Baptist Bible School in charge of the superintendent, Willard M. Maxim, was given in the church auditorium in the morning in place of the usual preaching service, and included the following numbers by members of the main school and elementary department: Recitation, "What the Bird Sang," May Dorman; recitation, "The Gay Little Brook," Catharine Olhl; song, "Welcome Carol Ring," Elementary Department; exercise by six beginners; recitation, "When God Speaks," Francis Gerlash; recitation, "A soldier's Story," Alice Spangenberg; song, "The Lillies," Elementary Department; recitation, Grace Mosher; recitation, Emily Van Winkie; recitation, "A Vision of the Cross," Clara Hadley; "The Easter Story," written and read by Hilda Van Winkle.

The pastor, Rev. Dr. Birney S. Hudson, gave a short Easter talk, after which the ordinance of baptism was administered to the following candidates: Mrs. Grace Robinson, Miss Marjorie Robinson, Myra Gage, Milton Runyon, Ralph Vail and Burton Casner.

Easter anthems were rendered by the church choir, with Miss Iona Wood at the organ. William N. Runyon led the singing, and the following members of the Bible School orchestra accompanied the Easter songs: Violins, Arthur S. Mosher, leader; Mrs. Willard Maxim, Miss Lisle Smith, Mr. Tanham, cornet, Mr. Casner; piano, Mrs. John Manley.

Dr. Hudson preached again in the evening upon the subject of Easter, and the choir rendered several anthems, with Frederick Smith at the organ. Arthur Mosher, violin, accompanied the singing of both choir and congregation. The following candidates were baptized at the close of the service: Marie Kling, Martha Casner, Elizabeth Mills, Esther Hellstrom, Anna Southard, Ida Mills, Marion Doughty, Lisle Smith, Fred Mills and Nicholas Cody. Dr. Hudson baptized Mrs. J. E. Henry in the afternoon.

CRAIG-A-LEA LODGE HOLD ENJOYABLE SESSION

Craigielea Lodge, No. 43, Daughters of Scotia, held an enthusiastic meeting in its lodg rooms, Saturday night. An enjoyable social hour was spent with the clansmen, during which Mrs. Jessie Spalding and Miss Margaret Lawrie were each presented with an appropriate gift from the sisters in appreciation of their services in Craigielea Lodge since its origination.

The members decided to hold a dime social and clipping party on Monday night, April 12, in their hall, 109 Park avenue, when all the clansmen and their friends will receive a hearty welcome and a royal good time.

NEW YORK AMUSEMENTS

The "Gypsy Maids" will be at the Columbia Theatre, New York, for the week commencing Monday afternoon, April 5, when a new idea in burlesque will be presented. A two-act satire called "Smoke Among the Gypsies" is the title of the offering. "Smoke" is the name by which an odd character is known and whose funny eccentricities serve to furnish most of the laughter. He is captured by a band of roving outlaws and the troubles that beset him, *while not at all amusing to the vic*time, have a highly humorous effect upon the audience. Tom McRae, one of the best comedians in burlesque, plays the unfortunate "Smoke" and he is surrounded by a big company of comedians, singers and dancers, who succeed perfectly in furnishing the sort of entertainment that keeps the spectators constantly laughing or applauding. All the scenes are characteristic of Gypsy life which admits of picturesque surroundings both in scenery and costuming. Incidental to the performance there will be expert exhibitions of all the modern dances, and a score or more lively musical numbers rendered by a stage full of pretty, vivacious girls is one of the distinctly enjoyable features of the production.

TWELVE JOINED CHURCH.

Following the close of a week of evangelistic services, which came to an end at Hope Chapel, Friday night, twelve united with the church on confession of faith last evening, when the holy communion was administered. A large congregation was in attendance. At the morning service four infants were baptized. At the service last evening Miss Eunice Eckert sang in a most pleasing way as a contralto solo Harry Rowe Shelley's "Resurrection."

CONTESTANTS LOOSE BALLOT AVALANCHE FOR SPECIAL PRIZES

Winners to Be Announced as Soon as Votes Are Counted—All Eyes Again Turn to Free Trips Across Continent.

First Prize.
Second Prize.
Merchandise Certificate, good for $25.00 in trade at Woodhull & Martin Co., 163 East Front Street, and $15.00 in gold.
Third Prize.

The special prize contest in connection with the Press' Panama-Pacific tour contest came to a close at 10 p. m. last Saturday night and the voting all day long reached enormous proportions. From early in the morning until the door to the Press office was locked at 10 p. m. there was a steady stream of candidates and their friends bringing in the subscriptions to be counted for the special prizes. During the closing hours the heavy votes arrived and it was a late hour before the contest department had got out from under the avalanche of votes that descended upon them during the day.

As soon as the task of verifying of subscriptions as to "New" and "Old" readers can be accomplished, the lucky three winners of the special prizes will be announced. At the present time it is impossible to announce the exact date that the names of the winners will be made known.

Now that the special prize contest is over, the grand prizes, the tours to the Panama-Pacific Exposition, are the big attractions. These are the prizes that all the candidates started out to win, but in the scramble for the special prizes the tours were overlooked for the time being. Now is the time to size up the vote standing of the various candidates and plan on the votes needed to win the tours. From now on until the closing hour of the contest, 10 p. m., Saturday, April 17, there should not be one minute let-up in vote-getting. Those who are idle may regret it when the winners are announced at the end of the contest.

More enthusiastic than ever has become the desire to be on the roll of honor. Wilder has became the mad rush for votes. More persons than ever are closely watching the ups and downs of the contestants. The votes are being found and are being added to the credit of those who look for them.

Who will win is uncertain and no one can foretell the results.

As to Votes.

Some o fthe contestants in this race believe that a few thousand votes are going to bring them in the honor of winning. Many a time a contestant has estimated the strength of her opponents too lightly, and consequently at the wind-up is outdistanced by a few thousand votes that she could have secured is she thought she would need them.

The safest plan is to get every vote possible and be able to spring a surprise or two yourself if you think it necessary on the final night.

To ensure fairness to all, the utmost care will be exercised to guard the interests of all contestants in making the awards.

There is one fact that he contestants should never lose sight of—subscriptions are what count the most. Therefore, the more new subscriptions you secure the better your chances.

Candidates in the Press trans-continental and Panama-Pacific Exposition tour contest are hard at work securing votes which will win one of these tours for them. Four women will be the guests of the Press on this tour, with all expenses paid. Three will win in the principal contest, and the one securing the largest number of votes will name the chaperone of the party, who will also go on the tour as the guest of the Press.

MADEN CHEWS TOBACCO AND GETS A "KNOCKOUT"

While skylarking with a young companion in the roadway on North avenue, among the fight-fans gathered to listen to the megaphoned returns from the Daily Press office this afternoon, fourteen-year-old Albert Maden, of 616 South Second street, was knocked from his feet and stunned by falling on his face.

Dr. Carl A. Gesswein, of Central avenue, stopped his car and instructed the boys' companions to carry him into the rear office of the Daily Press. Alfred promptly revived, however, on hearing his older brother Andrew ask, "What you been doin', chewin' tobacco again?"

According to a companion, Alfred, who is of slight build and not larger than ordinary for his age, can "chew as much tobacco as a man." He departed promptly on recovering consciousness, apparently little the worse except for a bruise where his face struck the macadam pavement.

MRS. PHILLIP HAPNEY DIES FROM PLEURO-PNEUMONIA

Mrs. Kathryn J. Hapney, wife of Philip B. Hapney, died early yesterday morning at her home at 216 East Second stret, following an illness of five days with pleuro-pneumonia. Mrs. Hapney was born in New York fifty-six years ago but had resided in Plainfield for the past thirty years. She was employed for a long time by Mrs. Percy H. Stewart. Mrs. Hapney's maiden name was Kathryn Kiernan. She had many friends throughout the city and borough. Beside her husband she is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Harry E. Hann, of East Third street, and two brothers in New York.

The funeral will be held at the late home Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 and will be in charge of Rev C. M. Anderson, of the First M. E church. Burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

Y. M. C. A. BOYS ENJOY A TWELVE MILE "HIKE"

A party of twelve boys of the Y. M. C. A. "hiked" to Summit and back last Friday afternoon. From Summit they went by train to Madison and visited C. William Binge man, former boy's secretary of the local association, and renamed a the Madison association over night. The party left Madison at 9 o'clock Saturday morning and tramped home in the snow storm.

Those who took the trip were Edwin Glaentzer, Joe Angerbauer, Howard Willet, Donald Henwood, Wesley Johnson, Davis Blanchard, Alva Brownlee, Martin Snyder, Irwin Manley, Lorenzo Prower, "Mac" Fullerton and Russell Tomlinson.

EVENTS OF THE WEEK AT HEAVENLY REST CHURCH

The Board of Trustees will meet in the parish house tomorrow night. The Women's Guild will meet Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in the parish house. The confirmation class will meet next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The bishop will make a visit for confirmation on Wednesday, May 26, at 7:30 o'clock. Public baptism will be held in the church next Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock. This was to have been held last Saturday afternoon but was postponed because of the storm.

INFORMAL DANCE HELD AT THE PARK CLUB

An informal dance was held at the Park Club Saturday but because of the bad weather there was only a small number of members present. Excellent music was furnished by VanEps brothers and those who did brave the storm enjoyed themselves.

The affair was in charge of the entertainment committee of which Mrs. Hugh S. Jarvis is chairman. Refreshments were served during the evening.

MRS. FRANK WHITE.

Mrs. Louise R. White, wife of Frank P. White, of New York, died Saturday morning, at the home of G. W. Rosan, of Farragut road. The funeral will be private and burial will be in Philadelphia, at the convenience of the family.

TO HOLD EUCHRE.

The Men's Association of the Church of the Heavenly Rest will hold a progressive euchre in the parish house on Thursday night of this week, at 8 o'clock. Members of the association and their friends are invited to attend.

CLAIM FOR $228,060.

Washington, April 5—The American Ambassador at Berlin today presented a claim for $228,060, with interest from January last, to the Berlin government on behalf of the owners and captain of the American sailing vessel, William P. Frye.

PERSONAL.

Mr. and Mrs. Archibald D. Davis, of Lakewood, who have been spending a few days with the parents of Mrs. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Henry E. Bowen, of Watchung avenue, have returned home. During their stay here, Mr. Bowen observed the seventieth aniversary of his birthday, and he received many congratulations.

Mrs. Margaret Hansen, of East Second street, is confined to her home with an attack of the grip.

Emil Droll, for many years a resident of this city, but more recently residing at Bethlehem, Pa., is spending a few days in town visiting friends.

LOCAL ROAD BUILDERS GET TWO MORE CONTRACTS

Plainfield's hustling contracting firm, Messrs. Burke & Bonham, were awarded two more contracts last week. They secured one for the Finderne road at Manville, calling for the building of two miles of macadam for $11,448, beating the next nearest bidder out by $218. On Saturday afternoon the Chesterfield Township Committee, Burlington county, gave Burke & Bonham the contract for two and a quarter miles of macadam road with gravel shoulder at a figure of $19,726. The bidding of this contract was also close, as the second firm was only $200 below.

Burke & Bonham have been busy for the past two months on one of the largest road contracts South Jersey has given out the past year. They are building a fourteen-mile stretch of gravel thoroughfare in Atlantic county, between Hammonton and Wheatroad station. The contract figure was $67,500. The firm has a large amount of up-to-date equipment on the job, comprising steam shovels, traction engines, and two locomotives with cars for hauling gravel will be added this week.

REFER PLUMBERS' TROUBLES TO ARBITRATION BOARD

Following conferences Saturday afternoon between representatives of the Master Builders' Association and the journeymen plumbers, and a meeting of the journeymen plumbers in the evening, it was decided to restore Den J. Galbraith's shop to the "fair" list, put the striking plumbers back to work and then submit the trouble to the board of arbitration for adjustment.

Consequently the plumbers returned to work this morning according to one of the master plumbers and it is hoped that the trouble will be settled within a short time.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

The annual meeting of the Woman's Foreign Mission ary Society, of the Presbytery of Elizabeth, will be held in Roselle, Tuesday, April 13, at 10 o'clock in the morning.

The Bible school of the Temple Baptist church will hold its monthly social and entertainment at the church tomorrow night.

The annual meeting of the Crescent Avenue church will be held on Wednesday evening, April 14, at 7:45 o'clock.

The annual meeting of the First Presbyterian church will be held, Wednesday evening, April 14, at 8 o'clock.

The Women's Home and Foreign Missionary Society of the First Presbyterian church will meet tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock in the chapel. The subject will be "The Freedman," and Mrs. G. N. Karner will be the leader.

A cake and apron sale will be held in the chapel of the First Presbyterian church, Friday afternoon. The proceeds from the cake sale will go to the Home Mission Society, and those from the apron sale to the Sewing Society. Tea will be served.

The Women's League of St. Joseph's church will hold its regular monthly meeting in Debele's hall tonight, after which the members and their friends will enjoy an informal social program.

QUEEN CITY HOMESTEAD.

Queen City Homestead, 4896, Brotherhood of American Yeomen, will meet tonight in Exempt Firemen's Hall, when three candidates will be initiated in the mysteries of Yeomanry. Over twenty prominent citizens of Bound Brook have signed a petition for a Homestead in that place and an organization will soon take place.

HARRY WERNER ILL.

Harry Werner, of West Front street, is quite ill at his home today, having suffered a relapse after partly recovering from an attack of acute bronchitis brought on by overwork. Mr. Werner ventured to his place of business on Saturday evening during storm, although warned of the danger of doing so in his condition, and the exposure proved too much for him.

TO HOLD LADIES' NIGHT.

Plainfield Council, No. 711, R. A., will hold a "ladies' night" on April 8, at 8:15 sharp. A large attendance is requested by the orator.

CLIMAX GUN CLUB SHOOT POSTPONED TILL SATURDAY

The unusual weather of last Saturday caused the postponement of the open shoot scheduled by the Climax Gun Club, of this city. The shoot was to have been held on the Plainfield avenue grounds and there were a large number of entries.

The program, which included ten events and several specials, will probably be run off next Saturday.

A GLIMPSE OF NEW YORK.

The Metropolis as It Appeared to a Kansas City Woman.

It takes all kinds if impressions to make up travelogues. This is what a Kansas City woman, visiting New York, wrote home:

The other day I met a once western woman who has been here five years. She fell on my neck and wept and invited me to go shopping with her. I detest shopping and was on the verge of refusal when she cinched it. She said:

"We'll go shopping and tell each other how much nicer the west is."

Believe me, I went.

My chiefest joy and recreation is getting lost in the subway. When I am not wandering about in the interior of the earth and wondering what it seems like to smother, I am shooting about on the elevated measuring the distance to the ground and figuring on how much there will be left to scoop up.

I have seen all the matinee idols, and I think Grant's tomb is a mighty roomy concern for just one family. The one thing that interests me is the Eden Musee. I gaze at the waxworks for hours and wish I was one of 'em.

Last night on the elevated I heard a young man ardently proposing to a young woman who swung beside him, holding on to the same strap. I stood right next to them. I was afraid they would leave the car before she took him, but I was satisfied from the soulful expression with which she gazed at him that she was going to take him all right. And, after all, my station was called before he finished telling her about how he hated to ask her to share his poverty, but that he loved her so deeply and truly that he felt life was dark and drear without her. I never did have a chance to overhear a proposal before, and I was so mad when my station was called that I felt like hunching her and saying: "Go ahead; tell him you'll have him—quick! I get out here!"—New York Tribune.

HARRY BALDWIN'S FUNERAL.

The funeral of Harry Baldwin, who died after a long illness with tubercular trouble, was held yesterday afternoon at the home of his sister, Mrs. Lawrence Scheelein, of 294 Somerset street. Rev. J. Y. Broek, of Trinity Reformed church, officiated, and many relatives and friends were present. The number of floral tributes was very large. Burial was made in Hillside cemetery, six brothers of the deceased acting as pallbearers.

LOCAL INTEREST IN FIGHT.

The remarkable local interest in the Johnson-Willard fight at Havana today, was shown by the crowd of more than a thousand people which gathered in front of the Daily Press office and followed the fight round by round as megaphoned from this office. The crowd almost equalled those of the world's baseball series last fall.

BOROUGH BOWLING MATCHES.

The following schedule is announced for the borough one-man bowling tournament for this week: To-night, E. Conhay vs. W. Kunzman, W. Conover vs. G. Howe; Wednesday, E. Squires vs. E. Conshay, Mentzenback vs. V. Lee; Thursday, J. McKenzie vs. P. Snyder, A. Voorhees vs. M. Ferrero.

WILLIAM L. IMES TO SPEAK.

William Lloyd Imes, the new pastor of Bethel chapel, will be present at the monthly meeting of the home missionary society of the Crescent Avenue church Friday afternoon and will tell of his work among his own people in New York. The subject of the meeting will be "The Freedmen."

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED.

Mrs. John Louden, of 329 Watchung avenue, anounces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Mary Louise, to George Edward Giddes, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Giddes, of 180 Duer street. No date has been set for the wedding.

FIVE-BACK DATE CHANGED.

The date for the handicap five-back tourney at the Park Club has been changed this week, the competition being scheduled to take place on Wednesday instead of Thursday night.

BASEBALL GAME OFF.

The North Plainfield High School-Cranford baseball game, scheduled for tomorrow on Hyde Oval, has been indefinitely postponed because of the poor condition of the field.

ARMY WILL TRAIN STUDENT RESERVE

College Men Expected to Flock to Summer Camps.

PRAISED BY COLLEGE HEADS

Presidents Lowell, Hadley and Hibben Among Those Who Uphold New Movement—Step Toward Creation of Adequate Military Reserve Conceived by Major General Wood.

Officers attached to the staff of Major General Leonard Wood, commanding the eastern division of the army on Governors island, are completing the preliminary arrangements for a great camp for military instruction to be organized at Plattsburg barracks in New York state next summer.

It is said that the camp will be a step toward the creation of an adequate military reserve in this country. Those who will receive the training will be college and university students.

This summer camp for students was General Wood's idea, and he conceived it while he was chief of the general staff. It is expected that the attendance at Plattsburg and the three camps in other parts of the country will probably double that of any previous year.

In announcing the plans for the camps the general staff says:

"The benefit of these camps to the nation is that they foster a patriotic spirit, without which a nation soon loses its virility and falls into decay. They spread among the citizens of the country a more thorough knowledge of military history, military policy and military need, all necessary to the complete education of a well equipped citizen in order that he may himself form just and true opinions on military topics.

"As a military asset these camps are of great value, since they afford the means of materially increasing the military reserve of the United States by instructing a class of educated men from which in time of national emergency would probably be drawn a large proportion of the volunteer commissioned officers, upon whose judgment and training at such a time the safety and even the lives of many of their fellow countrymen will largely depend.

"The ultimate object sought is not military aggrandizement, but to make provision, in some degree, to meet a vital need confronting us as a peaceful and unmilitary people, to the end that peace and prosperity may be preserved through the only safe precaution—viz, more thorough preparation and equipment to resist any effort to break such peace.

"The camp will be in command of a regular army officer yet to be named, and all of the instructors will be from the regular establishment. Among those indorsing the project are President Lowell of Harvard, President Hadley of Yale, President Hibben of Princeton, Chancellor Kirkland of Vanderbilt and Dr. John H. Finley, the commissioner of education of New York state.

Dr. Hadley Praises Plan.

President Hadley says: "The present European crisis adds force to every argument which has previously been urged in favor of student camps and the formation of a national defense corps."

Dr. Hadley points to England as a warning to this country. England, he says, has the men to make good soldiers, and she can manufacture the arms and accouterments needed, but the deficiency that she cannot speedily make good is the lack of officers competent to train and lead the new levies.

Dr. Hadley then points out that while the German loss in officers has been as great as that of England in proportion to the number of men engaged, she has nevertheless escaped the predicament of England, in that in time of peace she prepared herself to meet exactly the situation that has been created. She did this, he points out, by inducing every highly educated man in the German empire to qualify for duty as a reserve officer.

Speaking of the students who will attend the camps this summer throughout the country, General Wood said:

"They are setting a splendid example and demonstrating by their action that they appreciate that Americans in addition to the faithful discharge of their civic duties in time of peace have an appreciation of the obligation to prepare themselves to efficiently discharge that highest duty of the citizen service for the country in time of war. When a people forego this obligation the nation dies. We want at these camps the largest possible number of young men who possess the required military qualifications; they can render no better service to the country or to themselves."

FEARED LURE OF CRIME.

Reformed Convict Kills Self Rather Than Return to Old Life.

Rather than return to a life of crime, Fred Cassman committed suicide at a hotel in Philadelphia. In a letter found in his room Cassman said that up to twenty years ago his career had been one of petty crimes and that he had reformed as the result of twenty lashes given him at the whipping post in New Castle, Del., in 1895. Of this crime, he said, he was innocent.

From that time until a few months ago, the letter went on, he had been in business in the west. After the death of his wife and son he returned to Philadelphia, where he met some of his companions of former days and, fearing their influence, he had decided to end it all.

SIXTEEN INCH GUNS FOR UNCLE SAM'S NEW SHIPS.

Great Rifles Tested at Indian Head Weigh 100 Tons.

The two battleships provided for in the current naval bill may be armed with sixteen inch rifles, the heaviest naval guns ever designed.

While tentative plans for the new ships contemplate vessels similar in general design to the 32,000 ton giant of the California class now building details of armament and engine equipment are being given unusual attention by navy designers and the results obtained from the fifteen inch main batteries of the newest British and German battleships are being closely watched.

Already the new sixteen inch navy gun has been subjected to tests at the Indian Head proving grounds, and while details of its construction and performance are closely guarded, it is known that the gigantic weapon has given proof of its efficiency. The gun was built at the American naval gun factory.

Some idea of the probable size of the new American gun may be gathered from the fact that each of the eight fifteen-inch guns of the British battleship Queen Elizabeth weighs ninety six tons, while similar rifles designed in the Krupp works for German battleships laid down this year each weigh more than eighty-two tons. The fourteen inch rifles of the battleships New York and Texas and for the five new American Dreadnoughts now under construction weigh 68.3 tons each, and it is certain that the new sixteen inch weapon weighs more than a hundred tons without its mounting.

Krupp engineers have designed a sixteen inch gun which fires a projectile weighing 2,028 pounds, against the 1,675 pound mass of steel hurled by the fifteen inch rifles adopted for the German navy and the 1,720 pound projectiles poured into the Turkish fortresses of the Dardanelles by the British battleship Queen Elizabeth.

United States navy officers say the American fourteen inch gun is equal of the British or German fifteen inch for all practical purposes. With any target in plain view, it is said, the American gun has equal range and nearly equal penetration, the difference being more than counterbalanced by the larger number of guns carried.

CANAL WIRELESS FINISHED.

New Station Is the Largest and Most Powerful in the World.

The new wireless station in the Panama canal zone, which is the largest and most powerful in the world, has been completed. The Panama station is one of five great stations that will make it possible for the navy department to keep in communication with warships in all parts of the Atlantic and Pacific. The station will be manned and controlled by the navy.

An idea of the great range of the new station may be had when it is stated that it will be able to communicate with the wireless station in the Brooklyn navy yard, with the naval and army stations in Alaska, with the Strait of Magellan and with any point in Europe where a wireless plant is maintained.

The government experts who installed the new Panama system have been picking up regularly for weeks past the German official bulletins flashed from the wireless station at Hanover, Germany, to the station at Sayville, N. Y.

REGIMENT ADOPTS A BABY.

Turkish Infant, Deserted by Parents, Is Baptized In Greek Church.

"Our regiment has adopted a two-year-old Turkish girl baby," writes a Cossack who is serving with the Russian advance into the Turkish Caucasus. He explains:

"During our forward movement one of our men found in a farmhouse this baby, which had been abandoned by her fleeing parents. The starving little creature was cleaned, clothed and fed and then taken to the staff quarters. In the Greek church of the village of Bardus the foundling was christened according to the rites of the orthodox church, the commander of the regiment acting as godfather and Princess Gelovanna, a Red Cross nurse and wife of a member of the duma, as godmother. The child was named Alexandra Donskaia, after the name of the regiment.

"The officers and men of the regiment subscribed monthly amounts sufficient to pay for rearing and educating their regimental daughter."

1876—Siate of siege in Paris, which had lasted 5 years, raised by decree.

AFTER THE KING.

It was only a few weeks ago that the American people through the Saturday Evening Post, were told about the wonderful effects of nation-wide prohibition of the manufacture and use of Vodka in Russia. France, at the outset of the war put the ban on absinthe, and last week King Alcohol received a body blow when the King of England decided that no more intoxicating liquors would be permitted in his household. It remains for Germany and Austria to take the matter seriously.

Lloyd George, the British chancellor, is the most ardent advocate of prohibition. Back of him stands Lord Kitchener, the war minister Something must be done to stop King Alcohol's dominion over a large part of the people needed to turn out ships and war munitions. At least that is what the ship builders, the war generals at home charged with supplying the needs of the armies in the fields and Lloyd George declare.

Under the circumstances that exist in England the latest statistics concerning the consumption of liquor have a new interest. An exchange calls attention to the fact that in Great Britain and Ireland the average consumption of wines, distilled spirits and malt liquors is 32.3 gallons a person per year. This contrasts with 30.1 gallons in Russia, 51 gallons in France, 28.8 gallons in Germany, 14.8 gallons in Austria, 31.8 gallons in Italy and 22.8 gallons in the United States.

It does not follow that the anti-liquor agitation receiving its impetus from the king and high officials of the government points to excessive indulgence by the rank and file of the British people. The average Britisher is perhaps not less sober than some of his international relations, though the average consumption based on population is greater. If the utterances of those behind the campaign against King Alcohol are accurately stated the reason for the concern is that the war seems to have had the effect of more drinking only on certain classes whose brawn is very necessary in this crisis.

As the Paterson Call says, we have been reading a lot about the destruction wrought by the Hessian fly. If we remember our history aright, it was George Washington who made the Hessians fly, and it happened somewhere around Trenton.

The fire department found some consolation in the snow storm of Saturday. It stopped, for the time being, runs to put out grass fires, which had called the department out nine times on Friday. Incidentally the storm prevented for the time the test of the new engine, purchased for the Netherwood section of the city. Providence permitting, we hope to see that engine in service by the Fourth of July, or Christmas at the latest.

Some April fool joke the weather played on the people on Saturday. There were thousands of Plainfielders who never before had the opportunity of seeing a sleigh so late in the year.

With permits issued for over $134,000 worth of building work in the first three months this year, the prospects of the members of the Allied Building Trades being in need of employment from now until fall have been reduced to nil. The amount of work under way is over twice the amount started in the same period in 1914. Prosperity seems to be around the corner, and we'll soon make the turn.

Evidently the law makers expect that woman suffrage is going to be adopted by the people of the State. They have changed the question "what is your age?" which has been heretofore required upon registering at elections to read "are you twenty-one years old?"

And speaking of jokers, the fellow who started the story which had all the newspapers guessing about the Prince Eitel Frederich on Saturday, might truthfully be given the title of champion faker.

Billy Sunday has tackled the hardest job of his career. He's trying to reform Paterson. If he gets any of the I. W. W.'s to hit the sawdust trail there'll be nothing he can't do.

They say that a late spring makes the best kind of fruit and vegetable crops. If the statement is correct, the high cost of living will receive an awful wallop during the coming summer.

That public spirited citizen who wrote to the mayor protesting against the erection of any more shingle roofed houses "started something."

Once again, in the matter of the opening of the bids for the new post office the Daily Press scored a distinct forty-eight hour beat.

INCREASING ATTENDANCE AT "BABY SAVING SHOW"

The severe weather on Saturday interfered greatly with the attendance at the "Baby Saving Show" n the Stirling Building, but a few people made their appearance to look at the exhibit. The attendance the first two days was over one thousand people, and since Plainfield has a baby population of over one thausand babies, those in charge look forward to increasing attendance as the show becomes better advertised.

The committee on literature, composed of a number of Plainfield physicians, has provided over a dozen kinds of literature on the care of the baby. The demand for this so far has been unexpectedly large. An electric sign was hung outside the door this morning as an additional device to attract the attention of passers-by.

MANY PATRONIZE HOPE CHAPEL CAKE SALE

Despite the unfavorable weather conditions Saturday afternoon the Ladies' Aid Society of Hope chapel will have a substantial sum to add to their treasury fund from the cake sale which was held in the store on the corner of Front street and Central avenue that afternoon.

A committee composed of Mrs. Frederick A. Weber, Mrs. G. Rittenhouse and Mrs. H. Seader, and assisted by Mrs. Thomas Henry, Mrs. Frederic Greene, Mrs. George Leighs, Mrs. James Heron, Mrs. B. Higgins and Mrs. C. Snyder, conducted the sale in a very creditable manner.

AUCTION SALE TOMORROW.

Robert Murray, the auctioneer, will continue tomorrow the auction sale of a large variety of fine household goods in the Lufburrow building at West Front street and Central avenue. The sale will begin at 1 o'clock in the afternoon. The building will be heated if necessary. A partial list of the goods is advertised in another part of the Daily Press.

MRS. REBECCA T. ROGERS LAID TO REST AT HILLSIDE

In the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends the funeral of Mrs. Rebecca T. Rogers, widow of William Augustus Rogers, was held in the Seventh Day Baptist church yesterday afternoon, the body having been brought from Providence, R. I., where death occurred. Rev. Edwin B. Shaw, pastor of the church, was the officiating clergyman, assisted by Rev. Theodore L. Gardner, editor of the Sabbath Recorder. During the service a quartet, composed of Charles P. Titsworth, Roy E. Titsworth, Mrs. J. B. Cottrell and Mrs. William C. Hubbard, sang two selections, "Asleep in Jesus" and "Abide With Me." Many handsome floral tributes were given by members of the family and friends.

Burial was made in Hillside cemtey, beside the body of Mrs. Rogers' husband, who died many years ago. The gathering which attended the funeral included many of Mrs. Rogers' girlhood friends, who lived in Plainfield before she made her home New England, and also numerous relatives from various parts of the country.

SCHOOLMATES ATTEND LITTLE GIRLS' FUNERAL

The funeral of Margaret D. Schwarz, the five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Schwarz, of West Fifth street, was held in the Monroe Avenue M. E. church at 1:30 o'clock yesterday. The service was conducted by Rev. Dr. D. B. F. Randolph, and it was attended by relatives and friends and many of the little girl's schoolmates. Mrs. F. J. Hubach preside at the organ and Louis V. Tallamy sang a selection, "Safe in the Arms of Jesus." The floral tributes included set pieces from the church school and Sunday school classes of the Monroe Avenue church and the children of the Irving School, which Margaret attended.

Burial was made in Hillside cemetery, the pallbearers being Clarence Weber, George Lee, Russell Hess, Arthur Hoefler, Ernest Dorflinger and Harold Zeek.

SCHOOLBOY'S FUNERAL.

The funeral of Rudolph Kampf, Jr., whose death occurred Friday after a brief illness with pneumonia, was held at his late home at 508 Watchung avenue, Saturday afternoon. The service was in charge of Rev. Scott-Smith, curate of Grace church, and the gathering in attendance included many of the boy's schoolmates from the Whittier School and the boys' choir of Grace church. There were many beautiful flowers, among them set pieces from the choir and the classmates. The body was taken to Brooklyn yesterday, and burial was made in the Lutheran cemetery in that place.

MRS. REID'S FUNERAL.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary Reid, who died at her home on Liberty street, Friday night, after one week's illness, was held in St. Mary's church, this morning. A solemn requiem mass was said by Rev. Father B. M. Bogan in the presence of many relatives and friends. There were numerous handsome floral tributes. Burial was made in St. Mary's cemetery, the pallbearers being Thomas Comerford, Patrick Melvin, Michael Cooney, John Walsh, John McLaughlin and George Madden.

DON'T WANT ANNEXATION.

A committee of twenty-five citizen's from New Providence township will go before the Legislature tomorrow morning to oppose the bill which calls for the annexation of a part of New Providence township to New Providence borough. The legislative committee has reported it for a hearing and the opposition is very strong. The delegation will be headed by William Jeffery, Robert B. Rogers and Bolton Hall, while Judge Roberson, of Bayonne, will make the principal address.

LEASES FINE PROPERTY.

Otis Corbett, of West Seventh street, proprietor of the Commercial Mills, had leased through the F. A. Martin Agency the F. C. Jennings residence at Grove street and Rockview avenue. The Jennings property is one of the finest in that section of the borough. Mr. Corbett will take possession May 1.

Y. W. C. A. NOTE.

The regular monthly vesper service will be held in the association parlors Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Miss Lena M. Jackson will address the gathering at that time and there will be solos by Mrs. Guy Bender and singing by the Junior Bible Class of the association.

THAW CASE POSTPONED.

New York, April 5—Argument on the writ of habeas corpus sued out on behalf of Thaw has been further adjourned until Monday next.

PRESBYTERY TO MEET HERE.

The spring session of the Presbytery of Elizabeth will be held in the First Presbyterian church, this city, on Tuesday, April 20.

WAR NEWS

"In the Carpathians fighting on both sides of the Lebanon Valley continues. Yesterday we attacked the eastern heights and dislodged the enemy from several strong positions. Russian attacks east of Virawa were repulsed.

"In yesterday's engagements we captured 2,020 prisoners.

"North of the Uzsok Pass the situation is unchanged. Renewed Russian attacks miscarried, after a short fight.

"There is no news from the other fronts."

London, April 5—A Russian bark, the name of which is unknown, was torpedoed yesterday in the English Channel, according to the Daily Mail, which says the fifteen members of the crew were saved.

"A despatch from Malmo, Sweden," says Reuter's Copenhagen correspondent, "asserts that two German coasting steamers during the last few days have struck floating mines and sunk in the Baltic Sea in immediate proximity to the route between Trelleborg and Sassnitz, with which points has been temporarily suspended. The crews of the steamers were saved. Some of the men have been landed at Sassnitz."

The British steamer Oliviene has been sunk by a German submarine.

Rome, April 5 (via Paris).—In spite of the various official denials from some of the belligerent nations that preliminary steps have been taken to conclude peace, especially by Austria and Turkey without consulting Germany, the report that Djavid Pasha, Turkish minister of finance, who is now in Switzerland, is on a mission of peace, finds credence here.

It is pointed out that Djavid Pasha was one of the first Turkish envoys to undertake at Ouchy, Switzerland, the conclusion of an Italio-Turkish peace, and that he conducted his preliminary negotiations by roundabout methods through neutral diplomats. While he has denied emphatically that he is at present engaged in a similar mission it is considered here that this denial should not be taken too seriously, because he scarcely could admit at this time that his government seeks a cessation of hostilities. Similar denials were made by him when he first undertook the task of bringing about an agreement between Italy and Turkey.

Berlin, April 5 (by wireless)—A despatch from Constantinople says the following statement has been issued by the Turkish War office:

"Our fleet yesterday sank two Russian ships, the Provident of 2,000 tons, and the Vastochnaja of 1,500 tons at Odessa.

"Our batteries off Kum Kale sank an enemy mine sweeper which attempted to approach the entrance to the Dardanelles."

London, April 5.—A Salonica despatch to the Daily Mail says that refugees from Constantinople confirm the report that the cruiser Goeben, formerly of the Germany navy, but now a Turkish warship, was badly damaged by striking a mine in the Bosporus and returned to her dock.

Berlin, April 5 (by wireless).—The following statement was given out at German Headquarters today:

"Belgian troops attempted on Sunday to concentrate re-enforcements in the direction of Drei Grachten, which with the exception of some houses on the north side has been in the hands of the Germans since Saturday, the Belgians, however, were repulsed by the German artillery fire.

"French attempts to attack in the Argonne Forest were also prevented by our artillery fire. A strong attack by the enemy against the position on the Heights west of Boureuvilles and south of Barennes broke down close to the German fortifications. French infantry charges west of Pont a Mousson were unsuccessful, while the Germans gained some ground in Priest, Wald, by blowing up several mines. A Russian attack on Marrin

RESOLUTIONS OF CONDOLENCE.

WHEREAS it has pleased our Heavenly Father, in His all-wise Providence, to take to His Heavenly home on Sunday evening, March 7th, 1915, Albert Lewis Force, a beloved Officer for over twenty-one years in Trinity Reformed Church, Plainfield, New Jersey, therefore be it

RESOLVED, that we, the Consistory of Trinity Reformed Church, do hereby bear testimony to our high regard for his purity of character. He was a Christian man, conscientious in his business relations and as the Editor for many years of one of the daily newspapers of this city he used his influence to give a moral and up-lifting tone to the paper he published and the community he served. He loved his Saviour Jesus Christ and was willing to testify for Him at all times; he was willing to speak to others concerning the Saviour he loved and urged them to accept Christ. The church had a supreme interest to him; he loved his church, prayed for her and labored zealously and faithfully for her success and advancement and gave as a memorial the beautiful, sweet-toned organ now in the auditorium. As an Elder he was a pillar of strength to "dear old Trinity," one who will be greatly missed in his genial fellowship in the church and in his wise counsels as a member of our Consistory; and be it further

RESOLVED, that we hereby extend to his daughter our sincerest sympathy in her deep sorrow and commend her to the God of all comfort; and be it further

RESOLVED, that these resolutions be spread in full upon our minutes, published in the local daily papers and in our church paper, the Christian Intelligencer and a copy be also sent to his daughter.

Done on behalf of Consistory at Plainfield, New Jersey, this thirty-first day of March A. D. Nineteen hundred and fifteen.

WHEN FATHER WAS A BOY

ORGANIZE TO RELIEVE TERRIBLE AGONIES OF LITTLE SERBIA

Brave little Serbia, trying to help herself, has had to give up. Three wars in three years have been too much for her. The last invasion of armed troops, sweeping the beautiful countryside bare, driving women and children like cattle into camps where deadly typhus fever now rages, has made a situation too horrible to imagine.

Driven from their homes, thousands of brave Serbian mothers are wanderers in their native land. Their little children, innocent sufferers of the cruel strife, are dying from hunger; grievously wounded men stretched on bales of straw, unable to eat the hard black bread of the prisons, are begging for white bread, but there is none for them. Little boys, mere children, are doing men's work among the wounded. Women are serving as stretcher-bearers. Men, torn by shot and shell, plead in vain for fresh dressings for their terrible wounds, but there is not even cotton enough for new bandages. Grim soldiers, worn, hungry and in fierce pain, are submitting to the amputation of their legs and arms without anaesthetics because the supply of drugs has about given out.

Notwithstanding all thi suffering, this little nation of brave peopl has not before asked for help, but now, driven to desperation, dying even, they have turned appealing eyes to America. The heroic Serbian women, worn with grief and suspense and despair, say if they only had seed and simple tools for agriculture they would go out on the devastated land where their homes once were and put in a crop that their children may have bread next winter. But a committee of American citizens says they shall have more; that they shall have food and clothing and medicine and then seeds and tools of agriculture. The committee is headed by Dr. Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard, with Breck Trowbridge, of New York, as its chairman. It is called the Serbian Agricultural Relief Committee of America. It is calling on the American people to help it send relief to Serbia quickly. Mme. Slavko Grouitch, an American woman, who is the wife of the permanent under secretary of foreign affairs of Serbia, has come to America to assist her suffering sisters who are across the seas. She says: "Unhappy and glorious Belgium needs so much I don't want one penny from her and I don't want one penny from the poor here in my own deserving country, but if there is anything left, may it not be given to Serbia?"

With her is Miss Helen Lozanitch, daughter of the former ministe of agriculture of Serbia, who has nursed in this war, as has also Mme. Grouitch. "When wounded men beg for white bread and there is none to give them, it is frightful," says Miss Lozanitch. "When they ask for medicine and it is not to be had, it is heartrending."

The Serbian Agricultural Relief Committee has its headquarters at 70 Fifth avenue, New York City, where Dr. T. Tileston Wells, a man interested in many humanitarian movements, is in active charge o the relief activities. Dr. Wells says: "The conditions in Serbia have been bad, but they are rapidly getting worse because the people, having been driven from their farms and villages by the Austrian invasion, have been herded in concentration camps where only the barest necessities of food have been available to keep them alive, and where sanitary precautions were impossible. The result has been that typhus fever has now broken out, which is likely to decimate that brave people unless medical help and [illegible] can be rapidly supplied to them."

The bankers for the Serbian agricultural relief movement are J. P. Morgan and Company, and the Bush Terminal, at New York City, has offered to receive shipments of tools, grain and seed. What the committee needs first and worst is money, which may be sent by check and money order, marked "For Serbian Agricultural Relief." If grain and seed and tools are sent, the committee asks that it be advised in advance so that it may be on the lookout for them.

Mme. Grouitch is working literally day and night, visiting cities and organizing relief committees. Cities all over the country are asking her to come and tell them the thrilling stories of Serbia's pitiful sufferings. She can probably visit only those which advise the committee of a desire to assist in the relief movement.

ITALY'S ARMY IS FORMIDABLE FORCE

Especially Strong in Alpine Fighters and Cavalry.

WITH the renewal of the reports that Italy would throw her armed strength into the European war in the effort to "rectify her boundaries" at the expense of Austria-Hungary, the attention of the military experts was concentrated on the Italian army, on which the brunt of the struggle must fall. Italy's navy is powerful, but the allies already possessed an overwhelming preponderance of naval strength.

The Italian army grew out of the old Piedmontese army, with which the unification of Italy was brought about. After 1815 Piedmont was at the head of the national movement which agitated Italy and ended in her unification. The Piedmontese army, after many hard fought battles against Austria, then succeeded in uniting the whole peninsula under the rule of Victor Emmanuel II.

The military organization of Italy is determined by the conscription law of the kingdom of Sardinia, which made universal liability to service the basis of recruiting. A unification meant for the army the absorption of contingents from all parts of Italy, the territorial system was not adopted and the different types of soldiers are blended into harmony by causing them to serve together.

The army consists of ninety-six three battalion regiments of infantry of the line and twelve of bersaglieri (rifle men), each of the latter having a cyclist company; twenty-six regiments of cavalry, of which ten are lancers, each of six squadrons; twenty-four regiments of artillery, each of eight batteries; one regiment of horse artillery of six batteries; one of mountain artillery of twelve batteries, and three independent mountain batteries.

Photos by American Press Association.

KING VICTOR EMMANUEL OF ITALY AND ITALIAN CAVALRY OFFICERS.

The garrison artillery consists of three coast and three fortress regiments, with a total of seventy-two companies. There are besides four regiments (eleven battalions) of engineers and nearly 30,000 carabinieri (gendarmerie) recruited from picked volunteers from the army. The carabinieri police Italian cities in peace times.

Under the recruiting scheme of 1907 the term for liability for service in the army was divided into nine years in the active army and reserve (two years actual service), four in the mobile militia and six in the territorial militia. The war strength of the army is 800,000 first line troops, 1,150,000 second line troops and over 1,200,000 available in excess of the above, so that Italy's total war resources of all kinds amount to 3,150,000 trained men.

Italy's army is especially strong in two branches, the trained mountain fighters and the cavalry. The nature of the Italo-Austrian boundary, which is very mountainous, lends especial significance to the efforts made by Italy to develop the strength of her Alpine corps. These men are highly trained in "vertical fighting," wall scaling, snowshoe work, etc., such as has taken place frequently in widely separated regions in the Great War.

The Italian cavalrymen rank individually among the best in Europe and many of King Victor Emmanuel's officers have carried off prizes from horse shows in New York, London and other cities. Even the rank and file show extraordinary skill in managing their mounts.

LOCAL SENIOR AND JUNIOR "BILLS" TO FIGHT IT OUT

A good bowling match is scheduled for the Elks' alleys Thursday night when the Senior and Junior teams of 885 will meet for the first time. There is an unusual amount of interest in this match and the Juniors may be able to show their older brothers up.

A social program will probably follow the match which will include dancing. The teams will be composed of the following seniors: Blatz, Kiely, Campbell, Vail and Nash; juniors, Waldorf, Stout, Hoyt Tomlinson and Causebrook.

BASKETBALL PRACTICE.

The basketball squad of St. Mary's Social Club will meet in the T. A. B. Hall, on West Fourth stret, tonight, for their usual basketball practice. A large attendance is urged. The hall will open promptly at 8 o'clock.

BURLESQUE COURT GAME LAST OF THE SEASON

What will probably be the last basketball game of the season is scheduled to be played next Thursday night on the Columbus Club court. The contest will be between the Chi Gamma Chi girls and the St. Joseph Boys' Club teams, and will be a good farce. The boys will dress in tight fitting hobble skirts and will be without the use of one arm during the half that is played without lines. They will have both arms when lines are used, but girls' rules will be used during the entire game.

Dancing will follow the contest and Prof. George Dann's orchestra will furnish the music. Bob Hebert, of North Plainfield, has agreed to "take a chance with his life" and handle the whistle. The girls will hold their final practice Wednesday night at the club.

The two quintets will line-up as follows:

Chi Gamma Chi.	St. Josephs.
Jaque Daly	Moulton
Forward.
Frances Newman	McDonough
Forward.
Florence Daly	Denny
Center.
Anna McGinnis	Bryniarski

JOHNSON-WILLARD FIGHT

At the last moment the carpenters went on strike leaving the seats at the ringside unfinished. Temporary quarters were arranged for, however, many of the reserved seat purchasers squatting on the ground around the arena.

Before Johnson left his training quarters he was paid $30,000 in accordance with the contract which he made with the fight promoters. During his preparations to go to the ringside Johnson chuckled with his handlers. He showed his usual confidence in his own ability.

Reports reached the ringside before Willard appeared intimating that the white challenger, too, was very confident. The start of the fight was delayed by the promoters awaiting the completion of the seats and the arrival of all the spectators.

A wild burst of applause went up as the promoters and ring officials headed by Jack Curley and Referee Jack Welsh were introduced. Other well known sporting men including Mike Gibbons were presented. When the promoters were ready to go ahead with the fight the combatants themselves delayed the proceedings by failing to reach the arena at the scheduled time.

The intermission prior to the arrival of Willard and Johnson was given over to the laying of bets, more money being in evidence at this time than at any time during the several days preceding the fight when little money was in evidence. Much wild speculation concerning the reasons for the tardiness of combatants went the rounds, no explanatory message being received from either camp.

One-half hour after the time set for the start neither man had appeared. The spectators began to get uneasy at this juncture and mild demonstrations were started in several sections of the crowd. They calmed down, however, when it was made known that both men were dressing at their own training quarters because no suitable rooms had been provided at the ringside. It was announced that both would be ready to enter the ring immediately upon their arrival.

President Memocal, of Cuba, was present with his staff. Johnson arrived at 1:15 and was cheered to the echo as he entered the fight arena. The big smoke wore a bathrobe of brilliant hue and at once took his seat in a corner of the ring, his handlers establishing their quarters just below him in the space that had been roped off for that purpose. He laughed and joked with a number of friends near the ropes and displayed every sign of confidence. His characteristic broad grin was much in evidence and when he spied his wife in the audience a few seats from the front he waved one of his long arms at her. Sport writers approached him and to these he talked readily telling them to get ready to herald his victory.

"This fellow is easy picking," he said. "I'll knock him cold inside of ten rounds."

Willard appeared five minutes after his opponent and another big demonstration was offered. He took a seat in the opposite side of the arena but failed to show any outward confidence.

Johnson weighed in at 227 pounds and Willard tipped the scales at 247 pounds. Willard looked serious and exhibited no mirth, his replies to newspapermen's queries being short and without enthusiasm. The two fighters stepped to the middle of the ring and greeted each other with a hearty handshake, but said nothing.

The offer was not accepted.

Referee Welsh entered the ring, took off his coat and hat, and was ready for the fight to begin. At 1:30 just one hour late, the men put their gloves on and were ready to start the battling in the center of the ring.

THE FIGHT BY ROUNDS.

The referee gave the men instructions and they started on their journey. Johnson opened by feinting and landed his left to Willard's jaw. The champion followed with a right upper cut but Willard grunted and answered with two lefts to the ribs. Johnson smiled and sent two lefts to the jaw. A clench followed and after the break Johnson landed three rights, all hard blows. Jess swung but Jack backed away from harm's danger zone and clenched. Willard clouted Jack twice in the stomach and again they clinched. Johnson's broad grin was still in evidence and he blocked three of Willard's short jabs and then retaliated with another to the jaw. Willard swung wildly and Jack rushed him to the ropes where the challenger clenched. Willard came back with his trusty left to Johnson's jaw, this blow rattling the negro. The white man followed this with a stiff right to the body. Johnson appeared to be getting serious at this stage and slashed his right to Willard's face. Johnson's round.

SECOND ROUND.

Johnson blocked two swings for the head and grinned. Willard landed a heavy left in the solar plexus but Johnson followed this up with three lefts on the ribs in lightning succession. The cow-boy swung again but the big smoke blocked, coming back with a swing to the face. Willard delivered a right to the body at the bell. Round even.

THIRD ROUND.

Jess made two swings but fell short of their mark. Johnson aimed his left for the body but Willard blocked the punch prettily. The men were now fighting evenly and Willard appeared to be gaining confidence. Jack drove Willard to the ropes with five successive blows. He then broke through the white man's guard landing blows rapidly on his heart. He jabbed Willard's face and landed his right on the body and then began kidding Willard. Jack landed another one on the body and one to the head. He drove the white man to the ropes again with a shower of punches as the round ended. Johnson's round.

FOURTH ROUND.

Johnson blocked three lefts by Willard and stopped two more and clenched. The negro landed his right to the body. Johnson ducked Willard's hard swing which dropped him to the ropes. Willard followed with a half dozen blows to the body and face and the black man followed by landing one on the stomach and trying to reach his opponent's jaw but he was blocked. Willard missed a swing and Jack landed one on the face. The white man appeared to be steadily down at this juncture. Willard's round by a shade.

FIFTH ROUND.

Willard landed on the face and drew the first gore of the battle from Johnson's mouth. Jack's grin faded and he shot a hard left to Willard's body and followed with a right to the face. The negro ducked Willard's right swing and landed three punches on the Texan's body. Willard swung a hard one to Jack's body and drove him to the ropes as the round ended. Willard's round.

SIXTH ROUND.

Willard took the offensive and missed a swing for the head. Johnson drove Willard to the ropes with a shower of blows to the cranium. The smoke then landed a terrific left hook on the white man's body following it up with a drive just below the heart. Willard was taking loads of punishment without winching. Jack landed a left and right to the body and swung the right back again to the body. Willard put his right on Johnson's chin. The champion retaliated by driving the challenger to the ropes as the bell sounded. Johnson's round.

SEVENTH ROUND.

Johnson blocked Willard's left to the solar plexus and a clench followed. Johnson landed his left to the body sending Willard to the ropes. The white man came back with his right to Johnson's jaw and Jack covered this up with two lefts on Willard's body. The champion then rushed the white man to the ropes after drawing a lead. Jess missed a swing with his right and then landed his hard left punch on Johnson's face. Jess sent another right to the body and followed with a left to the same spot. Jack drove Willard to the ropes as the round ended. Willard's round.

EIGHTH ROUND.

Jack landed a left to the jaw but Jess came back with a right on Johnson's body. The negro delivered two stiff lefts to the body and then cut Willard's ear with a left chop. Jack sent a hard whack to the head and Willard put a left to the body. The fighters exchanged blows as round ended. Johnson's round.

NINTH ROUND.

Willard rushed, but Johnson blocked four swings for the head. The white man finally landed his right hard on the chin and landed the next one under Johnson's heart. The champion whipped a hard one to the stomach and Willard returned the compliment with a right to the jaw. Jack landed his left on Willard's body and once more drove the white hope to the ropes as the round ended. Round even.

TENTH ROUND.

Willard again assumed the offensive and forced the fighting at the start. He landed his left to Johnson's face. Willard went back to the ropes after Jack drove in some hard body punches. Johnson jabbed Willard in the face in a teasing manner three times. The black man's grin had faded to seriousness and he started a volley of hard body slugs which drove Willard to the ropes. The negro landed his right on Willard's body and followed with a terrific right to Willard's jaw. This was the hardest uppercut up to this time. The black man was trying to hang the Indian sign on Willard as the bell sounded. Johnson's round.

The crowd was kidding Johnson about his statement that he would win in ten rounds. From his corner he kidded back, half turning his back to Willard but keeping a careful watch on the challenger who was crouched "cat-like" in his corner waiting to spring at the sound of the bell.

ELEVENTH ROUND.

Johnson forced the fighting, landing on Willard's body and clinching. On the break Willard returned a right to the body and Jack drove a hard right to the wind and sent a left to the face. The champion ducked Willard's vicious right, and sent two more smashes to the body. Willard countered to the body and Jack retaliated with his left to the body. Jack landed on Willard's stomach at the bell. Round even.

TWELFTH ROUND.

Johnson went after Willard in lightning style and landed two on the body. Willard missed a terrific right uppercut to the head. Jack ducked this latter blow neatly, and as he came up smashed Willard's head and landed a volley of blows to head and body. The negro smashed a left to the jaw and Willard countered with two to the body. Johnson then landed four on Willard's head, and the white man landed against the ropes. Willard sent a left to the body, and each sent right to the belt at the bell. Johnson's round.

THIRTEENTH ROUND.

Johnson again went after Willard, landing two body punches. Jess retaliated strong with a right to body. Jack's grin again showed, and he broke through Willard's guard with a left to the Texan's jaw. Johnson followed with a jolt to the solar plexus, and then drove a terrific smash with his left to the body. Willard swung but missed, his aim being wild. He tried another, but Johnson blocked it. The bell sounded. Johnson's round.

FOURTEENTH ROUND.

Willard rushed from his corner but missed three swings. Johnson landed his left to the body and clinched. The big smoke landed twice on the big cowboy's face, but Jess answered back with a hard right to Johnson's body. Willard still had plenty of steam behind his blows and delivered a smoky left to the head. The negro landed his left on Willard's body at the bell. Johnson's round.

FIFTEENTH ROUND.

EIGHTEENTH ROUND.

Willard took the offensive and forced a number of hard ones to Jack's head. The negro did some nifty ducking at this stage, and landed three body blows. Johnson drove Willard to the ropes with four blows to the head and the white man came back with a right to the body. The ebony fighter jammed one at Willard's jaw and landed. Willard shot a right to the head and the negro grinned. Jack sent a stinging left to Willard's body at the sound of the bell. Johnson's round.

NINETEENTH ROUND.

TWENTIETH ROUND.

TWENTY-FIRST ROUND.

Johnson's seconds had worked busily during the intermission and he came up looking fresh again. The negro drove a right and left to the body and a right to the head. Willard countered with a stiff right to the head and followed with a left to the same spot. Johnson landed a right to the face but the men both appeared to be slowing up. A clinch followed and on the break each landed a left to the body at the bell. Round even.

TWENTY-SECOND ROUND.

Johnson landed one on body and Willard jabbed Jack's face with his left. They clinched. Johnson intentionally let Willard hit him in the stomach and then laughed. Willard jabbed face twice and swung with his right. Another clinch followed. The men are fighting slow and the bell found them again locked. Round even.

TWENTY-THIRD ROUND.

Willard landed his left to Johnson's body. Johnson blocked five swings. Willard was boxing like a schoolboy, and Johnson made no attempt to hit Willard after the swings. Coming back Johnson landed three lefts on the body and a right to Willard's shoulder. Jess drove his left to face and repeated in the same way at the bell. Willard's round. Johnson made no attempt during this round to land a hard blow.

Johnson landed left to body. Willard drove left to same place. They clinched. Johnson landed another left to body and blocked a left jab. They clinched. Both are fighting for time. Jess landed on face, but the blow lacked steam. Johnson drove left to body and right to face. Round even.

TWENTY-FIFTH ROUND.

Willard landed a terrific right to body. His first good punch. He forced the fighting. He saw Johnson was out and landed on jaw. He followed to the face. Johnson appeared tired. Willard sent another left to face. Willard's round.

TWENTY-SIXTH ROUND.

The Lone Star State Has a Distinctive Building

THE Texas building at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition at San Francisco was built for comfort and for the entertainment of the tens of thousands of Texans who are coming to San Francisco during the year. It is also for the entertainment of the general visitor to the Exposition, and all sorts of interesting bits of Texas material is to be seen.

Washington's Home at San Francisco

THE Virginia building at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, San Francisco, is a faithful reproduction of Washington's home at Mount Vernon. Many historical relics are housed in the building. Many of the rooms contain pieces of General Washington's own furniture. These have been loaned by Miss Nannie Randolph Heath. A number of new pieces of furniture have been modeled after the old. The building faces San Francisco bay. The historical buildings of New Jersey and Pennsylvania adjoin the Virginia building.

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

Probably one of the most important events in the local theatrical season will be the presentation at the Plainfield Theatre, Thursday night, April 8, of H. H. Frazee's "A Pair of Sixes," which New York has unanimously declared to be "the funniest farce in the world." The farce is by Edward Peple, who has already contributed such successes as "The Prince Chap" and "The Littlest Rebel." The chief motive of "A Pair of Sixes" concerns the ingenious scheme of a young woman who, figuratively, shows how a queen of hearts is better than a pair of sixes. All of which develops after two young men, partners in business, unable to agree as to their respective importance to the firm, decide to separate—commercially. The lawyer for the firm is called in and he finds the condition aggravated to the point where no amicable agreement can be made, so he proposes a hand of show-down poker. The winner shall be known as the master and operate the business for one year, unmolested by the other, who is, however, to be credited with his share of the profits. Mr. Frazee has cast "A Pair of Sixes" with a lavish hand and in the local presentation will appear such well known players as Paul Nicholson, Mildred Booth, Angie Norton, Curtis Benton, Marta Oatman and others.

In the powerful and heart-gripping drama of "The Crucible," by Mark Lee Luther, to be shown at the Plainfield Theatre Monday and Tuesday, April 5 and 6, the portrayal of a soul's ordeal in the melting-pot of suffering, from which fiery furnace it emerges unscathed, and strengthened by its agonies, Marguerite Clark plays the part of Jean Fanshaw, at first hoyden and tom-boy, unjustly condemned to a reformatory, who later triumphs over the shame of her imprisonment and the sordid corruptness of her environment, returning good for evil to those who worked havoc with her life.

Jean Fanshaw is brought up by her father as nearly like a boy as possible, with the result that, when he dies, her mother and sister, quite primly different from the high-spirited, sincere and prankis Jean, misunderstand and dislike her thoroughly, and illtreat her accordingly. Her sister, Amelia, a sedate and self-righteous girl, magnifies all Jean's tempers and eccentricities, until Mrs. Fanshaw believes Jean to be a perfect fiend and causes friends and neighbors to think the same. One day at a picnic, a playful trick of Jean's enrages her mother and sister, and when they arrive home Amelia nags and bullies Jean till she catches up a sickle in a spirit of mischief, threatening to defend herself with it, if necessary. Amelia, alarmed, throws her hand up with a quick motion and cuts herself on the sickle. She runs screaming to her mother, declaring that Jean has attacked her. This her mother believes, and joins her outcries to Amelia's; the constable and neighbors run in and eventually Jean is sentenced to the reformatory, where the riff-raff of the town and State are collected, and among them Stella Wilkes, a notorious girl of the village, who is one of the first to welcome Jean to the house of refuge. At first, the refined and sensitive Jean is overwhelmed by the disgrace of her imprisonment and crushed by her sordid environment, but gradually her strength of character asserts itself. She determines to escape from the reformatory, and succeeding, meets in the woods, Craig Atwood, a young artist, who, learning her sad story, advises her to go back and serve out her term so that she may avoid all danger of being recaptured. Jean sees the wisdom of his advice and that it is the nobler part. She returns to the refuge, and later, in a riot among the girls, led by Stella Wilkes, saves the matron from assault and wins her pardon.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

Special feature attractions continue to be the rule at Proctor's Theatre, in addition the excellent vaudeville bill changes every Monday and Tuesday. The picture portion of the program today will include the New York Hudson Theatre dramatic success, "The Fight," complete in five parts. This film is put out by the World Film Corporation and is certain to please all classes of patrons. "The Fight" will be repeated tomorrow, and on Wednesday, Mary Pickford, the highest-priced actress in picturedom, will be seen in "Such a Little Queen," taken from the play which met with great success a few seasons ago. An Thursday another pleasing picture offering will be made in the presentation of "The Pursuit of the Phantom," a Paramount production equal to the best.

Everybody has heard of the funny Charles Chaplin and the place to see him is at Proctor's Theatre. Chaplin comedies are on the program almost every day, and if you want to chase away the blues, join the crowds that are looking him over. There are more laughs to the minute in a Chaplin reel than any other five comedies flashed on the screen.

The change of vaudeville today brings five excellent acts and several big United Booking Office attractions are announced for the next two weeks. One of them will be Eva Fay, the marvelous exponent of thaumaturgy, who created a sensation in Plainfield eight years ago at the time she was appearing with her husband, the late John T. Fay. It is safe to predict that capacity audiences will be the rule at Proctor's Theatre during her engagement, as hundreds were turned away when she visited Proctor's at Elizabeth two weeks ago.

Enough Lumber In Each Oregon Pillar to Build a House

THE Oregon building at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition at San Francisco, which is made out of Oregon pine and fir, is a reproduction of the famous Greek Parthenon in Athens. The building is 112 feet by 211 feet. Many interesting exhibits are on view. Among them is an interesting fish and game exhibit. One of the features of the building is the moving picture theater. Another is the dining room on the second floor, in charge of the domestic science department of Oregon Agricultural college. The flagpole adjoining the building is over 200 feet tall and carries an American flag 48 feet in width.

CHAPTER XIII.

The Countess Gives Me a Surprise.

FOR an hour or more after leaving the enchanted rooms near the roof I lounged in my study, persistently attentive to the portrait of Ludwig the Red, with my ears straining for sounds from the other side of the secret panels. Alas! those panels were many cubits thick and as stanch as the sides of a battleship. But there was a vast satisfaction in knowing that she was there, sleep perhaps, with her brown head pillowed close to the wall, but little more than an arm's length from the crimson waistcoat of Ludwig the Red. Or he sat rather low, like a Chinese god, and supported his waistcoat with his knees.

Morning came and with it a sullen determination to get down to work on my long neglected novel.

"A fine morning, sir," said Hawkes in a voice that seemed to come from the grave.

"Is it?" said I, and my voice sounded gloomier than his.

"Send Mr. Poopendyke to me, Hawkes, immediately after I've finished my breakfast."

"Very good, sir. Oh, I beg your pardon, sir. I am forgetting. Mr. Poopendyke is out. He asked me to tell you he wouldn't return before 11."

"Out? What business has he to be out?"

"Well, sir, I mean to say he's not precisely out, and he isn't just what one would call in. He is up in the—them!—the east wing, sir, taking down some correspondence for the—for the lady, sir."

I arose to the occasion. "Quite so, quite so. I had forgotten the appointment."

"Yes, sir; I thought you had."

"Ahem! I dare say Britton will do quite as well. Tell him to"—.

"Britton, sir, has gone over to the city for the newspapers. You forget that he goes every morning as soon as he has had his"—.

"Yes, yes! Certainly," I said hastily. "The papers. Ha, ha! Quite right."

It was news to me, but it wouldn't do to let him know it. The countess read the papers. I did not.

It was nearly 12 when my secretary reported to me on this particular morning.

"Mr. Poopendyke," said I, "are you employed by me or by that woman upstairs?" I would never have spoken of her as "that woman," believe me, if I had not been in a state of irritation.

He looked positively stunned. "Sir?" he gasped.

I did not repeat the question, but managed to demand rather fiercely, "Are you?"

"The countess had got dreadfully behind with her work, sir, and I thought you wouldn't mind if I helped her out a bit," he explained nervously.

"Work? What work?"

"Her diary, sir. She is keeping a diary."

"Indeed!"

"It is very interesting, Mr. Smart. Rather beats any novel I've read lately. We—we've brought it quite up to date. I wrote at least three pages about the dinner last night. If I am to believe what she puts into her diary it must have been a delightful occasion, as the newspapers would say."

I was somewhat mollified. "What did she have to say about it, Fred?" I asked. It always pleased him to be called Fred.

"That would be betraying a confidence," said he. "I will say this much, however—I think I wrote your name fifty times or more in connection with it."

"Rubbish!" said I.

"Not at all," said he, with agreeable spirit.

A sudden chill came over me. "She isn't figuring on having it published, is she?"

"I can't say as to that," was his disquieting reply. "It wasn't any of my business, so I didn't ask."

"Oh," said I, "I see!"

"I think it is safe to assume, however, that it is not meant for publication," said he. "It strikes me as being a bit too personal. There are parts of it that I don't believe she'd dare to put into print, although she reeled them off to me without so much as a blush. 'Pon my soul, Mr. Smart, I never was so embarrassed in my life. She"—.

"Never mind," I interrupted hastily. "Don't tell tales out of school."

He was silent for a moment, fingering his big eyeglasses nervously. "It may please you to know that she thinks you are an exceedingly nice man."

"No, it doesn't!" I roared irascibly. "I'm blamed if I like being called an exceedingly nice man."

"They were my words, sir, not hers," he explained desperately. "I was merely putting two and two together—forming an opinion from her manner, not from her words. She is very particular to mention everything you do for her and thanks me if I call her attention to anything she may have forgotten. She certainly appreciates your kindness to the baby."

"That is extremely gratifying," said I acidly.

He hesitated once more. "Of course you understand that the divorce itself is absolute. It's only the matter of the child that remains unsettled. The"—

I fairly barked a him. "What the mischief do you mean by that, sir? What has the divorce got to do with it?"

"A great deal, I should say," said he, with the rare, almost superhuman patience that has made him so valuable to me.

"Upon my soul!" was all that I could say.

Hawkes rapped on the door luckily at that instant.

"The men from the telephone company are here, sir, and the electricians. Where are they to begin, sir?"

"Tell them to wait," said I. Then I hurried to the top of the east wing to ask if she had the least objection to an extension phone being placed in my study. She thought it would be very nice, so I returned with instructions for the men to put in three instruments—one in her room, one in mine and one in the butler's pantry. It seemed a very jolly arrangement all round. As for the electric bell system, it would speak for itself.

Toward the middle of the afternoon when Mr. Poopendyke and I were hard at work on my synopsis we were startled by a dull, mysterious pounding on the wall hard by. We paused to listen. It was quite impossible to locate the sound, which ceased almost immediately. Our first thought was that the telephone men were drilling a hole through the wall into my study. Then came the sharp rat-a-ta-tat once more. Even as we looked about us in bewilderment the portly facade of Ludwig the Red moved out of alignment with a heart rending squeak and a long thin streak of black appeared at the inner edge of the frame, growing wider—and blacker if anything—before our startled eyes.

"Are you at home?" inquired a voice that couldn't by any means have emanated from the chest of Ludwig, even in his mellowest hours.

I leaped to my feet and started across the room with great strides. My secretary's eyes were glued to the magic portrait.

"By the Lord Harry!" I cried. "Yes!"

The secret door swung quietly open, laying Ludwig's face to the wall, and in the aperture stood my amazing neighbor, as lovely a portrait as you'd see in a year's trip through all the galleries in the world. She was smiling down upon us from the slightly elevated position, a charming figure in the very latest Parisian hat and gown.

"I am out making afternoon calls," said she. Her face ws flushed with excitement and self consciousness. "Will you please put a chair here so that I may hop down?"

For answer I reached up a pair of valiant arms. She laughed, leaned forward and placed her hands on my shoulders. My hands found her waist, and I lifted her gently, gracefully to the floor.

"How strong you are!" she said admiringly. "How do you do, Mr. Poopendyke! Dear me, I'm not a ghost, sir!"

"How do you do?" he jerked out. Then he felt of his heart. "My God, I don't believe it's going!"

Together we inspected the secret doors, going so far as to enter the room beyond, the countess peering through after us from my study. To my amazement the room was absolutely bare. Bed, trunks, garments, chairs—everything, in fact, had vanished as if whisked away by an all powerful genie.

"What does this mean?" I cried, turning to her.

"I don't mind sleeping upstairs now that I have a telephone," she said serenely. "Max and Rudolph moved everything up this afternoon." Poopendyke and I returned to the study. I for one was bitterly disappointed.

"I'm sorry that I had the phone put in," I said.

"Please don't call it a phone!" she objected. "I hate the word phone."

"So do I," said Poopendyke recklessly.

I glared at him. What right had he to criticise my manner of speech? He started to leave the room after a perfunctory scramble to put his papers in order, but she broke off in the middle of a sentence to urge him to remain. She announced that she was calling on both of us.

"Please don't stop your work on my account," she said and promptly sat down at his typewriter and began pecking at the keys. "You must teach me how to run a typewriter, Mr. Poopendyke. I shall be as poor as a church mouse before long, and I know father won't help me. I may have to become a stenographer."

He blushed abominably. I don't believe I've ever seen a more unattractive fellow than Poopendyke.

"Oh, every cloud has its silver lining," said he awkwardly.

"But I am used to gold," said she. The bell on the machine tinkled.

"What do I do now?" He made the shift and the space for her.

"Go right ahead," said he. She scrambled the whole alphabet across his neat sheet, but he didn't seem to mind.

"Isn't it jolly, Mr. Smart? If Mr. Poopendyke should ever leave you I may be able to take his place as your secretary."

I bowed very low. "You may be quite sure, countess, that I shall dismiss Mr. Poopendyke the instant you apply for his job."

"And I shall most cheerfully abdicate," said he. Silly ass!

I couldn't help thinking how infinitely more attractive and perilous she would be as a typist than the excellent young woman who had married the jeweler's clerk and what an improvement on Poopendyke!

"I came down to inquire when you would like to go exploring for buried treasure, Mr. Smart," she said after the cylinder had slipped back with a bang that almost startled her out of her pretty boots and caused her to give up typewriting then and there forevermore.

"Never put off till tomorrow what you can do today," quoted I glibly.

She looked herself over. "If you knew how many times this gown had to be put off till tomorrow, you wouldn't ask me to ruin it the second time I've had it on my back."

"It is an uncommonly attractive gown," said I.

"Shall we set tomorrow for the treasure quest?"

"Tomorrow is Sunday."

"Can you think of a better way to kill it?"

"Yes, you might have me down here for an old fashioned midday dinner."

"Capital! Why not stay for supper, too?"

"It would be too much like spending a day with relatives," she said. "We'll go treasure hunting on Monday. I haven't the faintest notion where to look, but that shouldn't make any difference. No one else ever had. By the way, Mr. Smart, I have a bone to pick with you. Have you seen yesterday's papers? Well, in one of them there is a long account of my—of Mr. Pless' visit to your castle, and a lengthy interview in which you are quoted as saying that he is one of your dearest friends and a much maligned man, who deserves the sympathy of every law abiding citizen in the land."

"An abominable lie!" I cried indignantly.

"Another paper says that your fortune has been placed at his disposal in the fight he is making against the criminally rich Americans. In this particular article you are quoted as saying that I am a dreadful person and not fit to have the custody of a child."

"Good Lord!" I gasped helplessly.

"You also expect to do everything in your power to interest the administration at Washington in his behalf."

"Well, of all the— Oh, I say, countess, you don't believe a word of all this, do you?"

She regarded me pensively. "You have said some very mean, uncivil things to me."

"If I thought you believed"— I began desperately, but her sudden smile relieved me of the necessity of jumping into the river. "By Jove, I shall write to these miserable sheets, denying every word they've printed. And what's more, I'll bring an action for damages against all of 'em. Why, it is positively atrocious! The whole world will think I despise you and"— I stopped very abruptly in great confusion.

"And—you don't?" she queried, with real seriousness in her voice. "You don't despise me?"

"Certainly not!" I cried vehemently. Turning to Poopendyke, I said: "Mr Poopendyke, will you at once prepare a complete and emphatic denial of every word they have printed about me, and I'll send it to all the American correspondents in Europe. We'll cable it ourselves to the United States. I shan't rest until I am set straight in the eyes of my fellow countrymen. The whole world shall know, countess, that I am for you first, last and all the time. It shall know"—

"But you don't know who I am, Mr. Smart," she broke in, her cheeks very warm and rosy. "How can you publicly espouse the cause of one whose name you refuse to have mentioned in your presence?"

I dismissed her question with a wave of the hand. "Poopendyke can supply the name after I have signed the statement. I give him carte blanche. The name has nothing to do with the case so far as I am concerned. Write it, Fred, and make it strong."

She came up to me and held out her hand. "I knew you would do it," she said softly. "Thanks."

She not only came for dinner with us on Sunday, but made the dressing for my alligator pear salad. We were besieged by the usual crowd of Sunday sightseers, who came clamoring at our stanch, re-enforced gates and anathematized me soundly for refusing admission. One bourgeoise party of fifteen refused to leave the plaza until their return fares on the ferry barge were paid, stoutly maintaining that they had come over in good faith and wouldn't leave until I had reimbursed them to the extent of 50 hellers apiece, ferry fare. I sent Britton out with the money. He returned with the rather disquieting news that he had recognized two of Mr. Pless' secret agents in the mob.

"I wonder if he suspects that I am here," said the countess, paling perceptibly when I mentioned the presence of the two men.

I did not sleep well that night. The presence of the two detectives outside my gates was not to be taken too lightly.

Of Interest to Women and the Home

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

Dick's mother was alone in the house and answered the knock. At the door stood Mrs. Ellson.

"Good afternoon, Mrs. Morton," said the caller graciously. "I was hoping you would be here. I did not have much opportunity to become acquainted Saturday. "Is your daughter - in - law in?" she asked, seating herself.

"She has gone down town on some errands; she'll not be gone long," replied the old lady, sitting down on the edge of a chair.

"Really, I am glad to see you alone, for there is a little matter I'd like to speak about. You met Miss Rudolph didn't you? The stenographer, you know."

Mrs. Morton gave her snort of disapproval.

"What did you think of her?" continued the caller.

"Shallow, utterly silly," was the laconic answer. Mrs. Morton leaned back in her chair and smoothed out the folds of her apron.

"So I think," agreed the caller, "and do you know that girl is determined to captivate your son. She——"

"Captivate him!" exploded the mother. "Why, he's married! I told him I was thankful he hadn't married such a fool as she is."

"To some women the fact that there is a wife in the case makes no difference." The tone was low and she laid an impressive finger on the old lady's arm. "Now, I have seen so much of this sort of thing that I can never sit quietly by and see havoc wrought in a happy home."

"What do you mean?" the old lady turned on her fiercely.

"Only this," and Mrs. Ellson withdrew her hand. "Your son should be warned, and you are the one to do it. I tried to drop a hint to his wife, but she pretended not to understand."

"I'm a woman of plain speech," said Mrs. Morton, rising, "and I can't understand hints. Just what has my son done that you feel called upon to save him from destruction?"

Mrs. Ellson quailed before the fiery old woman. "He means no harm," she hastened to explain, "but that girl boards below here and she sees to it that they go and come to meals every day together. She is using all her silly blandishments and he is inexperienced. It is making a great deal of talk."

"I see," said the old lady, eyeing her sharply. "How many people have you set to watch them?"

"I merely mentioned the matter to you, thinking you would be interested in your son's welfare," said the caller, bridling, and preparing to leave.

"If you want to know my opinion, I'll tell you. I've no use for silly, boy-struck girls, like this stenographer, for the reason that having no brains and no capacity to work, they make good material for gossips, who go about setting a town by the ears. However, I shall warn my son that the wasps' nest has been disturbed."

Mrs. Ellson rose and took a frigid leave.

"So that little pink and white idiot is making eyes at Dick and stirring up gossip," she mused as she watched Mrs. Ellson stalk up the street in high dudgeon. "I'll see about this." She rolled up her apron and putting on her bonnet, took her sun umbrella and locked the door behind her. She tucked the key under the door mat and walked away saying, "I'll be in time to walk home with Dick and she can ..."

Household Hints

HOW TO TREAT FERNS

You can have splendid success with ferns by following these simple directions:

Monthly Treatment—Give thorough overhauling, cutting away all dead or yellowing fronds—cut close to earth, thus giving new fronds a chance to grow unhampered.

Place plant in bathtub and give good spraying with medium temperature water, thus getting all dust off fronds.

Give one tablespoonful of castor oil, and if you think there are any worms in earth, place a few matches in ground, heads downward.

Every Other Day—One glass of water, medium temperature. Let all water drain through pot before returning to jardiniere or saucer, as ferns must not be allowed to stand in water. This causes decay of the roots.

Plenty of good, strong light.

Endeavor to keep both children and older folks from brushing against all plants, as this is harsh treatment they cannot stand.

UP-TO-DATE RECIPES

Cream Tomato Soup—One can tomatoes put through sieve, so as to remove seeds. Heat to boiling point, salt to taste, add pinch of soda. Heat same amount of milk to poining point. Put one tablespoon butter in pan, let it brown (slice small onion with it, if desired), then mix one large tablespoon flour with butter until smooth, add milk, also tomatoes. Makes an excellent soup.

Meatless Beef Loaf—Soak one-half pound stale bread in warm water and squeeze dry. Put piece of butter size of egg in stewpan; when hot, add large onion finely chopped. As soon as onion becomes a golden color, add bread, a tablespoon chopped parsley and season with salt and pepper. Stir until it leaves sides of pan, then add two eggs which have been mixed with one-half teaspoon extract of beef dissolved in one tablespoon of boiling water. Put in baking dish and bake fifteen minutes. Serve with brown sauce, made as follows: Melt one heaping tablespoon of butter with one tablespoon flour and add boiling water to make gravy right consistency. Season with pepper and salt and one teaspoon extract of beef.

Bran Baking Powder Bread — White flour, one quart; bran, one quart; sugar, 1½ tablespoons; shortening, 1½ tablespoons; salt; baking powder, four tablespoons; milk or water, one quart; currants, one cup. Mix all dry, then add nuts last. Bake slowly.

Date and Nut Pudding—One cup chopped English walnuts, one cup stoned dates, one cup sugar, two eggs well beaten, one tablespoon flour, one teaspoon baking powder. Bake twenty minutes in hot oven. Serve with whipped cream.

White Cookies—Two cups granulated sugar, two eggs, one cup sour cream, one-half cup butter or lard, one teaspoon soda in cream, two teaspoons baking powder, flour enough to handle nicely. Flavor to suit taste. If not stiff enough will spread when baked. Work as little as possible.

Apple Custard Pie—Pare, core and quarter sour apples. Cover with water and stew. When done, mash and add one cup sugar. Partly cool, then add two well beaten eggs, one teaspoon grated nutmeg, and one-fourth cup melted butter. This is for one pie and ont crust only. The apples when stewed should be about same consistency as pumpkin after being cooked for pies. A very good suggestion for keeping crust from becoming soggy is to take a little of the white of the egg and rub over bottom of crust before putting in filling.

As salad its uses are almost endless. An excellent salad is made by making a nest of hearts of lettuce. To one cup of creamed cottage cheese, add one tablespoon of chopped pimentoes, teaspoon of chopped celery, onion, parsley and chives. Mix thoroughly, make into balls and arrange in the lettuce nests and serve with mayonnaise.

Animal Jingles

FOR LITTLE FOLKS

BY ALICE CREW GALL

The Envious Robin.

One day up in a cherry tree a sulky Robin sat,
And tucked his lit[illegible]
Said he, "I am discouraged, it is no use to try,
I'm sure nobody cares to hear me sing."

The reason that he felt that way was that the night before
He'd heard a Nightingale up in a tree,
And just because the Nightingale had sung so very well,
The Robin was as envious as could be.

Said he, "If I can't sing like that, I will not sing at all,"
And so he sat and sulked all morning long;
Then all at once he heard a voice that said to him, "I wish
You would be kind enough to sing one song."

It was a little boy who leaned upon a window sill
Close to the sulky Robin's cherry tree.
Said he, "I'm trying to get well, and I am very sure
I'd do it faster if you sang to me."

The sulky Robin only said, "You don't mean that, I know;
The Nightingale sings very much the best."
"Oh, no," the little boy replied, "you're such a cheerful bird, I'd rather hear you sing than all the rest."

And so the sulky Robin said, "All right, I'll sing for you,"
And started in upon his cherry note;
Then when he saw how very much it pleased the boy, he sang
Until he very nearly split his throat.

When he was through the little boy said, "Thank you, Robin dear."
The Robin said, "You're welcome, little man,
And after this I never will be envious at all,
And I will always sing the very best I can."

If what you do seems very small, don't think it is in vain;
Just go ahead and do your best with all your might and main!

RUNAWAY JUNE

BY GEORGE RANDOLPH CHESTER AND LILLIAN CHESTER

"No, no!" she laughingly cried. "I'm going to surprise you. You must stay in here and wait."

"Not me," laughed Cunningham.

"Then I won't surprise you." And she flounced into a chair with a pretty pout.

"Here, Cunningham," called the young man who had followed June, "we want that surprise."

"Sit down, Cunningham," said Blye, and he indicated where Cunningham was to sit while he held back the portieres for June to pass.

She stopped in the curtains.

"Now, mind, none of you is to come! And have another cocktail ready for me!" She whispered something in Blye's ear as she hurried into the hall.

He put his head out, however, and looked at the liveried attendant. That stalwart person stood stiffly at the door and cast his gloomy eyes on June. He was the type of man who would as lief murder a beautiful woman as an ugly one.

Halfway up the stairs June turned and found the eyes of the stalwart guard fixed steadfastly upon her. She smiled sweetly at him and beckoned. He hesitated a moment, then came stalking slowly to her. So long as she was within reach of him he need not be within reach of the door.

"What's your name?" and, folding her hands together, she beamed down at the big lout.

"Christian," and he actually grinned.

"Well, Christian, now listen," and she held up a warning finger. "I want you to help me play a little trick. Come on and I'll show you." She turned and tripped lightly up the stairs.

Christian, however, turned and stalked to the parlor and poked his yellow head between the portieres.

"She wants me to help play a trick," he announced, and they all laughed.

"It's a safe trick if you help," chuckled Cunningham, and Blye motioned his assent. Thereupon Christian stalked up the stairs and entered the room where June stood anxiously awaiting him.

Her silvery little laugh came as she saw him, and she ran lightly to the window and threw it open. There was a tiny balcony outside which was entirely isolated and quite high above the street.

"Now, just stand out there," she directed, and he stepped obediently out.

Gently she lowered the window.

"I'll tell you what to do next," she laughed, nodded to him and turned the window lock; then she slid the steel fix shutters, which she had discovered in the window jamb, and dropped their bolt in place.

"It's mine," said one of the girls.

On the bed were the coat and hat which she had laid out. She grabbed these up and then, with a quick glance about her, closed her door softly from the outside and tiptoed down the stairs. She scarcely breathed as she slipped past the parlor portieres and covered the slight cough which she could not repress. Her touch upon the locks of the heavy front door was as deft and as light as a feather. As the big door swung slowly June stifled a shriek with the sharp intake of her breath. The portieres had swayed, and an elbow had come through! But it was only the young man with the fat little girl called Maizie, and June slipped out through the narrowest crack which would accommodate her body. Closing the door behind her with a touch as soft as the breath of summer, June hurried lightly down the steps, crouching close to the stone wall.

Then, casting over her shoulder one glance, in which was all the agony of terror, she trusted to her heels and ran up the street at top speed. As she neared the corner she turned and looked back. The stalwart Christian, with his face to the window, was patiently waiting for instructions.

CHAPTER III.

THE black curtained limousine, its bit of filmy gauze fluttering at the door and Bill Wolf holding on to the spare tires for dear life, swept from the road down into the long private drive to a beautiful residence overlooking the river, and Bill Wolf, with a long sigh of relief, prepared to unbend at last from his stiffening position. The car, however, never slackened. As it dashed past the portes-cchere its pale faced Italian driver bent and looked at his clock and swept around on the other side of the long curve just as the family car of the Moores whirled into the drive. The handsome collie yelped as he recognized the familiar spot, and the five people in the family car looked at each other in perplexity as Jerry curved round back to the road. How peculiar! The black curtained limousine was apparently heading into the city again, and a curved limpness came into the broad back of faithful Bill Wolf.

"She's not to be disturbed," they all told her in their different forms of speech.

June Warner had fled far away from that section, hurrying on and on as if she could not put enough distance between herself and that hateful scene. She was in the more densely populated district now, on a street of cheap shops and rickety tenements, and the fourth or fifth pawnshop which she passed gave her a happy idea. She looked in at the next one. It was repulsive looking. She remembered a cleaner one which she had passed and went back to it. She hesitated a moment, then went boldly in.

There she found a pudgy, bowlegged little man.

"Is it anything I can do, miss?" he asked her.

"How much will you give me for this, please?" and from her hair she took an exquisitely carved tortoise shell comb studded with blue stones.

The pudgy little man glanced at it indifferently.

"Half a dollar, maybe."

"Oh!" And June picked up the comb in dismay. "Why, these are real sapphires. The comb cost"—

"Excuse me." The pudgy little man grabbed the comb from her hand and trotted nimbly to the window, screwing a jeweler's glass in his bulging eye as he went. "Oh, $8, maybe!"

"Why, the comb cost"—

"Sorry, lady," and rubbing his pudgy hands together, he smiled ingratiatingly at her, "but by the time you dig them little stones and sell them you waste so much labor that if I'd give you $8.25 I'd lose money, maybe."

June slowly picked up the comb. She was outside the door before he called her back.

"Wait!" He smiled ingratiatingly at her. "You need the money, lady?"

"Very much, I fear," she confessed.

"And would you give me your promise that you take up the loan some time, with the interest?"

"Oh, yes!" This very eagerly. "The comb is a keepsake."

"Then I give you $8.50."

IN THE DAINTY LOUIS PHILLIPPE STYLE.

A revival from the days of the last French court, is this dance frock of silver green faille silk, with rose buttons of pink taffeta and frills of gold lace on the bodice. The square decolletage is also reminiscent of the period referred to, and it is interesting to note that the bodice is fitted by whaleboned seams.

MATLACK-HENRY WEDDING

The ushers led the way, followed by the bridesmaid and then the bride, accompanied by her brother, L. G. Henry, who gave her in marriage. The party was met at the altar by the bridegroom and his best man. The ring ceremony was used.

Following the ceremony a small reception was held at the Park Club, the guests numbering about [illegible] relatives. Here the bride and bridegroom received congratulations and supper was served. During the reception music was furnished by Mr. Dunlanck. Later the couple left on a short wedding trip. Upon their return they will reside with Mr. Matlack's parents for the present.

The decorations at the church, which were elaborate, comprised Easter lilies, azaleas, spiraea, marguerites, hydrangeas, jonquils. At the Park Club the decorations consisted of palms, marguerites and spring blossoms.

The bride was the recipient of a large collection of beautiful gifts. The bridegroom gave his best man and ushers stick pins, while the bride gave her bridesmaid a string of pearls.

Both the bride and bridegroom are active members of the First Baptist church. Mr. Matlack was graduated in the class '11 of the Plainfield High School, at the First Baptist church, and he was also baptized and married in that church. He and his bride are interested in various activities of the church, where his mother is the teacher of a large Bible class of young women. Mr. Matlack holds a position with the Spicer Manufacturing Company at South Plainfield.

THERE ARE TWO KINDS OF ASSUREDS.

The kind that take out insurance when the spirit moves them without considering their policy, the company its in, or the agent. And the other kind that realize the necessity and importance of insurance, who read over their policy and make sure it covers them properly, satisfy themselves that the company is sound and represented by a reliable agent.

The first kind is a hit-or-miss affair, while the other one is bound to obtain a satisfactory settlement when a loss occurs.

We show in addition to these big features each day a program of other good comedies and dramas.

If you want to see the best productions in motion pictures and pictures that are entertaining, we would suggest if you are not a patron of this theatre to visit us just once. We are confident you will return soon.

OUR PRICE OF ADMISSION WITHIN REACH OF ALL.

No higher than an ordinary motion picture theatre.

Consider too, when selecting this theatre, how much more comfortable it is to set in a place that you know is clean, sanitary with good ventilation, where the surroundings are one of refinement.

Where the music is played to suit every mood. All these things are offered to you at this theatre.

It is without question the most up-to-date theatre in this section.

The furnishings compare with any New York Playhouse.

We are securing each day hundreds of patrons who have never visited a motion picture theatre in Plainfield before.

Why? Because we offer a class of entertainment that is of the highest standard.

We present the same big productions at our small price of admission that you have to pay 25c and 50c in New York and other large cities to see.

That is why the U. S. Astor theatre is fast becoming the theatre that all are selecting for their amusement.

We have big things coming each week.

Soon we will present

MRS. DUNHAM GOES TO REWARD

Widow of George H. Dunham Passes Away at Her Home in New York City.

WAS EIGHTY YEARS OLD

Had Many Relatives and Friends in Plainfield—Husband Member of Original Dunham Family of Piscataway Township.

Mrs. Eliza Dyer Dunham, widow of George H. Dunham, died yesterday afternoon at her home, 19 West Eighty-first street, New York, following a brief illness. Mrs. Dunham was in her eightieth year and beside having numerous relatives in this city and the borough, had many local acquaintances. The funeral will be held at the late home tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock and the body will be brought to this city for burial in Hillside cemetery, a committement service being held at the grave at noon Thursday.

Mrs. Dunham's husband, who died July 22, 1905, was born on the original Dunham farm in Piscataway township, near Stelton, which has remained in the Dunham family for five generations. Mr. Dunham was a member of the firm of Lescher, Whitman Company, one of the largest clothier's trimmings concerns in the United States, and at the time of his demise had a fortune of several millions of dollars. Mrs. Dunham was interested in religious work and gave liberally to churches and institutions. She was also an authority on missionary matters and contributed numerous articles to religious publications. She leaves one daughter, Mrs. William Kelchner, of New York.

Among her local relatives are the following nephews and nieces: Mrs. Isaac Giles, of Grove street; Mrs. Philip Suffern, of Kensington avenue; William C. Dunham, of Sycamore avenue; George Dunham, of West Fourth street, and James R. Dunham, of Dunellen. Mrs. Ann Dunham, of West Fifth street, is a sister-in-law.

Mrs. Dunham was born in New York, being the daughter of Charles Dyer, prominent in the early life of Manhattan. After her marriage to Mr. Dunham she visited Plainfield at regular intervals and when the Netherwood Hotel was first opened she and her husband spent the entire summer for many years at the big hostelry. She continued visiting here until her advanced age made the trip too tiresome.

MANY FEATURES PROMISED AT THE HOSPITAL DANCE

The dance for the benefit of Muhlenberg Hospital will be held at the Plainfield High School Friday night, from 9 to 1 o'clock, and promises to be one of the most enjoyable of this week's social events, judging by the attendance already promised. Fratzen's orchestra from Sherry's, which furnished the music on the occasion of the last dance, is to play again.

Ritz will furnish light refreshments at a minimum cost, which, with the small charge for admission, will make for those present a pleasant evening, when it is understood that the proceeds are for the benefit of the Women's Auxiliary of the hospital board. Tickets may be secured at Armstrong's and Randolph's drug stores and from members of the committee.

MISCELLANEOUS SHOWER FOR MISS MINNIE MUIR

Miss Minnie F. Muir, of West Fourth street, whose marriage to James McClinton will take place in the near future, was given a delightful miscellaneous shower last night at the home of Mrs. George Muir, on Elmwood place. There were twenty of Miss Muir's intimate friends present, who tendered the bride-to-be many handsome gifts. An informal social evening was spent in playing games, dancing and musical selections rendered by the guests. The parlor and dining rooms were prettily decorated in cut flowers and potted plants. At midnight dainty refreshments were served by the hostess of the evening.

NOTT ENGINE TEST TOMORROW.

The test of the new Nott fire engine, which has been postponed twice, is scheduled to take place tomorrow afternoon, begining at 2 o'clock. The engine will first be put to work on Elm place, near Greenbrook, and later will be transfered to the Madison avenue bridge, back of the Babcock building. In addition to the test, there will also be a demonstration of the Dayton tri-car chemical, the latest step in fire fighting apparatus.

MISS PATTERSON AN EASTER BRIDE

Becomes the Wife of Charles A. Flynn at Quiet Ceremony.

Miss Jessie Agnes Patterson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Patterson, of West Front street, and Charles A. Flynn, son of Mrs. Catherine Flynn, of West Fourth street, were married at 8 o'clock last night in the rectory of St. Mary's church, after Bernard M. Bogan, the pastor, officiated. There were no attendants. The bride wore a traveling gown and immediately after the ceremony, the couple left on a short trip. Upon their return they will reside in one of the apartments in the Bristol on West Front street.

The bride, who is well-known here where she has many friends and acquaintances, is a trained nurse, being a graduate of the Elizabeth General Hospital. She was engaged in her profession until a few months ago. Mr. Flynn is also well-known in Plainfield, having been a member of the police department for a number of years. He now holds the position of roundsman on the force.

DELEGATES TO STATE FEDERATION CHOSEN

Monday Afternoon Club Also Favors a Safe and Sane Fourth Observance.

A business meeting preceded the department session of the Monday Afternoon Club, which was held yesterday afternoon in the parish house of the Congregational church. Mrs. Allan Cowperthwaite, president of the club, presided. Mrs. Frank W. French read several letters of sincere appreciation for the sympathy of the club extended to Miss Kenyon's relatives at the time of the former's death. An appeal was made to the club to help in preserving the national birthmark of Longfellow.

By a unanimous vote the executive committee decided to omit the social meeting, which was scheduled for April 22, as a mark of respect for Miss Kenyon, whose death occurred recently.

During the afternoon the club went on record as being opposed to the sale or distribution of fireworks, and a resolution was adopted which will be sent to the Common Council, urging that body to pass an ordinance for a safe and sane Fourth.

The election of delegates to the State Federation, which will be held in Atlantic City, May 5, 6, 7, was also taken up. Although the local association is limited to three delegates, the members voted for two to go to the convention. Mrs. Allan Cowperthwaite and Mrs. Henry D. Hibbard were appointed to represent the Plainfield Club during the three days. Mrs. Robert Lowry and Mrs. Frank W. French were the alternates elected.

The chairmen of the various departments which were appointed for next year were as follows: Mrs. Henry D. Hibbard, literature; Mrs. Albert H. Atterbury, art, and Mrs. William Griscom, miscellaneous topics.

At the conclusion of the business part of the program Mrs. W. F. Taliaferro read a highly interesting paper on "Present Day Art Exhibitions." She dealt primarily with the Altman collection in the New York Museum, which is said to be one of the finest in the world. The porcelains and paintings are of the highest merit, many of them being rare and precious. At the culmination of Mrs. Taliaferro's talk, H. F. Biddle, of the Plainfield High School faculty, read a paper on "Modern Dramatists."

PLAINFIELDERS MAY GET CHANCE TO HEAR SUNDAY

Plans are being made by a committee representing the churches, young people's societies and the Y. M. C. A. of the city, whereby the people of Plainfield will be able to visit Paterson during the Billy Sunday campaign as a delegation. These plans include a special train over the New Jersey Central and Susquehanna Railroads without change of cars and returning immediately after the meeting closes; also reservation in the Tabernacle.

This committee is to meet in the Y. M. C. A. on Thursday evening, April 8, after which further details will be announced.

FIRST ESTIMATES ON SEWER WORK

Borough Council Authorizes Payment on Both Construction Contracts.

GRANTS TANK PERMITS

Two Gasoline Reservoirs to Be Installed by North Plainfield Garages—Two New Special Marshals—New Culverts Wanted.

Two applications for the installation of gasoline tanks under sidewalks in North Plainfield were introduced at the meeting of the Borough Council last night, one from Harkins Brothers on Somerset street and the other from John B. Garret owner of the Borough Garage, in Watchung avenue. Both were granted on the recommendation of Councilman Milne on the condition that they be similar in construction to those maintained by garage owners in Plainfield. A petition was received from residents of Chatham street and Manning avenue, requesting the borough to provide adequate sewerage disposal facilities at this point. It was referred to the committee in charge of this work for investigation.

Reports received from George W. Fuller, the engineer in charge of the joint sewer work, indicated that the Harrison-Burton Company had already accomplished considerable work on contract No. 1, that Pugliese work on contract No. 2 was progressing. Harrison-Burton's first estimate on contract No. 1 of $2,891.66 was ordered paid as was also Frank Pugliese's estimate on contract No. 2 amounting to $3,400.10. The borough's share of the joint sewer contract expenses incurred since the last meeting and amounting to $1,219.05, were also ordered paid. Claim amounting to $3,856.30 were cancelled.

Application was made by the Board of Education to the Council for the construction of proper culverts in front of the new Harrison avenue school. It was referred to the sewer committee for investigation.

"WHITE WAY" IN BOROUGH APPROVED

Council Ratifies Resolution to Provide Better Lights on Somerset Street.

As the result of a petition bearing the names of Somerset street merchants which was presented to the Borough Council at its February meeting, the governing body last night passed a resolution providing for better lighting facilities on that thoroughfare between the bridge and Manning avenue. For a long time past there has been an agitation for better lights along the borough's principle business section and the petition of merchants was favorably accepted by a large majority of the taxpayers.

When introduced by Councilman Frank Mobus last night the measure was opposed by Councilman Allen Cowperthwait, chairman of the light committee, who said that inasmuch as the light committee was the only one to show a decrease in expenditures in 1914 over 1913 he did not see why it would be advisable to "eat up" this surplus immediately. He spoke in favor of using the balance to defray outstanding debts rather than to incur new ones.

Councilman Milne, Stahl and Mobus spoke in favor of it. The new system will provide approximately four times as much light at an increase in the light bill of about $20 a month. The Council accepted this offer from the Public Service with the proviso that the lights installed be similar to those on this side of the brook.

BORO BOARD OF HEALTH HELD MONTHLY MEETING

The monthly meeting of the North Plainfield Board of Health was held last night, with all the members present with the exception of John I. Brower. J. V. E. Vanderhoef, president of the Board, presided at the meeting for the first time since the first meeting of the year. He has been sick for several weeks.

The regular routine business was transacted, and Health Inspector Lou Oliff gave his monthly report, which showed no contagious disease cases in the borough.

ASK FOR RETURN OF FIRE WHISTLE

Business Men of the City Urge the Council to Take Action.

PETITIONS PRESENTED

Freeholders Request That the Grade on Grove Street Be Raised to Conform With Heighth of New Bridge—Mayor Appoints Commissioners.

Two petitions containing more than one hundred names requesting the restoration of the city fire alarm whistle were presented at the April meeting of the Common Council last night. One petition was headed by Martin B. Stutsman and the other by John Chapin. They came as a protest from business men. The petitions were referred.

Notice was given that the Freeholders of Union and Somerset counties are soon to erect a concrete steel arch bridge on Grove street with a fifty-foot span, and requesting the city to bring the city side of the street up to the grade which will be higher than at present. It was stated in the communication that four ornamental lights would be placed on the walls of the bridge two on either side, and the city will be requested to bear the expense of maintaining two lights.

Mayor Leighton Calkins named Armstrong Mulford, C. L. Kling and J. C. Van Emburgh as commissioners on sewer work to serve until 1916. Through a resolution offered by Mr. Claybrook and which was adopted, George B. Wean, the city stenographer, was given authority to act as city clerk in the absence of James T. MacMurray, who is detained at home by illness.

A resolution offered by Mr. Hylan and adopted, authorized the appointment of C. C. Randolph, E. H. Bird and W. H. Abbott as commissioners to treat with property-owners on East Second street, with whom the city cannot agree, as to the widening of that thoroughfare between Watchung avenue and Church street. The commissioners will meet the property-owners on April 22. A. J. Slavett, street commissioner, was authorized to give property-owners the usual notice where they have failed to lay sidewalks and in case of failure the city will do the work.

A resolution offered by Mr. Martin and adopted authorized the installation of three 350 candle-power street lights, one at Park avenue and East Fifth street, one at Watchung avenue and East Fifth street and the third on Somerset street near the bridge.

The rules of the Council were changed through a resolution offered by Mr. Cox and adopted. These changes provide that the committee on laws and ordinance shall examine all Legislative bills affecting the city, that the president shall name all committees, except the one on sewers, that the finance committee shall comprise its chairman and the chairmen of the committees on fire and building, streets, police, lights and alms.

The auto 'bus ordinance was adopted on third reading. This provides for a license fee of $5 which meets with the approval of the auto 'bus owners.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

The C. E. Society of Hope chapel last evening held its annual meeting, receiving the yearly reports of the various committees and officers, all of which indicated a successful year of work. The following officers were elected: President, Richard Schott; vice-president, Thomas Heron; secretary, Miss Ruth Dellehunt; corresponding secretary, Miss Elizabeth Becker; treasurer, John Heron; prayer meeting committee, Miss Eunice Eckert; lookout committee, Miss Elizabeth MacMillan; social committee, Miss Josephine Snyder; music committee, Miss Agnes Leighs; representative to local union, Miss Elizabeth Brodie.

Chemist Says Milk is Good.

Wood Brook Farms,
Plainfield,

Gentlemen:

It may interest you to know of a conversation I had with a college classmate who is a chemist in the N. Y. State Agricultural Dept.

I showed him the Board of Health statement of the analysis of Plainfield milks, and asked which was the best. He immediately pointed to yours, and asked the price and being informed that you had been selling it for 10c, he said it could not be produced with a profit for that.

You may use this statement in any way you care to.

Yours truly,
(Rev.) F. L. GREENE."

CITY TO APPEAL LIGHT DECISION

Council Authorizes Corporation Counsel Reed to Take Matter Up.

NUMEROUS PETITIONS

Grand Jury Complains of the Number of Assault Cases Referred to That Body—Shade Tree Commission Asks for $2,700.

The Common Council, at its April meting last night, decided to appeal from the recent adverse opinion of the Supreme Court in the matter of the contention of the Public Service Corporation that it cannot legally furnish any free lighting to Plainfield. The Public Utilities' Commission, before whom the matter was first presented, decided in favor of the city, and then it was taken to the Supreme Court, where last week the decision was in favor of the company. In accordance with last night's resolution, offered by Mr. Claybrook, Corporation Counsel C. A. Reed was authorized to take the matter to the Court of Errors and Appeals.

The Council received a lengthy communication from the Union county grand jury calling attention to the large number of assault and battery cases that are referred to that body, believing that many of them could be disposed of by local courts. The great expense of referring these cases was also emphasized, and the work of Sheriff George Otto in the management of the county jail was commended. The matter was referred to the police committee.

The Shade Tree Commission requested an appropriation of $2,500 for this year's work and $200 for the care of the city park. This was referred.

The board of governors of Muhlenberg Hospital, in a communication, thanked the Council for its excellent care of the ambulance, explaining that as soon as possible other arrangements will be made whereby the hospital will have an automobile ambulance for its use, as it does not favor a combination police and hospital vehicle.

DEATH OF FORMER WELL KNOWN RESIDENT

Mrs. Anna Rice Powell Passes Away at Her Home in Philadelphia.

The many friends of Mrs. Anna Rice Powell, widow of Aaron M. Powell, the philanthropist, felt a deep sense of personall loss when they learned of her death in Philadelphia on March 27. Mr. and Mrs. Powell removed from New York city to Plainfield in 1880, and during their residence here of nearly twenty years their home was made a center of strength and inspiration for those interested in the civic and moral problems of the day.

Mr. Powell began his work for humanity in early manhood, when he enlisted in the anti-slavery cause, and was associated with William Lloyd Garrison, Wendell Phillips, Whittier and others of that pioneer group in transforming public opinion, sharing with them the hardships and unpopularity that inevitably accompany the beginnings of all reform movements.

After the emancipation in 1863, Mr. Powell was engaged in temperance and social welfare work, and during his long career of usefulness Mrs. Powell was his warm sympathizer and faithful assistant. After his death she retained her interest in the various fields of their mutual service, responding to every call made upon her as far as her strength would permit. Until her removal to Philadelphia, Mrs. Powell was a member of the Watchung avenue meeting of the Religious Society of Friends.

ANNUAL EASTER BALL IS LARGELY ATTENDED

The twenty-sixth annual ball of the Plainfield Gesang and Turn Verein Society was held in Saengerbund Hall last night, and was largely attended. There were Easter decorations and excellent music was furnished by Halbfoerster's Tango Band. Refreshments were served during the evening.

The affair was in charge of the entertainment committee of the society, which consisted of the following members: Jacob Schlick, chairman; Herman Theis, Herman Klinsman and John Bauer.

J. H. COOLEY AGAIN HEADS BORO BOARD

Unanimously Elected for Twelfth Time to Serve in That Capacity.

J. H. Cooley was elected president of the North Plainfield Board of Education for his twelfth year at the organization meeting held last night in the Somerset School building. J. A. Van Mater was elected vice-president to succeed H. A. Woodruff, who was one of the retiring members. Mr. Cooley has been on the Board for fifteen years and this one is the last of his three-year term.

The four members that were elected at the district meeting last month were given the oath of office by the president. They were Charles L. Holstein, re-elected; Maurice E. McGrath, F. O. Dunning, re-elected, and C. L. Krausse. An application from Warner P. Philpot, of Westervelt avenue, for janitorship of the Harrison School, was received and ordered filed.

President Cooley did not appoint the standing committees but stated that the chairmen would be the same. J. A. Van Mater, on the building and grounds committee, Judd Stuart, finance, and R. C. Campbell, supplies. The majority of the committees will remain the same.

ATTEMPTED ASSAULT ON CITY MAGISTRATE

Big Negro Visited Headquarters to Get Revenge for Cousin's Imprisonment.

Because his cousin, John Hill, had been fined $10, with the option of spending forty days in the county jail for disorderly conduct, William Kates, a colored ash-carter, came to police headquarters with "blood in his eyes" this morning to "get even" with Judge William G. DeMeza or any other individual who might have been instrumental in placing his relative behind the bars. Brushing his way briskly into the magistrate's private office, the big negro demanded:

"What right did you have to send John Hill to jail?"

"He was fined $10," replied the judge. "Do you want to pay his fine and get him out?"

"I won't pay any money, but I'll get him out of jail," retorted the negro, and set his huge body for a lunge at the magistrate.

Sergeant Maurice Higgins, who was standing in back of the enraged negro, noticed his queer move, when Judge DeMeza momentarily turned his back on the man and made ready to check any disorder. As Kates raised his arms he grabbed him and prepared to eject him.

This caused the colored man's ire to rise to a boiling pitch, and he instantly began swinging his powerful arms in a whirlwind fashion. His superhuman strength, due to an enraged temperament, made him too much for one man to take care of, and it required the combined efforts of Chief Kiely, Higgins and Clerk John Rinehart to bring him into submission. A free-for-all about the courtroom ensued and many blows were inflicted on the negro with apparently no effect. He was finally beaten back to a cell and thrown in.

To Higgins' quick action and the intervention of Chief Kiely and Rinehart, Judge DeMeza may attribute his lucky escape fro injury, for the colored visitor came to headquarters bent on getting revenge, and one punch delivered by Kates would probably have "put him to sleep."

The negro will be arraigned before Judge DeMeza on a charge of assault and battery tomorrow morning.

CHORAL SOCIETY TO GIVE THE ORATORIO "ELIJAH"

The Plainfield Choral Society and Symphony Orchestra under the auspices of the Public Recreation Committee, will present Mendelssohn's famous oratorio "Elijah" with a large chorus and New York soloists under the direction of S. Frederick Smith in the Plainfield High School auditorium. The date has been arranged for April 22, the final rehearsal with soloists and chorus to be held at the High School on Tuesday, April 20.

All those desiring to sing in the chorus are expected to attend the few remaining rehearsals. The soloists will be announced in a few days.

SUBMARINE GETS BRITISH STEAMER

CREW OF 24 IS SAVED

Under Sea Raider is Caught in a Gigantic Net—Fears Felt That Steamer Pina Has Been Torpedoed—Italian Steamer Lost.

London, April 6.—The British steamer Northlands, of 2,000 tons, with a cargo of iron ore, was sent to the bottom by a German submarine in the English Channel off Beachy Head yesterday.

The "Northlands" sank in ten minutes. Her crew of twenty-four men were picked up later by the Norwegian steamer "Topari." The "Northlands" was built at West Hartlepool in 1900 and was owned by the Northlands Steamships (Ltd.), of London.

Naples, April 6.—Fears are felt in shipping circles here that the steamer "Pina" has been sunk by a German submarine. The vessel belonged to the firm which owned the Luigi Parodi, an Italian ship reported torpedoed.

The "Pina" left Naples late in February for Cardiff to take on a cargo of coal and nothing has been heard from her since then, although the voyage to Cardiff should have taken only about ten days.

Reports that Italian steamers have been sunk by German submarines have caused intense excitement in this city. The press is urging the government to demand that neutral rights be respected, meanwhile demanding reparation for those reported sunk.

According to information obtained here, the crew of the Luigi Parodi numbered twenty-nine, and nothing has been learned as to their fate.

Paris, April 6.—The "Matin" hears from its Rome correspondent that the Italian steamer Luigi Parodi may have been lost at sea. It is improbable, the correspondent says, that she has been the victim of a German sea raider so far from the usual track of submarines.

London, April 6.—A despatch from Paris says that one of the steel nets which have been set off Dover to trap German sumbarines has caught one of the undersea raiders which is securely emeshed and is expected to be forced to rise to the surface within a day or two.

Paris, April 6.—The French War Office gave out the following today: "Nothing important to add to the communique of last night. To southwest of Vauquois we gained a foothold in a field work of the enemy. Our success in Forest of Ailly, southeast of St. Mihiel, resulted in the capture of some prisoners, rapid fire gun and a bomb-thrower. We advanced to the Brule Forest, east of the Forest of Ailly. The ground gained by us to northeast of Regniville was held."

London, April 6.—Bad weather has limited the possibilities of aerial activities on the part of the French and British forces in northern France and Landers and the situation remains quiet, according to a report from Field Marshal Sir John French made public this afternoon by the Official News Bureau. Although there is a lack of notable incidents there are frequent instances of individual activity daily and nightly along the whole line, the general effect of which is cumulative and of great military value.

London, April 6.—The Grimsby trawler, "Teantha," was torpedoed and sunk yesterday off the Scotch coast. The crew was landed at Blyth last night by a Swedish steamer.

Geneva, April 6.—The defeat of the Austro-German force in Dukla Pass on Sunday is admitted in a despatch from Vienna to the Tribune. The losses of the defending force in the Pass is stated to have been 4,000 in dead and wounded and prisoners. Reinforcements have been sent to the region south of Dukla Pass where the Austro German army is making a stand against the force that is advancing throught the mountains.

Berlin (via Amsterdam), April 6.—Five more Prussian casualty lists just published bring the total of Prussians killed, wounded and missing to 1,123,081 men. This does not include the Bavarian, Saxon, Wurttemberg and naval lists.

DUNELLEN

All the Happenings of the Day In Plainfield's Hustling Suburb.

At the April meeting of the Dunellen Mayor and Council, bids were opened for the contract of constructing the Madison avenue, North avenue and Front street drainage systems.

The following bids were received for the work: Sanitary Construction Company, of Paterson; Camillo Massa, of Cranford; Pashfal Murealio, of Orange; T. Foster Callahan, of Elizabeth; Clement J. Cogan, of Bayonne; H. K. Corbin & Co., of New York; Garafano Construction Co., of Summit, and E. W. Chamberlin, of Westfield.

The three contracts were bid for separately. While the bids were not tabulated last night it was thought that the successful bidders were Camillo Massa, of Cranford, for the North avenue system; Garafano Construction Co., of Summit, the Madison avenue system, and T. Foster Callahan, of Elizabeth, for the Front street system. It is estimated that the total cost of the system will be in the neighborhood of $11,000, 88 per cent. of this being borne by the propertyholders benefitted and the balance out of the general assessment and funds of the borough. The work according to the contract must start by the first of May and be completed by October 1.

The budget of expense for the year amounting to $16,450 was confirmed by resolution.

This compares with a budget of $13,811.50 for last year. When, however, the interest on the joint and collecting sewerage bonds amounting to $3,320, has been deducted from the total of this year's budget it will be seen that it is really $681.50 less than last year.

A communication was received from Vincengo Tozze, the North avenue barber, in which Mr. Tozze, after stating that he was a business man and one who believed in keeping the Sabbath for the benefit of the town, asked the Council why some stores were compelled to close while others were permitted to keep open. In closing Mr. Tozze served notice on the Council that if any stores were allowed to be open this Sunday that he would then open his barbershop. The communication was received and ordered filed.

States R. Titsworth and Peter Schneiderwind submitted applications for the positions of sewer inspector. A communication was received from Assistant Chief Joseph Maier, of the local fire department, requesting the Council to notify the citizens not to have the fire bell ring for grass fires. The communication was referred to the fire and water committee together with another one from the same company asking that six brooms be purchased.

Chairman Castner reported that the Freeholders, at a meeting yesterday agreed to erect a bridge across Bonegut brook at Chestnut street. Chairman Ryan, of the law and ordinance committee, was authorized to get samples of a summer suit for the night marshal. A contract signed by Mrs. Mary A. Wilson, of Grove street, in which she agrees for a specific consideration to allow the borough sewer pipe to run through portion of her property, was submitted by Chairman H. D. Williams, of the collecting sewage committee.

Chairman Williams also brought up the matter of insuring the borough's sewer inspectors and he submitted a letter from Messrs. Kookogey & Hook in that connection. Chairman Williams was instructed to have $2,800 worth taken out this morning. Mr. Williams, who is also chairman of the building and hall committee, was instructed to advertise for bids for certain necessary repairs to the borough hall. The Council adjourned to Friday, April 9.

CHURCH SUPPER.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the First Baptist church will serve a supper in the lecture room of the church this evening between the hours of 6 and 8 o'clock. The price is twenty-five cents a plate.

RETURN TO THE BORO'.

Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Thorn, who formerly resided here, have moved back to the borough. On Friday they moved into the new house at the corner of Center street and Fairview avenue, which Mr. Thorn recently purchased from Real Estate Operator Henry Wrage.

Mr. and Mrs. William T. Fiddington, Jr., of Whittier avenue, are shortly to have a telephone installed in their home.

Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Treichler move tomorrow from the Isaac P. Runyon house on Fourth street to their recently erected house at the corner of Lincoln avenue and Mountainview Terrace.

Miss Florence Gangloff, of Fourth street, has returned from New York, where she spent two months with an aunt, Mrs. Lewis Arnold.

The monthly meeting of the Epworth League will be held this evening at the home of Miss Helen Shively, on Whittier avenue.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Methodist Episcopal church will meet tomorrow afternoon with Mrs. Samuel Titus, of Front street.

The monthly meeting of the Board of Education will be held in the Lincoln School this evening.

Henry Althoen has returned to his business at Hamilton, Ontario, after having spent Easter at his home on Mountainview Terrace.

Mabel Whitford has returned to her duties as teacher at Millbridge, after having spent Easter at her home on New Market road.

CONDITIONS IN THE WEST.

R. J. Fisher, traveling salesman for J. S. Spaulding & Sons, of Buffalo, N. Y., with territory covering the States of Michigan and Ohio, arrived in the borough Sunday evening for a short visit at his home. Speaking of business conditions in his section, Mr. Fisher said that outside of the lines which are benefitted by the war business is in an apthetic state.

The many friends of Miss Anna Mohan, of Dunellen avenue, will be pleased to know that she has recovered from an attack of the grip. Miss Mohan also had a boil that formed on her right ear. She was under the care of Dr. Cooley for three weeks.

The twenty-eighth annual meeting of the stockholders of the Dunellen Building and Loan Association will be held in the Whittier School, Thursday evening, April 15.

TO REPEAT MINSTRELS.

By popular demand the Darktown College Minstrels, which was given in the local theatre recently by the Dunellen Dramatic Club, will be repeated Friday evening, April 16. The local boys promise us new songs, new jokes, new novelties. The price of admission will be twenty-five cents and an additional fee will be charged those who wish to dance afterward. Tickets are being sold by the members and they are also on sale at the box office of the theatre.

'Plains & Fanwood.

Borough Recorder Charles Sheelen received an interesting letter a short time ago from William L. Lott, who resides on Martine avenue during the short time he is in the north each year. Owing to poor health he is forced to spend the winter months in Florida and it looks this time as if he was to stay as in his letter he says that at a recent election he was elected mayor of Seabreeze, Fla., where he has large interests. Continuing he gives a rather amusing account of how he was called on several hours after he took the oath of office to act as judge in a criminal court case which terminated by the accused being fined six dollars.

It will now be only a matter of a short time before actual work on the much discussed and also delayed improvement of Springfield road is begun. Settlement has been made with all residents on that thoroughfare by the county who would come to terms but in several cases condemnation proceedings will probably have to be resorted to. It is planned by the Board of Freeholders to eliminate the grades as far as possible and to cut out many of the dangerous turns and to do the latter it will be necessary to encroach on the property of various property owners for frontage of from six inches to ten feet. Although fair prices have been offered, it has been on account of dispute by the several people that the work has been held up for the greater part of a year.

Following the yearly custom an oyster supper was served in the parlors of the Baptist church last night under the direction of the women of the church, at which all of the officers were present and submitted reports of the different departments for the past year, which were in all cases favorable.

The monthly session of the borough Council will be held in the Fanwood firehouse tomorrow night when it is expected that several important questions concerning the recently adopted dog ordinance will be brought up for discussion.

"Nibs" Hand, the local backstop artist, will leave on Saturday to report to the manager of the Worcester baseball team of the New England League.

About ten members of the kindergarten class of School No. 1 went to New York yesterday, accompanied by their teacher, Miss Mary Merrill, and Miss Marguerite Jahn. The day was pleasantly spent making a round of different places of interest throughout the city and the return home was made by a tired but happy set of youngsters.

Miss Claire Vreeland, who has been visiting her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Sheelen, of North avenue, for several days, returned to her home in Greenville today.

H. C. Lockwood, the local realty promoter, is having water and gas piped along LaGrande avenue to connect with the dwelling recently constructed for Calvin Betts, but is at the same time making allowance for the tappings to be made when other houses are erected on that thoroughfare, which will probably be during the coming summer. The telephone company has also extended its poles along that street.

The annual election of vestrymen of the All Saints' Episcopal church to serve for the ensuing year was held in the church last night and with the exception of Frederick Sherwood they remain the same. Joseph H. Rhodes was elected to fill the vacancy caused by his retirement and the others follow Albert I. Rubblet, Henry L. Jespersen, Sr., Charles Bent, Sr., Richard W. Tull and Harry P. Robinson. Mr. Robinson remains senior warden.

The weekly meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society of the All Saints' Episcopal church will be held at the home of Mrs. H. P. Robinson, on North avenue, at 2:30 tomorrow afternoon.

Watchung.

Easter services were well attended at the Mary E. Wilson Memorial Union church Sunday in spite of the heavy snow which made country roads almost impassible. Mebane Ramsey preached an impressive sermon. The afternoon Sunday school service was particularly interesting. The children's program was well rendered and included recitations, exercises and choruses by the Junior, Primary and Beginners' classes. The girls' chorus rendered special selections. Mebane Ramsey gave an Easter talk. Special Easter carols were sung by the entire Sunday school. Douglas W. Demler conducted the evening song service. The girls' chorus rendered two anthems. Rev. Ramsey preached another interesting Easter sermon. The chapel was decorated with ferns and Easter lilies.

PLAINFIELDER IN FORESTRY WORK

LOCATED IN WYOMING

Local Man One of Many Detachments Which is Guarding Over 400,000 Acres From the Ravages of Fire and Woodman's Axe.

Wallace Pearce, who has been connected with the National Forestry service of the Department of Agriculture, for the past two and a half years, is spending a three weeks' vacation at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Pearce, of Essex street. Mr. Pearce was graduated from the Plainfield High School in the class of '98 and his many friends have been greatly pleased to learn of the success that has attended his efforts in the West. At the present time his headquarters are at Encampment, Wyoming, a small settlement in the heart of the government's big reservation known as the Hayden Forest. It is a tract of more than 400,000 acres of timber land and one of the best in the country.

In conversation with a Daily Press reporter, Mr. Pearce told many interesting facts of the forestry work which as a rule are unknown to easterners. This branch of the government service has developed in the last decade and valuable timber lands are not only being saved from the ravages of fire and indiscriminate lumbering but what has been waste land is given over to new growths through replanting. Encampment is the radiating point for one of the many detachments of men which care for the Hayden forests. The nearest large town is Laramie but it is so far away that the forestry men get to it only once or twice a year. According to Mr. Pearce most of the national forests in the West are on high mountain ranges and large areas can be reached only by saddle horse; and as much of the forest is sparsely settled it is frequently necessary to use a packhorse, as well, to carry bedding and supplies. Where the young Plainfielder is located, four or five months is about the maximum length of time during which it is possible to use horses. For the balance of the year the deep snows which come early and lie until late in the spring make travel by snowshoes or skiis necessary.

The summer months are the busiest season. In addition to the routine work it is the period of fire danger, as well as the grazing season. Most of the improvement work is also done at this time and the regular force is augmented by temporary men to take care of the increased work and fire hazard. The regular force is usually ten men.

Timber sales, re-forestation and investigations, vary in importance on different forests. Beside these activities, men in the service are often deputy game wardens for the State in which they reside; devote part of their time to the extermination of predatory animals; restock streams with fish from government hatcheries.

In common with the rest of the country, Wyoming experienced a very light snowfall during the past winter, and unless there is an unusually wet spell there will probably be a bad fire season this coming summer, and ranchers are likely to be short of water for irrigation.

Lodge pole pine and Engelman spruce are the most important timber species in Wyoming. These are largely cut for railway ties and mine timbers as lumber sawed from these trees is of poor quality due to pine knots. Much of the timber products are stream driven, the same way as in the Lake States and New England.

Mr. Pearce will return to the West next week, but will report for duty at Denver, as there is a possibility that he may be transferred to the Sopris National forest with headquarters at Aspen, Colorado. This is another big reserve that is now being developed on an extensive scale.

GAS LIGHT COMPANY HOLDS ANNUAL MEETING

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Plainfield Gas Light Company, held in the Plainfield Savings Bank this morning, the following directors were elected to serve for the ensuing year: H. G. Runkle, A. J. Brunson, H. B. MacDonald, H. A. Pope and Daniel Runkle.

The directors met immediately after the election and organized as follows: President, H. G. Runkle; vice-president, A. J. Brunson; secretary and treasurer, H. B. MacDonald. The Plainfield Gas Light Company held the original franchise for gas lighting in Plainfield, and the concern's plant is now operated by the Public Service Corporation under a 900-year lease.

IT'S A GIRL.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence B. LaRue, of 428 Spruce street, are parents of a girl, born on Saturday.

COUPLE MARRIED FOR FIFTY YEARS

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Blackford Celebrate Notable Event.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Blackford celebrated their golden wedding anniversary last evening at their home, 342 New Market road, New Market, 110 guests being present from Plainfield and other places.

The home was decorated with white and gold crepe paper, white tulips and spirella.

Among the numerous beautiful and valuable presents was an anniversary clock, the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Blackford's son.

Mr. and Mrs. Blackford were married by Rev. C. J. Paige, pastor of the Stelton Baptist church. They spent their honeymoon in Washington.

They have one son, Elmer Blackford, who resides together with his wife with them. Another son, Bergen S. Blackford, died when only six years old.

PLAINFIELD "FANS" WANT SIX CENTS FOR A NICKEL

"Are you going to play with St. Paul this year?"

This was the question put to Jack Martin by a Daily Press sport scribe this afternoon.

"I don't know what I am going to do," said Jack; "I have several plans in view."

"We hear you are considering a number of offers to play independent ball," continued the scribe.

"I don't care to commit myself. I am feeling my ground, and I don't know just where I stand with the National Commission as far as the 'release clause' goes."

Martin's general tone indicated that he did not look upon his transfer to the American Association favorably, and that he had something better up his sleeeve.

This much is known, however, Dave Driscoll was in town yesterday afternoon and spent much of his time in Jack's company. What this may indicate is a matter of conjecture, but it is known that Dave's parting words to Jack when he left him to take a taxi to his home in Maplewood were: "Now, don't do anything, Martin, until you hear from me."

Jack returned, "All right, Dave."

Driscoll has a line on a majority of the semi-pro teams in the metropolitan district, and it is barely possible that he may have an independent berth in store for Jack that may bring him more remuneration than playing in the minors. Driscoll is also affiliated with the Perth Amboy Club of the Atlantic League, in which Cliff Randolph and other well-known Central Jersey "lights" are performing.

Queried concerning his ideas on Perth Amboy possibilities the Plainfield player said: "I don't think much of that organization, and they haven't enough money to hire ball players anyway."

"Why don't you run a baseball club in Plainfield this year, Jack?" asked the scribe.

"You couldn't make a baseball club go in this town at the present time. Everyone who has a nickel is holding it until it is valued at six cents."

PLAINFIELDERS ELIGIBLE FOR PETIT JURY SERVICE

Elizabeth, April 6.—Jury Commissioner Charles P. Russ and Sheriff George C. Otto have selected the list of eligibles for grand and petit jury duty for the May term of the Court of Oyer and Terminer. Among them are the following:

Grand jurors:

RESCUE MISSION REPORT.

The monthly report of John LeMatty, superintendent of the Plainfield Rescue Mission, shows that thirty-one gospel meetings were held during March, with an attendance of 1,068. The superintendent made 181 calls. Six persons have made a public confession of Christ. At the Park avenue lodging rooms there have been 448 persons cared for and 391 meals have been served to men, while coffee and bread were served to 172 men.

INCREASED INTEREST IN "BABY SAVING SHOW"

The attendance yesterday at the "Baby Saving Show" in the Stirling Building on Park avenue continued good being almost as large as on the opening days. A large number of mothers attended bringing their babies with them in coaches. At other places where the show has been the management has been compelled to provide facilities for caring for the babies while their mothers looked at the exhibits. At Plainfield, however, they are puzzled at times to provide storage space for the half dozen or more coaches which are at times at the show.

The idea of giving better service, the show will be open on the coming Friday and Saturday mornings from 10 o'clock, as well as in the evenings. Working people, who are employed in the day time, cannot well attend except in evenings, but there is reason to believe that a large number of people would come in if the show was open in the morning.

VICTORIA CROSS AWARDED TO A DUNELLEN SOLDIER

C. H. Humphrey, a resident of Dunellen, who returned to England to rejoin his regiment, the Royal Engineers, at the outbreak of the war, has been awarded a Victoria Cross for bravery on the field in France.

The award was made while Mr. Humphrey was in a London office, where he was taken with an eight-inch wound in his back. This information was gleaned from a London newspaper. His condition was not stated.

LADIES' NIGHT FEATURED BY A STEREOPTICON TALK

A stereopticon lecture by George L. Babcocck was the feature of the program enjoyed by those who attended the "ladies' night" event conducted in the parish house of the Grace P. E. church last night. The attendance was a large one, and the talk proved highly interesting. The slides thrown on the screen by Mr. Babcock's projector added considerably to the lecture.

Following the talk a social hour was enjoyed and an informal program of entertainment was conducted. Refreshments were served by a committee.

Juan for Hampton Roads. Naval officers say that the interment of the Odenwald made it unnecessary to keep the destroyer at San Juan.

Paris, April 6.—The Servian and Roumanian Legations in Paris are still without information to the effect that any solution has been reached of the Serbo-Bulgarian incident last Saturday, when a roving band of Bulgarian irregulars crossed the Servian frontier and pillaged villages.

Vienna (via Amsterdam), April 6, General Kolmar von der Goltz, the German military adviser of the Sultan, left Vienna yesterday on his way back to Constantinople.

Washington, April 6.—Captain Thiersrichen of the Prinz Eitel Freidrich, it is understood, has been adised that he cannot remain in port longer than Thursday midnight.

WHAT MAKES IT GO?

Hung in the window of Weiss Brothers' drug store on Somerset street is a "mystery" clock which is attracting considerable attention from passersby. The timepiece is simply a large glass face, with plain figures, two large hands and a tiny compass. Although it keeps perfect time there are no visible works or mechanism of any kind and many are trying to figure out how it works.

NO AUCTION SALE.

The auction sale advertised to take place at the home of Peter Sader, of Chatham street, yesterday afternoon, drew a large number of people, but there were no sales. The bidders did not go high enough for the owner and he decided to keep his possessions.

VISITING HERE.

Mrs. B. T. Putnam and daughter, Doris, of Troy, N. Y., are the guests of Mrs. Elizabeth Titsworth, of Madison avenue. Mrs. Putnam was formerly Miss Ella Titsworth, of this city.

PERSONAL

Morris Mann, of this city, has returned after a stay in Florida.

Miss Ethel Olsson, of Somerset street, has been visiting in South Amboy for the past week.

James W. Thompson, of San Diego, Cal., who is a student at Rutgers College, is spending the Easter vacation as the guest of Lawrence French, of Washington avenue.

Miss Jean Anderson, of Canton, O., is spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. C. Frank French, of Washington avenue. Miss Anderson is a student at Wellesley College.

ENJOY INFORMAL SOCIAL.

The monthly meeting of the Woman's League of St. Joseph's church which was held in Debele's Hall last night, was largely attended. Mrs. J. E. Bailey, president of the society, presided at the routine business part of the program, at the conclusion of which there was an informal social. Ten games were played during the evening in which practically every member present took part. Ten prizes were awarded to those who excelled in the various games. Dancing and musical selections rendered by several members were also enjoyed. At a late hour refreshments were served.

LOCAL BOY IN PLAY.

Lawrence French, of Washington avenue, will take part in the play "Drifting," to be given in the Newark Normal School tonight under the auspices of the Rutgers College Dramatic Club. The borough student takes the part of "Peanut Jones," which is the comedy character of the cast. A number of local people will attend the performance.

SIGMA GAMMA MEETS.

The Sigma Gamma Sewing Club met at the home of Miss Stella Rink last night, eleven members being present. A very enjoyable evening was passed. Refreshments were served at a late hour. The club will meet next week at the home of Miss Louise Praed.

"CLEANING UP THE CITY."

"Cleaning up the City" will be the topic for discussion at the meeting of the East End Civic Association to be held at the Netherwood Reformed church tonight at 8 o'clock. The public is invited.

SALE POSTPONED.

The sale of the Hand brickyard, located on Mountain avenue, which was scheduled to take place in the sheriff's office in Somerville today, was postponed until next Monday.

COLOR AND MOISTURE.

There Is a Good Reason Why Vegetation Is Mostly Green.

Doubtless many have wondered why the vegetation of the earth is mostly green. That is, not what makes it green, but why it is that color instead of blue or red or purple.

Moisture, it has been found, will be collected by the green foliage in proper quantities while foliage of other colors will not be properly nourished by the dews and moisture from earth and atmosphere.

A rather curious experiment proves this.

Paint a piece of glass yellow, another green and one red and one black and place all these painted pieces of glass out in the open air over night during a summer or autumn night.

When examined early the following morning it will be found that the yellow piece will be very wet and the green piece only fairly moist, while the red and black pieces will be dry.

This is proof that yellow foliage would collect too much dampness, and the red and black would gather none. Green, which collects the medium amount of moisture, seems to be the color best adapted to the conditions existing throughout the earth.

Yellow foliage has been known to damp off and decay under the same conditions that makes green foliage thrive.

A few yellow leaved plants are grown under considerable difficulty under ordinary weather conditions.—New York American.

A RECORD PRESCRIPTION.

After It Was Bought and Paid For It Lost Its Charm.

The largest amount ever officially recorded as the purchase price of a prescription is £5,000 ($25,000), paid by the British parliament to a Mrs. Stevens to reveal the ingredients of her cure for "gravel and stone in the bladder and kidneys." Parliament voted this amount to satisfy the demands of the British public; also because Mrs. Stevens would not take a penny less for her secret.

The ingredients as revealed by Mrs. Stevens were as follows: "Eggshells, snails (shells and all), hips and haws, ash keys, swine cress and various other vegetables all burned to a cinder, and the ash mixed with camomile flowers and fennel and other vegetables."

Curiously enough, when this high priced prescription was made public it immediately lost its potency—and its popularity. New cases failed to respond to its magic, and cases which had been cured while its mysteries were still unrevealed promptly developed new symptoms. At the end of a year it was practically forgotten. But its price record still stands; also the record of one instance in which a British parliament failed to get its money's worth.—Los Angeles Times.

RUNNING A BLOCKADE.

Rules That Usually Govern This Exciting Wartime Sea Game.

Although their operations are drastic and unpleasant, blockades and blockade runners have always been among the most picturesque and dramatic aspects of a great war.

Blockades can be applied either to an enemy's town or fortress or to a port or series of ports on an enemy's coast. It has, in a naval sense, two effects. It brings pressure to bear on an enemy within their own gates and aims at preventing the import or export of provisions, articles of trade, ammunition or re-enforcements. It also makes it unlawful for neutrals to trade with those particular ports.

As a consequence, certain precautions are usually observed. It is, for instance, held that for a valid blockade not only should a state of war exist, but that the blockading party should maintain a force sufficient to prevent access to the blockaded port or, at all events, powerful enough to render the passage of a relief ship extremely hazardous. Further, it is essential that neutral nations should have proper notice of the existence of the blockade either by official notice or by warning given to neutral vessels on their arrival outside the prohibited zone.

Nations differ as to what constitutes an effective blockade. All countries, however, agree that a blockading force may seize any vessel with its cargo trying to trade with a blockaded port and can send it home for condemnation. Even if a vessel succeeds in breaking through a blockade it can be pursued and, if possible, captured.

A vessel may, for the sake of humanity—suppose her crew is starving or she is in danger of sinking—be allowed to enter a blockaded port. Mail steamers also if they do not carry contraband, are permitted to go in and out.—Pearson's Weekly.

A WASHINGTON MONUMENT.

It Was Built by Money Raised by a Public Lottery.

One of the greatest American monuments to the memory of George Washington was built by lottery. The lottery plan for raising money, though now under the ban of public opinion and generally considered a reprehensible practice, was looked upon as legitimate and respectable by the most reputable class of citizens a century ago.

That monument which was raised to the memory of George Washington by the sale of lottery tickets and the offer of dazzling prizes is the tall column which dominates a very exclusive and aristocratic part of Baltimore and which in fair weather may be seen from a considerable distance. Besides being one of the show places of Baltimore, it is one of the imposing monuments of the United States. The view from the balcony, which is built close to the top of the shaft, and just below where stands a figure of Washington, is far sweeping, especially bayward.

The cornerstone of the monument was laid with elaborate ceremonies July 4, 1815, and its crowning feature, the statue of Washington, was set in place in 1829. The Washington monument lottery was authorized by the Maryland legislature Jan. 10, 1810. That act was entitled "An act respecting a memorial or statue to the memory of Washington," and under its provisions the applicants were required to give bond for the proper conduct of the lottery and were required to finish up the affairs of the lottery in five years' time, and a space of ground in Baltimore was allotted for the proposed memorial.—Washington Star.

He Knew.

One day in the lively old time of cowboy activities a timid tenderfood at Bitter Creek asked tremblingly if that bad man, Bill Busher, was hanging around there yet.

"No," replied the native who was asked. "But he was last week."

"Are you sure?" said the tenderfoot.

"Positive. I had hold of the rope."—Browning's Magazine.

A Better Medium.

"Why are you painting advertisements on my fence?"

"So that you will read them and buy my goods."

"Well, it is possible that I may glance at what you have done, but I do most of my reading in the newspapers, my friend."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Accidents.

In reality there is no such thing in the world as an "accident." Whatever takes place does so because something else took place before it. The conditions being the same, the "accident" always comes, but it is as much the result of law as are the events not called accidents.—New York American.

No Wonder.

"My wife is a nervous wreck," complained the young husband.

"Serves you right," commented the unsympathetic friend, "for keeping the girl on the anxious bench four years before coming to the point."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Cause of the Row.

"What was the row in the sideshow this morning, Bill?"

"The two headed man quarreled with himself as to which head should get shaved first."—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Retort Personal.

He—If you get the ballot, aren't you afraid you will neglect the family? She—No; not at all. I wouldn't take that prerogative away from you.—Puck.

—You'll know what the old adage-makings meant by urging that "time is money" if you delay advertising for a tenant.

PRESIDENTIAL TRAVELERS.

	Taft	Wilson
First year	21,665	10,164
Second year	23,708	10,448
Total two years	45,374	20,612

Before drawing significant conclusions of any sort from the travel-records of the studious Mr. Wilson and the genial Mr. Taft, it is worth while to remember that the famous Long Congress occurred during the first half of the former's term, and that almost continuously during his first two years President Wilson was absorbingly engaged in pushing favored bills through the House or Senate. It should also be taken into consideration that although the busy Mr. Wilson has traveled but moderately, the administration has had a representative on the road during a large part of the time. We refer, of course, to its Secretary of State, Mr. Bryan, whose record in this particular calls to mind the performances of winged Mercury. More light would be thrown on the subject by a comparison of the figures for Mr. Taft with those for Mr. Bryan.

With or without such a needed comparison, however, President Wilson's moderate record will commend itself to his thoughtful countrymen. Many of us are of the opinion that his interest in the processes of legislation has been considerably more active than was intended in the Constitution providing three separate and co-ordinate branches of the Federal government, but nevertheless he has set a good example by remaining in Washington and closely attending to business.

The State Board of Education is getting ready to prod local boards in some sections of the State, to see to it that they obey the law with regard to the holding of their meetings in public. A resolution to investigate conditions was passed on Saturday after one of the inspectors of the Board reported that some of the local school bodies begin their meetings later than 8 o'clock at night, which is illegal, by resolving themselves into committees of the whole and meeting secretly until midnight, when, every one having gone home, they begin the regular business sessions. Mr. Murray charged that members of a certain board were interested in contracts let by that body. He said that school property was given away and that in a number of instances bills had been ordered paid which were greatly in excess of contract prices.

Although New Jersey people do not vote for Governor until 1916, there are already about a dozen candidates who will seek the honor on the Republican ticket. Senators Pierce, Smalley, Colgate, Gaunt and Edge would like the place; Assemblymen Kates and Godfrey have been "mentioned" and former Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen has his hat in the ring, judging from the amount of work his press agent is doing. On the other hand not a real live Democrat has declared himself. Can it mean that there is a lack of confidence on the part of members of that party?

It's some consolation to know that a regular American holds the title at last. Australians, Cornishmen, Irishmen and Africans have all held it, and now a Texas cowboy takes first place.

Talk about baseball drawing crowds to the Daily Press office! The group that listened to the megaphoned story of the fight round by round easily numbered fifteen hundred persons.

Senator James E. Martine, "our own Jim," says that he is going to be a candidate to succeed himself. Of course we of Plainfield cannot oppose our distinguished fellow citizen.

It took five hundred Cuban soldiers to keep a crowd of 11,000 in order. Ten New York policemen could have done the same thing.

Better send Jess Willard back to Texas and over the border to make the Mexicans behave.

If order to take the "eat" out of treat, the Legislature will have to abolish free lunches.

Seems funny to see snow on the ground when the circus posters are up.

'Twas a disappointed lot of colored brethren.

OFFICERS OF TRINITY COMMANDERY INSTALLED

The officers of Trinity Commandery, No. 17, Knights Templar, were installed last evening by Right Eminent Sir Knight Nelson Y. Dungan, grand commander of the Knights Templar of the State. The new officers are:

Eminent commander, William A. Cochran; generalissimo, R. F. R. Huntsman; captain general, S. B. Joseph; senior warden, W. M. Bennett; junior warden, G. S. Passmore; excellent prelate, Henry Woodland; associate prelate, B. Frank Coriell; treasurer, Calvin H. Rugg; recorder, Albert D. Honeyman; standard-bearer, Daniel R. Sherwood; sword bearer, Charles A. Sturtevant; organist, R. H. Lowry; and sentinel, Kaspar Bolsterle.

DISCUSS PLANS FOR A FIELD DAY AND BANQUET

Reports received from various committees at the meeting of the Business Men's Association last night indicated that the "Dollar Day" held recently proved an entire success, the aims of the body in promoting the affair having been achieved to an even greater degree than was originally anticipated. Plans for a field day and banquet were discussed in an informal manner at last night's meeting, but nothing definite was decided regarding either issue.

Members of the organization have become interested in the garnishee law, and a resolution was passed authorizing the secretary to communicate with Assemblymen Runyon, Pierce and Morgan, of Union county, conveying the sentiments of the association on the issue.

INJURED ON RAILROAD.

Joseph M. Watcher, whose home is in Raritan, was received in Muhlenberg Hospital this morning suffering from a compound fracture of the leg. The injury was received in an accident on the New Jersey Central Railroad, near Graceland, at which point Watcher fell from a train.

NOONDAY GOSPEL MEETING.

The men's noonday gospel meeting will be held as usual tomorrow afternoon from 12:30 to 1 o'clock in Rescue Mission Hall, Babcock Building. F. H. Andrews will be in charge, and an interesting meeting is promised.

STREET PAVE BIDS RECEIVED

Weldon Contracting Co. and Hassan Paving Co. Are the Lowest.

OTHER BIDS RETURNED

Report of East Fourth Street Commissioners is Approved—Action is Taken Regarding the Evergreen Avenue School Bonds.

Bids for the concrete pavement to be laid on West Third stret, in accordance with an ordinance previously adopted, were received at the April meeting of the Common Council last night. There were six bids in all, the Weldon Contracting Company, of Rahway, being the lowest. Its figures were $4,635.10. The Hassam Paving Company, of Worcester, Mass., was next lowest, its bid being $5,728.85. Both of these bids will be considered further.

The other bids were as follows: C. H. Winans Company, Elizabeth, $5,897.75; Alphonse Colucci, Plainfield, $5,764.00; Burke & Bonham Plainfield, $5,868.70; Mobus Brothers, North Plainfield, $6,037.10. The checks of these bidders were ordered returned.

Elias H. Bird, C. L. Parker and W. H. Abbott, commissioners in the matter of the proposed widening and extension of East Fourth street, between Washington and Richmond streets, presented their report, showing the total damages assessed to be $416. The report was approved, and City Treasurer W. F. Arnold was authorized to pay the property owners the amount of damages in excess of benefits, and Tax Collector W. R. Townsend will receive the assessments in benefits.

Mayor Leighton Calkins informed the Council that four of the $100,000 issue of school bonds had been cancelled, it having been decided to issue only $96,000 worth of bonds. Later, in a resolution offered by Mr. Claybrook, and which was adopted, authorized the payment of the money for the new school to be erected on Evergreen avenue, the usual legal procedure being followed.

CHARITY BALL WAS A GREAT SUCCESS

Exhibitions of the Latest Steps Were Features of the Annual Affair.

Resplendent with the kaleidoscopic decorating scheme and the finery of the dancers the Charity Ball, conducted in the Columbus Club Auditorium last night proved a great success from every point of view and was beyond a doubt the most pretentious event ever held for this purpose in Plainfield. The attendance was even larger than was anticipated, the program was elaborate and the profits were unusually satisfactory.

Dancing proved the feature event of the evening, several hundred exponents of the art that has taken a firm grip on society during the past two years indulging in this recreation until the early morning hours. Professional exhibitions of modern steps staged by Miss Maude C. Gefzert and C. Warren Reed during the dance intermissions were highly appreciated. Miss Gefzert, a graduate of the Vernon Castle School of Modern Dancing and at present instructor in the terpsichorean art in Adelphi Academy, Brooklyn, tendered her services free, at the request of Miss Cossette Bratton, of this city who is also an instructor in Adelph Academy. Mr. Weed, instructor at Hotel Biltmore, and Miss Emily V. Deacon, the piano accompanist, also tendered their services for charity. The dancers gave well qualified demonstrations of Jean Sawyer's hesitation waltz, and the one-step and fox trot. They exhibited a rare adeptness and thorough acquaintance with the most intricate steps. Miss Deacon rendered three vocal selections. Music for the occasion was furnished by Fred Van Eps' orchestra.

The patronesses were: Mrs. Ambrose K. Bennett, Mrs. Paul H. Burns, Mrs. Arthur A. Cannon, Mrs. Elizabeth M. Conway, Mrs. William H. Dunkinson, Mrs. Frederic J. Hughes, Mrs. Andrew E. Kenney, Mrs. John J. Kenney, Mrs. David T. Kenney, Mrs. Charles E. Lipscomb, Mrs. Joseph Noonan, Mrs. Joseph M. O'Keefe, Mrs. Thomas H. Sullivan, and Mrs. Fernando M. Ward.

The general committee in charge was composed of Paul H. Burns, chairman; W. H. Forristel, John J. Hines, T. J. Farrell and Daniel J. Couraine. This committee was appointed by Father Bernard M. Bogan, of St. Mary's church.

Thomas A. Moore was floor manager, and he was assisted by Garret Keating, John J. O'Brien, William V. Sullivan, Joseph G. Carty, William H. Brown, Daniel R. McCormick and M. H. Ward, of Plainfield, and J. A. Traynor, of Westfield.

Palms, cut flowers and ferns used in the decorating of the hall were contributed by W. H. Forristel, of the Belleview nursery.

GOV. NAMES MARTIN SECRETARY OF STATE

Popular Minority Leader in the Assembly is Highly Honored.

Thomas F. Martin, of Hudson county, minority leader in the Assembly, and editor of the Hudson Despatch, was last night named by Governor Fielder as Secretary of State to succeed David S. Crater, who dropped dead in New York on Saturday. His name was sent to the Senate and promptly confirmed after which Mr. Martin was sworn into office by Justice Joseph W. Trenchard. Mr. Martin afterward resigned as a member of the Assembly.

As soon as Mr. Martin was sworn into his new office he appointed William L. Dill, of Paterson, as his assistant. Mr. Martin's appointment is for the full term of five years as is the assistant secretaryship. The office pays an annual salary of $6,000, while the salary of the assistant is $4,000.

The Assembly resolving itself into a committee of whole awaited on the Governor to urge the appointment of Mr. Martin. Assemblyman William N. Runyon, of this city, being chosen as the spokesman for the assemblage. Mr. Runyon eulogized Mr Martin adding, that "because of his honesty and uprightness in everything has endeared himself to all of the members of the House and that is the reason why we want to see him elevated."

MANY FRIENDS AT FUNERAL OF J. PHILIP KIRCH

In the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends, the funeral of J. Philip Kirch, whose death occurred Friday after a long illness, was held this afternoon at the home of his parents, Freeholder and Mrs. George D. Kirch, of Somerset street. The service was conducted by Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church. There were many handsome floral tributes, among them a set piece from the North Plainfield exempt firemen. Burial was made in Hillside cemetery, six members of the North Plainfield Exempt Firemen's Association acting as pallbearers. These were: William Bamberger, B. F. Conover, W. G. Debele, George Hummer, William Ricketts and J. J. Stahl.

DON S. GATES TO SPEAK IN THIS CITY

Will Be Guest at Parlor Meeting of Y. M. C. A. Ladies' Auxiliary.

Don S. Gates, of Newark, will be the speaker at the parlor meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Young Men's Christian Association to be held on Thursday afternoon, April 8, at 3 o'clock, at the home of Mrs. Philip S. Suffern, 955 Kensington avenue. Mr. Gates has recently come from Boston, Mass., leaving his work as boys' secretary of the Y. M. C. A. in that city to take up for the Newark Y. M. C. A. what is known as community boys' work.

This department of activity, while not altogether new in the Y. M. C. A., is being tried for the first time in the larger cities, and consists of work without the usual building and equipment, the purpose being co-operation with the home, church, school and community in developing the four-sided program of the association. Mr. Gates is a strong speaker and an enthusiast for the work he is doing. His address will be entertaining and instructive.

THE CHANCELLOR'S WARNING

Temperance
NEWS AND VIEWS
Conducted by
THE W. C. T. U.

There was some right good speech-making at the recent local option debate at Trenton, and space will not permit even reference in such a flood of oratory. Standing out as a gem among the others for purity of diction, earnestness, sincerity and logic was the address of Majority Leader Runyon, of Union county.

The "personal liberty" plea he punctured with apt allusion to legislation against gambling, use of drugs and polygamy; earnestly he pleaded that the people can be trusted to govern themselves and ought not to have offensive social conditions thrust upon them against their will; and to the claim that commerce and society would suffer irreparable injury he replied with most courteous sarcasm: "If it has come to pass, Mr. Speaker, that the welfare of His child, and He has so elected it, goes hand in hand with the liquor traffic, then I do feel that I have, in a very large measure, a misconception of the God whom I love, because I don't feel, and I can't feel, that it is so."

Prolonged applause followed Mr. Runyon's address, and Minority Leader Martin left his seat to shake hands with him. We could imagine him saying, as he once did to the writer: "The logic is with you, right is with you, and we ought to be with you, but what would happen to me, in Hudson county, if I should vote for this bill."

NO MORE WHISKY POSTERS.

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Poster Advertising Company of the United States and Canada held at Palm Beach, Fla., March 10, it was decided in future to refuse to post any advertisements of whisky and other spirituous liquors, and no new contracts with whisky concerns will be entered into after May 31, and no posters placed after this year.

IN THE STATE LEGISLATURES.

The State lawmakers are doing themselves proud this year. In quick succession the legislatures are taking up the questions of prohibition and woman suffrage. Arkansas, by a big majority, passed a statutory law, making itself the sixteenth State to outlaw the liquor traffic. Under the Going law this State has enjoyed temporary dry periods; after January 1, 1916, its saloons will be banished under the gone law.

The men and women of Idaho will vote upon the question of State-wide prohibition in November, 1916. Only one vote in the Legislature was cast against submission—this by a member who slipped into his seat by a majority of one. Inasmuch as all three political parties are pledged to support the amendment, easy victory is conceded, even by the wets. State-wide prohibition is pending in many other State Legislatures, and the signs are portentous for the "trade."

The Legislatures of New York, West Virginia and Arkansas have all voted to submit a woman suffrage amendment. Massachusetts and Tennessee have done the same, but these two States require its passage by a second Legislature. In other States, both North and South, such an amendment is before the Legislaatures.

HAS TRIED BOTH.

Alabama's return to the prohibition fold is an event of even greater significance than the going dry of a State which has never had a prohibitory law. Up to January 14, liquor men made much of the fact that Alabama adopted prohibition, and after two years' trial rejected it. Furthermore, the wets permitted themselves to believe that the result of the Hobson-Underwood contest last spring proved that the anti-prohibitionists were in the saddle.

As a matter of fact, Alabama's prohibitory statue was lost, as was the Senatorial fight, through the tricks and wiles of the liquorites. The wets succeeded in having the Legislature of 1911 repeal the State-wide prohibitory law and pass a county option bill instead. The very next chance the people had to express their opinion of such summary proceeding (the Legislature of Alabama meets only once in four years) they saw to it that their lawmaking body was overwhelmingly dry. After experience as a wet State, then as a dry State, and again as a wet, Alabama, all but eight of its sixty-seven counties without salons under the county option law, puts itself in the dry column to stay put. It is fifteenth on the list of prohibition States, and the law takes effect July 1, 1915.

GOVERNMENT LIQUOR REVENUE SHRINKING.

In a statement given out by Assistant Secretary of Treasury Andrew Peters, at Washington, March 22, it is shown that as a result of the dry movement there has been a shrinkage in the government returns from whisky of more than two million dollars during the past year.

WHAT THEY EXPECT.

We learn from The Outlook that a New York tax appraiser recently decided that the goodwill of a big brewing business in that State is valueless "because a prohibition wave may sweep over New York any time and wipe out all the breweries."

SIGNIFICANT FIGURES.

From the last United States census we learn that the wet State of Nevada had, in 1910, 353 prisoners for nearly every 100,000 of her population, while her dry neighbor, North Dakota, had 63; Nevada had 194 paupers for every 100,000 population; North Dakota, 14. Nevada had 282 insane people for every 100,000; North Dakota, 108.

The Retail Liquor Dealer's Association meeting in Washington, D. C., this month, calls the dry sentiment now sweeping the country "prohibition hysteria," and declares it will "die out." We notice, however, that the long-headed retailers, as well as the brewers and distillers, are getting ready to change their business. Two large brewing concerns in Chicago have failed within the past month.

Flemington.

Miss Margaret Hoffman and Miss Nellie Hoffman returned to Newark yesterday after spending Easter with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jason S. Hoffman.

Rev. Dr. A. W. Sonne, pastor of the Presbyterian church, made an address before the Men's Club in St. Andrew's Hall, Lambertville, Sunday afternoon. His subject was "Safety First."

Communion services were observed at the Cherryville Baptist church Sunday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. William F. Higgins, of Plainfield, spent the week-end here.

The Board of Education held a meeting last evening, when George W. Dean, Dr. George Henry and Willard C. Parker, who were recently elected members of the board, assumed their duties.

Miss Grace Drake, of Woodsville, is visiting Miss Helen McEwen.

Clarence Miller, of Hasbrouck Heights, was a week-end guest of Mr. and Mrs. Frank S. Holcombe.

Miss Mary M. Bird, of Atlantic Highlands, and Miss Sadie M. Bird, of Newark, are guests of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Bird.

Mrs. James A. Kline returned from Atlantic City Saturday after a visit to Mrs. Caroline Tomlinson at the Holmhurst.

Rev. Dr. and Mrs. A. W. Sonne have as their guests for the week Mrs. Robert Scudder, of Wilkinsbury, Pa., and Miss Lida Dabbs, of Trenton.

Allen Hulsizer, of Ewingsville, is visiting his parents, Postmaster and Mrs. Hulsizer.

Union services were held in the Baptist church Sunday evening, Rev. Howard H. Brown making the address.

Taylor Cook has moved from Pittstown to Flemington.

Miss Bartolette Bowne, of Washington, N. J., is a guest of Freeholder and Mrs. Joseph Alvater.

IF BACKACHY OR KIDNEYS BOTHER

Eat Less Meat Also Take Glass of Salts Before Eating Breakfast.

Uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish, ache, and feel like lumps of lead. The urine becomes cloudy; the bladder is irritated, and you may be obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night. When the kidneys clog you must help them flush off the body's urinous waste or you'll be a real sick person shortly. At first you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, you suffer from backache, sick headache, dizziness, stomach gets sour, tongue coated and you feel rheumatic twinges when the weather is bad.

Eat less meat, drink lots of water; also get from any pharmacist four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active. Druggists here say they sell lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.—Adv.

LEIBOLD, CLEVELAND OUTFIELDER, IS MOST TEMPERAMENTAL PLAYER IN A. L.

"Nemo" Leibold, the Cleveland outfielder, enjoys the rep of being one of the most temperamental of ball players. When in the proper mood Leibold is as fast a fielder as graces our national diversion. But when Nemo doesn't feel like playing he isn't worth a cent.

SEVERAL HUNDRED CALLS ANSWERED BY THE PRESS

Several hundred telephone calls, inquiries on the Johnson-Willard fight, were answered at the Daily Press office yesterday afternoon between the hours of 1 and 4 p. m. All those who called received prompt answer of the progress of the fight, round by round. This number almost equals the total of calls received during a single day last fall regarding the baseball results between the Boston Nationals and Philadelphia Americans.

A crowd of nearly a thousand enthusiastic supporters of both fighters flocked North avenue in Front of the Press office and listened to detailed account of the match, which was megaphoned as it came over the wire. Both the "whites" and dark skinned fans had their chances to ... during the first twenty-five rounds, but the twenty-sixth was short and the crowd quickly dispersed.

JIM BROWNLEE WINS FOUR LENGTH SWIMMING EVENT

Jim Brownlee, of the Indian league, of the Y. M. C. A., made the best time in the four-length swim event held yesterday afternoon. He did the distance in 33 1-5 seconds. While Ellis Enander, of the Sioux team, was second with a mark of 36 1-5. The results follow: Brownlee, Iroquois, 33 1-5; Enander, Sioux, 36 1-5; Wilson, Sioux, 39 2-5; Gates, Omaha, 43 2-5; Boyle, Wawayanda, 45; Angleman, Omaha, 46 2-5; Enress, Sioux, 47 1-5; Krausee, Wawayanda, 49; Willett, Omaha, 48 4-5.

VOLLEY BALL RESULTS.

The Wawayanda and Iroquois teams of the Y. M. C. A. Indian league, met defeat in volley ball contests yesterday afternoon. Wawayanda lost to Omaha by a score of 13 to 4 and Sioux took the measure of Iroquois, 10 to 7.

N. P. H. S. WILL PLAY RUTGERS AS OPENER

Weather conditions have forced the management of the North Plainfield High School baseball team to postpone the game with Cranford High School, scheduled for this afternoon, and preparations are being made for the opening game with Rutgers Prep. at Hyde Oval next Saturday afternoon. The field is not in fit condition for even a practice game and the two games that were postponed will probably be placed on the schedule some time later in the season.

The delay in starting will give the boroughites a chance to show their best as it would have been necessary to use several substitutes last Saturday. Last Friday during practice Harold Meade sprained his leg and could not have played while Conroy has not yet reported for practice. He may be out this week and will undoubtedly get his old place at second. The team will practice again as soon as possible as Rutgers are reported as having a good team this year.

WHEELAN ELECTED CAPTAIN OF 1915 HIGH-SCHOOL TEAM

Following a dinner tendered by Captain Daniel F. McNamee to members of the Plainfield High School basketball team at his home on Central avenue last night, William Wheelan was elected to succeed him as captain of the team for next year. Wheelan played his first year of basketball with the team at guard this year, and is the only member of the regular squad who does not graduate this June.

Those present at the dinner were Ralph Patch, faculty director of athletics and coach of the team which won the Interscholastic Leage championship; Clarence L. Woodman, George W. Wriston and A. R. Beers, of the High School faculty, and players William Peacock, Fred Chamberlain and William Wheelan, and substitutes Sheldon, Coudray, Edward Ryder and Carlton Dunham, and Manager Nicholas Zelmas. Mr. Woodman acted as toastmaster.

THREE MATCHES ROLLED IN BOROUGH TOURNEY

Eddie Conshay's high pinning in two games of the borough one-man tourney last night was the feature of the night's play. He hit for a 213 in the second game with Kunzman, and won one game from George Howe with a 216, which was high score for the night. Conshay won two games from Kunzman and lost the roll-off of the third, which ended in a tie, 112 each. The results follow:

E. Conshay	160	213	*112
W. Kunzman	149	147	112
G. Howe	191	161	164
W. Conover	190	167	210
E. Conshay	137	159	216
G. Howe	199	192	162

*Roll-off—Kunzman, 18; Conshay, 16.

BORO GIRLS WON AND LOST.

The North Plainfield High School girls' basketball team was one of three teams to take the measure of the Perth Amboy High School girls' team which has just closed the most successful season in the history of that institution. North Plainfield won one game on Sängerbund Hall court by a score of 17 to 9, but was forced to take a 29 to 19 defeat at Perth Amboy. Trenton Y. W. C. A was the only sextet to defeat the P. A. team twice.

Johnny Kilbane Aspires to Triple Crown as Boxing King.

WANTS TO TACKLE WELSH.

Believes He Can Trim Lightweight Champion as Easily as He Defeated Kid Williams, Premier Bantamweight, at Catch Weights—Comment on Other Sporting Topics.

Johnny Kilbane, featherweight champion, aspires to be a triple crowned boxing king.

"I'm going to hound Freddie Welsh into giving me a chance at the lightweight championship," Johnny announced recently. "I also stand ready to make 116 pounds ringside for Bantamweight Champion Kid Williams for a fight over any distance if he will make it a championship bout.

"I can make 116 as easily as Williams. I believe Williams weighed more for our bout at Philadelphia than I did. I weighed 120¼ pounds.

"Making that 120¼ pounds was easy for me. I did it while eating three square meals a day. If some promoter will hang up a suitable purse and Williams will consent I'll take that title easier than I won the featherweight championship. Welsh will have to give me a bout before long. I'm not claiming I'll beat him very bad, but if he will make 133 ring side, the lightweight limit, I am sure I'll win a decision over him at any distance."

Johnny is not going to loaf while waiting for Welsh and Williams to fight him, so will box any featherweight.

Connie Mack startled the world with his merciless ax when he sold or released star players haphazardly. With Collins gone, Baker "retired" and Plank and Bender gone to the Feds, Mack made a master move on the checkerboard of baseball when he acquired Nap Lajoie. With the Frenchman, a veteran of seventeen years of service, on second, Connie will rebuild one of the greatest baseball machines of all ages, possibly.

What has he left? A kid pitching crew, a star on first, an unknown on third, Barry at short and Wallie Schang. He has an ordinary outfield, a fair infield, a catcher with a slow ball weakness and pitchers who might come through. "We'll give Mack third or fourth. He will be fighting Washington all year, and the White Sox should beat him for second. We believe the Red Sox will have the benefit of the big show in October," says an expert.

Talk of the Olympic games coming to the United States is premature. Germany has not yet admitted that it has abandoned the coveted award, and a year may do much toward clearing up the war situation abroad.

Probably nothing will be done toward changing the allotment of the world famous events until the close of 1915, or until Germany voluntarily surrenders the right to put on the contests.

Chicago scribes are all coiled up over the rough, rugged manner in which Pants Rowland is goin' to handle his men, as exemplified in a recent run in with Red Russell. Said run in was couched in these soothing terms by Rowland:

"This isn't a holiday or a vacation trip. You're out here to work."

EDDIE GRANT WAS SURELY STAGGERED BY THIS ONE.

Eddie Grant of the New York Giants, who spent the winter in California, was engaged to coach a high school team for a week or so. The head master told him that he wanted the boys to learn all about the inside game, but he cautioned Grant that he did not want them to acquire "professional practices."

"What do you mean?" asked Grant. "Well," said the principal, "when a batter has three balls and no strikes I don't think he ought to wait and let two balls go by. If the pitcher gives him a good one I think it is only sportsmanlike to hit at it."

JOE JACKSON! WHY, WHO'S HE? CARD ROOKIE INQUIRES

Robert Wesley Steele, the recruit southpaw pitcher drafted by the St. Louis Nationals from the Victoria (B. C.) club of the Northwestern league, pulled what Cardinal players consider the prize bon mot of the 1915 training season when he interrupted a debate among the team's veterans recently to inquire, "Who is this fellow, Joe Jackson, you all are talking about?"

At the time Mr. Steele broke into the debate Jack Roche was relating verbatim an account of Joe Jackson's prowess with the willow, as told by Ivan Olson, while Roche and Olson were en route for California one day last fall.

Members of the squad assembled about the big open fireplace in the lobby of the Hot Wells (Tex.) hotel were telling many thrilling yarns of Jackson's various peculiarities, and every one made some mention of Shoeless Joe's remarkable hitting ability, when Steele, who had been listening to the conversation for about half an hour, made his now famous inquiry about Jackson's identity.

THORPE MAY BE REGULAR.

Manager McGraw Will Give Indian Chance to Make Good.

Jim Thorpe, the great Indian athlete of the New York Nationals, may win a place on the regular lineup of the Giants this season. He has shown great improvement in running the bases and covering the outer garden.

JIM THORPE, FAMOUS INDIAN ATHLETE.

He is also batting better. McGraw is reported to be considering him as a regular.

Thorpe was used last season to run for some of the regulars. He will prove a good drawing card if he can make good enough to be classed as a regular.

MORAN HAS HIS TROUBLES.

Phillies' Manager Seems to Be Experiencing Tough Luck.

Pat Moran, besides succeeding Charley Dooin as manager of the Phillies, seems also to have fallen heir to Dooin's tough luck. Dooin always claimed more hard luck befell him than any other manager. He believes he would have won a couple of pennants with the Phillies had not agencies over which he had no control robbed him of stars at critical times.

Moran hasn't even started a season as manager, but already he is in danger of losing his star pitcher through a blunder of some one else connected with the club.

In a recent list of players upon which the Phillies asked waivers the name of G. C. Alexander appeared. This is Grover Cleveland Alexander. It is believed the Phillies intended asking waivers on Grover's kid brother. But it was a big relief to Moran when Phillie officials recalled the waivers in time.

21 ROOSEVELT DEPUTIES GO ON TRIAL TODAY

New Brunswick, April 6.—Trial is set for today of the twenty-one deputy sheriffs of Middlesex county charged with being responsible for the death of two workmen during the recent labor troubles at Roosevelt. The twenty-one men will be tried together, it is expected.

The clash of the deputy sheriffs and the strikers occurred on January 19. Sixteen men were injured, and two men died from gunshot wounds. They were Carman Patty and Desederio Alesandro. The fight occurred when the strikers stopped a Central Railroad of New Jersey train from Elizabethport, to see if strikebreakers were being taken to the plant of the American Agricultural Chemical Co., where a strike was then in progress.

Some of the firm's employes were aboard, and their outcry brought fifty armed deputy sheriffs to the scene from the company's plant. A general encounter occurred. At first stones were used, then someone fired a shot, and the fighting began. None of the deputies were injured, but some sixteen of the strikers fell, most of them wounded in the legs. Carrying the injured the strikers dispersed. Two of the wounded died soon afterward. Twenty-two deputy sheriffs were arrested at once and were released on bail. They were rearrested on January 22, with nine more deputies and held without bail awaiting the action of the Grand Jury. Positive identification is said to have been made of twenty-one of the number. On February 5 twenty-six deputies were indicted for murder and atrocious assault and battery in the Roosevelt strike riot. Eighteen indictments were returned. Two of them charge all with the murder of Alesandro and Patty. There is one blanket indictment for each of the sixteen men hurt.

BOROUGH COUNCIL GRANTS MANY BUILDING PERMITS

The Borough Council, at its April meeting last night, granted the following building permits: Andrew Carney, for a garage on Lincoln place; C. W. Krausse, for a storehouse and an enlargement to his wagon shed on Vine street; George Giddes, for a house at Pearl street and Watchung avenue; Usepe Lionetti, for a chicken house on Duer street; J. J. VonMear, for an addition to his house in Myrtle avenue; J. H. Williams, for addition to chicken coop at 31 Jackson avenue; C. W. McCutcheon, ofr addition to house in Rockview avenue.

SAGE TEA TURNS GRAY HAIR DARK

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair.

That beautiful, even shade of dark glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray, streaked and look dry, wispy and scraggly, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundred fold.

Don't bother to prepare the tonic you can get from any drug store a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," ready to use. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color, thickness and lustre of your hair and remove dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy, lustrous and abundant.—Adv.

IN CHANCERY OF NEW JERSEY.

To Rose Judson, Trustee for Plainfield Plumbing, Hardware and Paint Supply Company:

By virtue of an order of the Court of Chancery of New Jersey, made on the day of the date hereof, in a cause wherein Ernst Kubler is complainant, and you, and others, are defendants, you are required to appear, plead, answer or demur to the bill of said complainant on or before the twenty-fifth day of May next or the said bill will be taken as confessed against you.

The said bill is filed for the purpose of foreclosing a mortgage given by Daniel J. Devoe to Jersey State Realty Company, and now held by the complainant dated April 1, 1912, covering premises in the City of Plainfield, County of Union and State of New Jersey, and you are made defendant, because it is alleged in said bill that you conveyed, or attempted to convey, the mortgaged premises to Plainfield Plumbing Hardware and Paint Supply Company, but that in said deed you were described as "Rose Judson, Trustee for Plainfield Plumbing & Paint Supply Company" and that the granting clause in said deed ran to the grantee, "its heirs and assigns" and that the said deed was not sealed by you, and that by reason of these facts you claim to have some interest in said premises.

Wisconsin Building a Storehouse of Interesting and Instructive Exhibits

THE Wisconsin building at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, San Francisco, covers an area of over 6,000 square feet and stands distinctive among the state buildings. Maple and birch are used entirely in the interior work. The building, costing over $20,000, will contain many interesting exhibits. The famous old eagle "Old Abe," which is one of the historic relics of the state, will be on exhibit in the building.

Scene from "The Pursuit of the Phantom" at Proctor's Theatre Thursday, April 8.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

Proctor's Theatre held capacity audiences at all performances yesterday afternoon and last night, an evidence that the people appreciate programs provided by the up-to-date management. Vaudeville for the first half of the week met with unstinted approval and every act received volumes of applause. Rossner's invention, an acrobatic and posing novelty distinctly out of the ordinary was the feature number, making a big hit. The comedy dramatic sketch, "The Black Sheep," also went big and Gardner and Castle had the audiences in one continuous laugh. The D'Lour Trio of high class singers and Kalma and company in a magic act were also well received.

The picture feature for yesterday and today is the big Hudson Theatre success, "The Fight." Every foot of its five reels of film is filled with *either thrills or heart throbs, a com*bination that always pleases photo-play devotees.

In addition to the vaudeville and comedy pictures tomorrow there will also be a Chaplin comedy and a Paramount feature, "Such a Little Queen," featuring Mary Pickford, the highest salaried camera actress in the country. She is the essence of cleverness and in "Such a Little Queen" she has excellent opportunities to demonstrate her talent. On Thursday another Paramount picture will be shown under the title, "The Pursuit of the Phantom," a *film that has been returned after al*most every presentation as a result of popular demand.

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

The announcements for the present week at the Plainfield Theatre show several excellent offerings, in addition to the legitimate production "A Pair of Sixes," which is scheduled for Thursday night. The spe*cial offering today is "The Cru*cible," the photo-play which portrays an agonized soul's triumph through suffering over threatening evils. The spectators who saw it yesterday and last night were alternately moved to tears and laughter.

For tomorrow, the management has secured another intensely gripping dramatic photo-play, "False Colors," featuring Lois Weber. The drama tells a powerful story in which right triumphs over wrong. After the break on Thursday, caused by the presentation of "A Pair of Sixes," pictures will hold the boards again Friday and Saturday, the offering being David Belasco's masterpiece, "Du Barry," with Mrs. Leslie Carter appearing in her original role. This is absolutely one of the most artistic camera productions being presented this season.

Much interest has been manifested in the serial film, "The Black Box," which was shown for the first *time last Tuesday, the second epi*sode is scheduled for this afternoon and tonight and if you missed seeing the initial installment, make certain to be numbered among the spectators today, otherwise you will never cease to regret having passed it up. "The Black Box" will reveal one of those thrilling detective mysteries which hold your attention steadfast from beginning to end and make the revelations at the finish the treat of a week.

MISS LEIGHS FIRST, MISS M'GINNESS SECOND, IN SPECIAL CONTEST

Plainfield Girl Wins $100.00 Diamond Solitaire Ring—Other Winners in Press' "Preliminary" to Free Tours.

Ever since the close of the special prize contest, candidates and their friends have been most anxious to learn who the winners were, and the tremendous task of verifying subscriptions as to old and new readers has prevented an earlier announcement. Now that all returns are in and the correct vote of each candidate determined, the winners are found to be as follows:

First Prize.

Miss Agnes Leighs, of 714 West Fourth street, of District One, with a total gain of 43,220 votes, is the winner of the first prize, the $100 diamond solitaire ring. Miss Leighs is to be complimented upon the fine showing she made.

The Second Prize.

The second prize, $25 merchandise certificate on Woodhull & Martin Co. and $15 in gold, was won by Miss Anna B. McGinness, 189 North Avenue, of District Two, who made a gain of 35,915 votes, which is a fine showing.

The Third Prize.

The third prize, a $35 solid gold wrist watch, was won by Miss Lorena B. Harris, South Plainfield, of District Three, with a gain of 30,760 votes. Such a gain as Miss Harris made in South Plainfield section should go to show city candidates that the votes can be had if gone after.

From the outside it might seem that the contest is progressing in the same smooth, orderly and sometimes uninteresting way of the ordinary successful contest, with an occasional flurry of votes, but those on the inside who have a glimpse of the plots and counterplots, the planning and campaigning, and the endless activity of the free tour aspirants, predict that when the final closing day rolls around, the people of Plainfield and vicinity will be treated with the greatest surprise of their lives from the voting contest standpoint.

The contest is a thing of many uncertainties and one certainty. The many uncertainties concern the question of who will be the winners; the one certainty is that the struggle will be an interesting one, and with such an array of aggressive candidates, the battle of supremacy will be hard fought to the very finish.

There is nothing more vital at this stage in the Press' contest than the importance of the candidates making the fight of their lives to secure every available subscription between now and 10 p. m. on April 17.

Candidates are advised to put their whole strength into the effort, for it means that friends will hear of the success attained by reason of extra effort, and will gladly render assistance in addition to that already given.

Subscribers Are Interested.

Many people each day call at the Press office to pay up their back subscriptions, or to give orders to have the paper started. These people are entitled to votes if they ask for them.

Some candidates can get these votes very easily, for in the regular round of routine work it is simply amazing how frequently you just stumble on to those who want the Press. The candidates cannot expect these people to vote in their favor unless they point them out and request them to do so.

The promises that you are getting will mature all right in due season, provided they are followed up properly.

Sometimes a candidate may find a person just a mite cold on the taking out of a subscription. If this is so, it is to your advantage to make him warm up to it. This is why some candidates are ahead of others.

Remember that a convert is ten times more enthusiastic that one who always believed as you did, and when these lukewarm people really get back of you, you will find your vote ascending skyward.

Defeat for Those Who Court It.

In every battle there is a time when opposing leaders are tempted to give up the fight. The first to overcome this natural tendency and to prosecute vigorously his campaign is the conqueror.

That is what you want to be on April 17, so just emulate the example of those who are victors.

Remember, there is not credit to winning without opposition.

Anyone can make third place in a race with only three entrants.

Sometimes you get a medal for this, but you are ashamed afterwards to face your friends and tell them you obtained the supposed prize.

TO APPEAL LIGHT DECISION

The Council was invited to attend the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the surrender of General Lee, at Reform Hall, April 9, and it was accepted. Lamar Van Seckel, secretary of the Board of Trade, in a communication, asked the Council why the city should charge 10 per cent interest on delinquent taxes, when 6 per cent is the usual rate? The Council wanted to know if this was intended as a conundrum. The matter was referred.

The Model Garage Company, of 1,250 West Front street, asked for permission to install a 500-gallon gasoline tank at its place of business. This was referred, as was also a communication from the State Bank of Elizabeth inquiring about the claim of the Universal Audit Company, which audited the city's books, and which was turned over to the bank. The matter was referred to the finance committee. The audit company's report was also presented last night and filed.

The Thompson Auto Company requested permission to install a 500-gallon gasoline tank under the walk in front of its place of business on Park avenue. The matter was referred.

Residents of Summer avenue peti*tioned for sidewalks, macadamized* roads, sewer and lights, and this was referred to the proper committees, as was also a petition from Frank Caruso for permission to erect a revolving barber pole in front of his place of business at 228 West Front street.

City Judge W. G. DeMeza's quarterly report showed that $179 had had been collected in fines. Twelve sewer permits and twenty-seven building permits were granted during the past month, and Overseer of the Poor Garret T. Dunham reported expenditures of $1,660.54. In accordance with resolutions by Mr. Claybrook, $3,225 was transferred from the general to the sinking fund; $4,000 was transferred to the fire fund and $1,500 from the general fund to the poor fund.

Mr. Claybrook reported a settlement of a tax matter with Margaret Zeller. Mr. Hylan offered a resolution, which was adopted, authorizing the appointment of commissioners in the matter of the improvement of Emerson, Monroe and Berkeley avenues and West Fourth street. The three commissioners will be named on April 30. Another resolution offered by Mr. Hylan authorized the installation of a culvert extending from Evergreen avenue to Cedar brook. Other resolutions by the same member authorized the purchase of refined tar in quantities as needed for street work from the United Gas and Improvement Company and the Barrett Manufacturing Company. The Council adjourned to meet on Monday night, April 12.

SEWER WORK ESTIMATES

Residents of Belmont avenue last night submitted a petition for the installation of proper lights along that thoroughfare and it was also referred to a committee. The petition of the Boards of Freeholders from Somerset and Union counties was taken under advisement at the suggestion of Councilman Milne. This latter communication requested the municipality to share in the expenses of erecting a new bridge over Green brook at Grove street. It will be a fifty-foot concrete span and Union and Somerset county towns are expected to share the expenses equally.

Councilman Milne reported ex*penses of the street committee for* the month of $451.98 and introduced a resolution which gives the street *committee power to exercise discre*tion in making street and culvert repairs without bringing the matter to the attention of the Council. This was favorably received and passed. Police expenses for the month amounted to $612.17, according to Chairman Cowperthwait's report and he introduced a resolution providing for a new marshal. This action was deemed advisable in view of the fact that a large number of foreigners are flocking to the borough to work as laborers on the new sewer work. Mayor Clark later appointed James Hoan and C. J. Sheats as special marshals and his action was ratified. It was voted to change the present four-party line at police headquarters to a direct line telephone at an additional cost of seventy-five cents a month. Councilman Stahl reported expenses for the month of $440.13 for the fire and water committee. Overseer-of-the-poor Becker was advanced $300 on the poor account.

Councilman Milne called the Coun*cil's attention to the apparent inade*quate provisions of Senate Bill No. 286, referring to consolidation, and upon his suggestion it was decided to place the matter in the hands of committee on laws, ordinances and taxation for investigation. An adjourned meeting of the Council will be held Tuesday night, April 13.

FANCY DRESS DANCE.

A fancy dress dance will be given in the auditorium of the Washington School Friday night, under the direction of the Dunbar Social Club. Two prizes will be awarded, on for the prettiest and one for the funniest costume.

A FOOL AND HIS MONEY

CHAPTER XIV.

I Am Invited to Spend Money.

SHORTLY after 9 o'clock the next morning a sly faced man in overalls accosted me in the hall.

"I beg your pardon, Mr. Smart," he said in fairly good English. "May I have a word with you? I have a message from Mr. Pless. I am an agent of the secret service. Yesterday I failed to gain admission as a visitor, today I come as a laborer."

"Is it necessary for Mr. Pless to resort to a subterfuge of this character in order to get a message to me?" I demanded indignantly.

"It was not necessary yesterday, but it is today," said he. He leaned closer and lowered his voice. "Our every movement is being watched by the countess' detectives. We are obliged to resort to trickery to throw them off the scent. Mr. Pless has read what you had to say in the newspapers, and he is too grateful, sir, to subject you to unnecessary annoyance at the hands of her agents. He would have you to meet him secretly tonight at the Rempf hotel across the river. It is most important that you should do so and that you should exercise great caution. I am to take your reply back to him."

She Was Smiling Down Upon Us.

For an instant I was fairly stupefied. Then I experienced a feeling of relief so vast that he must have seen the gleam of triumph in my eyes. The luck was mine, after all.

"You may tell Mr. Pless that I shall be there at 9," said I. The agent departed. When he was safely out of the room I explained the situation to Lopendyke and then made my way through the secret panels to the countess' rooms.

She was ready for the subterranean journey in quest of treasure attired in a neat walking skirt, with her bonny hair encased in a swimming cap as a guard against cobwebs.

"Then you don't intend to send out the statements?" she cried in disappointment. "You are going to let every one think you are his friend and not mine?"

I stood over her, trying my best to scowl. "You know better than that. You know I—I am as loyal as—as can be. Hang it all!" I burst out impulsively. "Do you suppose for a minute that I want to hand you over to that infernal rascal now that I've come to—that is to say, now that we're such ripping good friends?"

She looked up at me very pathetically at first. Then her expression changed swiftly to one of wonder and the most penetrating inquiry. Slowly a blush crept into her cheeks, and her eyes wavered.

"I—I think I can trust you to—to do the right thing by me," she said, descending to a banality in her confusion.

I held out my hand. She laid hers in it rather timidly, almost as if she was afraid of me. "I shall not fail you," said I without the faintest intention to be heroic, but immediately conscious of having used an expression so trite that my cheek flamed with humiliation.

For some unaccountable reason she rose hastily from the chair and walked to the window. A similar reason no doubt held me rooted rather safely to the spot on which I stood. I have a vague recollection of feeling dizzy and rather short of breath. My heart was acting queerly.

"Why do you suppose he wants to see you?" she asked after a moment, turning toward me again. She was as calm as a summer breeze. All trace of nervousness had left her.

"I can't even supply a guess."

"You must be very, very tactful," she said uneasily. "I know him so well. He is very cunning."

"You may trust me implicitly to do the right thing," said I beaming. "And now what do you say to our trip to the bottom of the castle?"

She shook her head. "Not with the house full of spies, my dear friend. We'll save that for another day. A rainy day perhaps. I feel like having all the sunshine I can get today. Tonight I shall be gloomy and very lonely. I shall take Rosemary and Jinko out upon the top of the tower and play all day in the sun."

I had an idea. "I am sure I should enjoy a little sunshine myself. May I come too?"

She looked me straight in the eye. There was a touch of dignity in her voice when she spoke.

"Not today, Mr. Smart."

A most unfathomable person!

I found Mr. Pless at the Rempf at 9 o'clock. He welcomed me with great warmth. He called me "dear old fellow" and shook hands with me with more heartiness than I had thought him capable of expressing. A smallish old gentleman was with him. I was informed that he was one of the greatest lawyers and advocates in Vienna, and Mr. Pless' personal adviser in the "unfortunate controversy."

"So you knew who I was all the time I was at Schloss Rothhoefen," said Mr. Pless, smiling amiably. "I was trying to maintain my incognito so that you might not be distressed, Mr. Smart, by having in your home such a notorious character as I am supposed to be. I confess it was rather shabby in me, but I hold your excellent friends responsible for the trick."

"It is rather difficult to keep a secret with women about," said I evasively.

"But never difficult to construct one," said Mr. Schymansky, winking. I think Schymansky was the name.

"By the way," said I, "I have had no word from our mutual friends. Have you seen them?"

Mr. Pless stiffened. His face grew perceptibly older.

"I regret to inform you, Mr. Smart, that our relations are not quite as friendly as they once were. I have reason to suspect that Mr. Smith has been working against me for the past two or three days, to such an extent, I may say, that the ambassador now declines to advise your government to grant us certain privileges we had hoped to secure without trouble. In short, we have just heard that he will not ask the United States to consider anything in the shape of an extradition if the countess is apprehended in her own country.

"I fancy you are wondering why I sent for you, Mr. Smart," said Mr. Pless.

"I am."

"Am I to assume that the newspapers were correct in stating that you mean to support my cause with—I may say, to the full extent of your powers?"

"It depends on circumstances, Mr. Pless."

"Circumstances?" He eyed me rather coldly, as if to say, "What right have you to suggest circumstances?"

"Perhaps I should have said that it depends somewhat on what my powers represent."

He crossed his slender legs comfortably and looked at me with a queer little tilt of his left eyebrow, but with an unsmiling visage. He was too cocksure of himself to grant me even so much as an ingratiating smile. Was not I a glory seeking American and he one of the glorious? It would be doing me a favor to let me help him.

"I trust you will understand, Mr. Smart, that I do not ask a favor of you, but rather put myself under a certain obligation for the time being. It is quite impossible for me to prosecute the search for my child without financial assistance from outside sources. My funds are practically exhausted, and the banks refuse to extend my credit. You have publicly declared yourself to be my friend and well wisher. I have asked you to come here tonight, Mr. Smart, to put you to the real test, so to speak. I want $100,000 for six months."

While I was prepared in a sense for the request, the brazenness with which he put it up to me took my breath away.

"Really, Mr. Pless," I mumbled in direct contrast to his sangfroid, "you—you surprise me."

He laughed quietly, almost reassuringly, as he leaned forward in his chair the better to study my face. "I hope you do not think that I expect you to produce so much ready money tonight, Mr. Smart. Oh, no! Any time within the next few days will be satisfactory. Take your time, sir. I appreciate that it requires time to arrange for the"—

I held up my hand with a rather lofty air. "Was it one hundred and fifty thousand that you mentioned or"—

"That was the amount," said he, a sudden glitter in his eyes.

I studied the ceiling with a calculating squint, as if trying to approximate my balance in bank. He watched me closely, almost breathlessly. At last, unable to control his eagerness, he said:

"At the usual rate of interest, you understand."

"What security can you give, Mr. Pless?" I demanded in a very business-like way.

"Oh, you Americans!" he cried, his face beaming with premature relief. "You will pin us down, I see. I do not wonder that you are so rich. I shall give you my personal note, Mr. Smart, for the amount secured by a mortgage—a supplementary mortgage—on the Chateau Tarnowsy."

Tarnowsy! Now I remembered everything. Tarnowsy! The name struck my memory like a blow. What a stupid doll I had been! The whole world had rung wedding bells for the marriage of the Count Maris Tarnowsy, scion of one of the greatest Hungarian houses, and Aline, the nineteen-year-old daughter of Gwendolen and Jasper Titus of New York, Newport, Tuxedo, Hot Springs, Palm Beach, and so forth—Jasper Titus, the banker and railway magnate, whose name as well as his hand was to be seen in every great financial movement of the last two decades!

My pleasant little mystery had come to a sharp and rather depressing end. A joyous enthusiasm had attended me while I worked in the dark; now a dreary reality stared me in the face. The sparkle was gone.

My cogitations were brief. The count after waiting for a minute or two to let me grasp the full importance of the sacrifice he was ready to make in order to secure me against personal loss blandly announced that there were but two mortgages on the chateau.

"You wish me to accept a third mortgage on the place?" I inquired, pursing my lips.

"The chateau is worth at least a million," he said earnestly. "But why worry about that, Mr. Smart? My personal note is all that is necessary."

"Just a moment, count," I said, leaning forward in my chair. "May I inquire where and from whom you received the impression that I am a rich man?"

He laughed easily. "One who indulges a whim, Mr. Smart, is always rich. Schloss Rothhoefen condemns you to the purgatory of Croesus."

"Croesus would be a poor man in these days," said I. "If he lived in New York he would be wondering where his next meal was to come from. I am not a rich man."

He eyed me coldly. "Have you suddenly discovered the fact, sir?"

"What do you mean?"

"I suggest a way in which you can be of assistance to me, and you hesitate. How am I to take it, sir?"

His infernal air of superiority aggravated me. "You may take it just as you please, Mr. Pless."

"I beg you to remember that I am Count Tarnowsy, Mr."—

I arose. "The gist of the matter is this: You want to borrow $150,000 of me. That is"—

He hastened to correct me. "I do not call it borrowing when one gives ample security for the amount involved."

"What is your idea of borrowing, may I ask?"

"Borrowing is the same thing as asking a favor, according to our conception of the transaction. I am not asking a favor of you, sir. Far from it. I am offering you an opportunity to put a certain amount of money out at a high rate of interest."

"Well, then, we'll look at it in that light. I am not in a position to invest so much money at this time."

"Suppose that I were to say that any day inside the next three or four weeks would be satisfactory to me," said he, as if he were granting me a favor. "Please be seated, Mr. Smart."

"Thank you. I fear it is impossible for me to remain."

"I shall be disappointed. However, another time if not tonight, I trust. And now to come to the point. May I depend upon you to help me at this trying period? A few thousand will be sufficient for present needs, and the balance may go over a few weeks without seriously inconveniencing me."

I actually was staggered. My choler was rising.

"I may as well tell you first as last, Count Tarnowsy, that I cannot let you have the money. It is quite impossible. In the first place, I haven't the amount to spare; in the second"—

"Enough, sir," he broke in angrily. "I have committed the common error of regarding one of you as a gentleman. Dash me, if I shall ever do so again! There isn't one in the whole of the United States."

Of Interest to Women and the Home

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

When Mrs. Morton entered her son's office it lacked half an hour of closing time. Dick and Miss Rudolph sat close together, their heads bent over a paper spread out on the desk.

As she stood a second, Miss Rudolph raised her eyes and gazed into his face. A fierce snort made them both start and Dick rose, surprised and considerably fussed, and came forward to speak.

"Why, how do you happen to be here? Is Nell with you?" he asked.

"No, I came out for a walk and I thought I'd go back with you. Don't let me interrupt your work," she continued, as Miss Rudolph began folding up the papers and packing them away.

"Oh, it's near quitting time. We can leave them 'till tomorrow. I'll see Parsons about a little matter, then I'll be ready to go. Excuse me," and he was gone.

Miss Rudolph cleared the desk and was reaching for her hat and parasol when the old lady burst out:

"Did you know, young woman, that you are getting yourself talked about by continually walking the street with my son?"

"Why, no," said the girl, turning great innocent eyes on her accuser. "Did Mrs. Morton say that?"

"Mrs. Morton is no gossip and listens to none, so the head gossip came to me with the news," replied the old lady.

"Really, one can do nothing without having remarks made in a tiny village." Miss Rudolph was boring holes in the floor with her parasol.

"I ain't supposed to tell."

"Well, I'd rather you heard it from me than from others. Your affairs are known, no girl who goes quietly about her business is talked about. A girl's reputation is her most precious possession. It doesn't pay to trifle with it." At this point Dick returned, Miss Rudolph said "Good night," and went out.

Dick looked from one to the other and thought he smelled gunpowder. However, one could judge nothing from his mother's inscrutable face.

When they were out on the sidewalk she said, "I had a call from one of your friends this afternoon. Nell was downtown, so the impudent baggage unburdened herself to me."

"Who was it?" asked Dick in surprise.

"Mrs. Ellson." His mother fixed her sharp eyes on Dick.

"I thought you were grown up and knew better than to go parading the streets every day with a silly girl and set all the idle tongues in the village wagging."

"So they've loosed the dogs of war, have they, to hunt me to cover? What did Nell say? Did she send you here to reclaim me?" His eyes shot fire and an angry color was in his face.

His mother stopped in the middle of the sidewalk and looked at him.

"Do I look like a child to be sent on an errand?" she snapped. "Nell knows nothing about this. She was not at home and it's to save her from knowing that I came. She's a good little thing and you shan't act the fool and make her suffer about that silly girl."

"You talk as if I were ten years old. You can't realize that I'm grown up."

She looked at him with withering scorn. "Perhaps I might if you would act grown up."

"Look here, mother, I am a man and perfectly capable of managing my own affairs. The days of your interference are past," he flamed.

"Well, I've told that silly little fool her reputation is at stake. Maybe she will care for it, if you are not man enough to do it for her." And

Household Hints

STUFFED PEPPERS

Parboil the peppers, cut them in two, remove seeds and stuff with rare roast beef, minced, and mixed with cooked rice. Cover with buttered crumbs and place them in a baking pan. Bake twenty minutes, basting occasionally with melted butter or with stock. Serve on small, thin pieces of toast.

LENTEN DISHES

Thick Rice Soup—Two pints water or stock, salt and pepper to taste, two small onions, two tablespoons butter, one cup rice, one cup canned tomatoes or four fresh ones. Wash and drain rice. Heat butter in sauce pan, add rice and stir constantly until a golden brown. Now add water, onions, tomatoes and seasonings. Cook slowly one hour.

Cracker Dumplings—Half pound oyster crackers; crisp them in oven for a while, then roll fine, add pinch salt and lump butter size of hazelnut; pour over and stir into crumbs enough boiling water to moisten thoroughly. When cool, add one well-beaten egg and with your hands form into balls about one inch in diameter. Drop them into kettle of boiling water and let boil steadily ten minutes. Meanwhile brown a little butter, take up dumplings into hot dish and pour butter over. These can be put in soup just like you would the flour dumplings.

Baked Eggs—Cover bottoms of buttered gem pans with stale bread crumbs; break an egg into each, add salt and cover with another layer of crumbs. Dot wit butter and bake five minutes.

Light Omelet—For each egg allow one-fourth teaspoon salt, dash of pepper, and one tablespoon milk or stock. Beat yolks and whites separately. Fold whites into yolks, add milk and seasoning. Turn into buttered frying pan. When brown on bottom place in oven till top is set. Fold and serve at once. Chopped ham, oysters or cooked chicken livers may be added.

Ox-Eyes—Cut bread into rounds, removing a little from center of each, toast lightly, place on pan and moisten with hot seasoned milk. Brek egg into each cavity and place in oven till set.

WORTH KNOWING.

To Guard Against Fake Inspectors—Cut colored reproduction of badges worn by employees of gas and electric light companies from the circular mailed to every home at some time in the past and paste the same just inside the surface door. On each copy is the number of your meter. When an inspector calls, just glance at the "badge" pasted on the wall and then ask him for the number of your meter.

To Remove Grease From Motor Coats—Rub a little lard on each grease spot; let stand a short time before washing, then rub out in lukewarm water and soap. Rinse well and hang on coat hanger to dry.

When cleaning mopboards, the wall adjoining may be protected by using a piece of cardboard held against upper edge of mopboard. This allows the cleaning cloth to soil the cardboard instead of the wall.

In wiping up hardwood or any varnished floor, pour a few drops of kerosene in the warm water, instead of soap. This will leave the same gloss on the floor as before, while soap eats the varnish.

PEPPER SALAD.

Cut the peppers lengthwise in half, and fill with a mixture of flaked cold cooked fish and minced celery, mixed with mayonnaise.

If there is much sour cream on hand, put it in an egg beater and whip it into buter. Then pat it together, drain off the buter milk, and wash the butter in running, cold water until it is sweet and fresh. Salt to taste. This takes only ten or fifteen minutes and both saves the cream and results in a dainty pat of butter.

Always, when mixing a milk mixture with another, pour the other mixture over the milk. This prevents curdling. For instance, in mixing tomato and milk, add the tomato to the milk. In mixing meat stock with cream sauce, pour the meat stock into the other. Add also a small pinch of soda.

FOR THE SPRING TAILLEUR.

A dainty blouse is this of white crepe de chine, made after the model so generally adopted this spring. Lace has been prettily introduced here at either side of the front and on the collar, and serves to confine, at the wrist, the slight fullness of the sleeve. Large ivory buttons close the front.

FOR LITTLE FOLKS

BY ALICE CREW

The Envious Sparrow.

One day an envious Sparrow perched upon a window sill.
Said he, "The luck that some folks have just fairly makes me ill.

"Look at that young canary now, inside his cage of gold;
He doesn't ever have to hunt his food and drink, I'm told.

"He simply sits and sings all day, as happy as can be,
While I must work for what I eat; I envy him," said he.

His mother overheard his words, and said to him, "Indeed!
I wonder how you'd like to live on cuttle-fish and seed!

"And then there is another thing you've overlooked," said she;
"What if they should forget his food awhile, where would he be?"

The Sparrow said, "I had not thought about the things you say;
I'm glad I am a Sparrow," and he gaily flew away.

Though you may sometimes feel abused, of this I have no doubt,
If you will try, I'm sure you'll find much to be glad about.

RUNAWAY JUNE

BY GEORGE RANDOLPH CHESTER AND LILLIAN CHESTER

Copyright, 1915, by Serial Publication Corporation

She gathered up the money with a sickening sense of humiliation and took the ticket he gave her and walked out, feeling that she had been badly worsted, because she had no heart for this sort of bartering. It dawned upon her that there were worse humiliations than accepting money from one's husband, and yet— She conquered the weakness which sprang fiercely up in her, which made her heart cry in anguish for Ned, which made her long to desert all this hideous struggle and fly to his sheltering arms. No; she must fight to the end!

But what was she to do next? A sign at the foot of a dark, narrow stairway caught her eye:

"Girls Wanted to Sew Pants."

Labor. Honest toil. Slight as might be the pay, was it not better, after all, than the occupations in which she had suffered so much? Timorously June climbed the stairs, stopping at the first landing for a recurrence of that slight cough which had come upon her.

An impossibly dirty man stood behind a long table on which were piled huge bundles tied in rough paper.

"Well?" he said gruffly.

"I would like to sew some pants, if you please," said June modestly.

"What?" The man looked at her, astounded. "You want to sew pants?"

"Yes, sir," returned June.

The man shrugged his shoulders.

"You go over to that woman there, and she'll show you what's to be done and how much deposit to pay." He indicated another table.

When June went down the narrow stairs she carried as heavy a bundle as she could conveniently lift, and her scanty store of money was reduced to a very small margin. Little as it was, however, she had yet to make a purchase. In the first little store she bought an inexpensive little plain black dress. She had less than a dollar when she stopped before a building to which she had been directed. On the doorpost of the stairway was a sign, "Rooms to Let."

June here engaged a mean little hall bedroom from a dumpy landlady.

Down Broadway tore the black curtained limousine, the observed of all

observers, for still attached to his cravat and clamped to the tires so stiffly that he felt he would have to be pried off was the well known and justly famous private detective, Bill Wolf, faithful in spite of himself. Not more than two blocks behind came the family car, with June's handsome collie on the seat beside Jerry, June's father sterner and June's mother gentler and more quiet, the deserted groom gritting his teeth and clinching his fists as the black curtained limousine, with its bit of filmy gauze fluttering at the door, constantly kept just before them like a tantalizing will-o'-the-wisp.

In the boarding house of Mrs. Russel there was a frantic running to and fro and up and down stairs. Every room in the house was searched, and at last Orin Cunningham thought to investigate why one of the windows in the room which had been provided for June seemed darker behind its heavy hangings than the others. He found the fire shutters closed and opened them, revealing the stalwart Christian frozenly waiting on the isolated balcony to be told his further share in June's trick. The young man and the three girls laughed.

June was gone, and Gilbert Blye turned and walked down the stairs.

There was a ring at the doorbell. A messenger boy, and he carried a bundle. A stealthy figure slipped forward into the hall.

"No answer," said the boy as he delivered the bundle.

"I ain't supposed to tell."

Orin Cunningham at a signal from Blye took the bundle and passed it to Mrs. Russel. She tore it open and drew forth before the revelers who had gathered in her parlor the raiment in which they had last seen the beautiful June. Orin Cunningham stooped down, with an oath, and picked up something which had fallen to the floor. The string of pearls! He stamped upon the floor in rage.

"Stop that messenger boy!" came the cold, hard tones of Gilbert Blye.

"Where did you get this bundle?" demanded Orin Cunningham.

The boy hitched his trousers.

"I ain't supposed to tell."

"How much did you get for not telling?" demanded Mrs. Russel.

"All she had—70 cents."

"Ah!" Cunningham thrust his hands in his pockets. Then he flushed as he turned to Gilbert Blye.

Blye scowled, and there was a flash of temper on his dark, handsome face as he thrust some money into the hand of Cunningham.

"Here's $2," said Orin. "Now, where did you get this bundle?"

"Tellin's always worth more than not tellin'," he sagely observed and jerked his call slip from his pocket. "There's the address."

Gilbert Blye, casting a glance at the slip, donned his hat and coat, opened the door and strode out on the steps. The stealthy figure which had crept along the hall suddenly darted out of the door after the messenger boy and hurried up the street with him. It was Marie.

Down the street there whizzed the black curtained limousine. Blye hurried out to it as it stopped and, with blazing impatience, called, "Come on!"

Cunningham dashed from the house and jumped into the limousine, while Blye gave swift directions to his driver. He, too, hopped in and shut the door and threw up the side curtains, revealing the car empty except for himself and Cunningham. The women in the door called something in shrill excitement as the car rushed away, but Scatti paid no attention, and the well known and justly famous private detective, Bill Wolf, groaned.

Around the corner dashed the family car of the Moores, and Ned Warner, leaning tensely forward, gritted his teeth and clinched his fists as the black curtained limousine once more rounded a corner.

The dumpy landlady knocked at the door of June's little bedroom and stopped in profound astonishment when she entered. At the rickety table sat her new lodger in a plain, cheap black dress, bent earnestly forward. She was sewing pants!

"Why, I hardly knew you," said the landlady, looking around the room. She waddled to the door of the flimsy wardrobe and peered in. It was empty. "Where's them fine clothes you had?"

"They did not belong to me," June said simply. "I sent them away."

"Oh, you did! What about the necklace?"

"That was a gift which I could not accept," and June's eyes dropped. "I sent it away also."

"Oh, you did!" She cleared her throat and looked at the stack of pants and at the delicate fingers which were laboriously pushing the needle through the coarse cloth. "By the way, I forgot to get any rent from you. I always get a week in advance."

June smiled wanly and shook her head. "I am sorry," she said. "I have no money."

"What!" The dumpy landlady jumped to her feet. She was breathing so hard that she wheezed. "No money! Young lady, you'll have to get out!"

"Oh, no!" pleaded June. "Please!"

She turned for one last word of appeal, but the landlady's pitiless arm was outstretched.

LINDSEY E. WOOLLEY DIES IN 42D YEAR

Former Well Known Resident Succumbs to a Long Illness.

Lindsey E. Woolley, a former well known resident of this city, died yesterday at his home, 256 Westfield avenue, Elizabeth, after an illness of three weeks of a complication of diseases. Mr. Woolley was born at Manasquan forty-two years ago, but made his home in Plainfield for twenty years, removing from here to Elizabeth about a year and a half ago. He was manager for the E. R. Lanthrop Company, dealers in mechanical rubber goods, New York city. He was a member of Trinity Reformed church and he and the members of his family were active in the work while residing locally.

Mr. Woolley leaves a widow, Mrs. Stella Woolley, who is the daughter of the late Isaac VanMiddlesworth, his mother, Mrs. Louise Woolley; one daughter, Mrs. Ray F. Ingram; three sisters, Miss Emma Woolley, Mrs. E. Dobson and Mrs. Elizabeth Todd, of Dunellen, and one brother, Roy Woolley, of Alberta, Canada. The funeral will be held at his late home tomorrow afternoon at 2:30.

MISS MARY A. EVERETT LAID TO REST AT HILLSIDE

The funeral of Mrs. Mary A. Everett, whose death occurred last Thursday in her 93rd year, was held yesterday afternoon at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Mary E. Bolsterli, of Fairview avenue. Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong was the officiating clergyman and there were many relatives and friends in attendance. During the service Miss Etta Raybert, rendered a solo "Safe in the Arms of Jesus." The flowers were unusually numerous and handsome as Mrs. Everett was a great favorite with young and old throughout the city and borough.

Burial was made in Hillside cemetery and at the grave Dr. Strong was assisted by Rev. E. C. Conover, of the Temple Baptist church. The pall bearers were the following six grandsons: Fred Everett, Frank Everett and W. R. Fraser, of Orange; Charles Everett, of Brooklyn, and Robert Campbell and William Campbell, of Newark.

A. W. DUNNING HOST AT FIVE HUNDRED PARTY

A. W. Dunning, of Mountain avenue, the borough, entertained a number of friends at a "500" party at his home last night. There were sixteen present, making four tables. The ladies' prize went to Miss Betty Ralston, while Orlando Lounsbury took first honors for the men. A musical program was enjoyed, and refreshments were served during the evening.

Those present were the Misses Martha Cole, of Pottsville, Pa., Leontine Huntsman, Claire Britton, Katie Sill, Ruth Gunton, Betty Ralston and Elsa Cook, of this city, and Kenneth Howell and Athol Neuman, of East Orange, and Jack Brittoa, E. F. Lowe, Orlando Lounsbury, Fred Conlin, A. W. Dunning, F. O. Dunning and Frank Dunning.

FIRST MEN'S MEETING TO BE HELD NEXT SUNDAY

Everything points to a large and enthusiastic men's meeting to be held in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium on Sunday, April 11, in charge of enlisted men of the U. S. Navy. These men come from Brooklyn Navy Yard Young Men's Christian Association, and included in the party will be one of the Association secretaries who was with the landing force of marines at Vera Cruz at the time these men were sent ashore at the beginning of the present Mexican trouble.

The Dutch Arms Concert Band will have a part in the musical program and the singing will be led by F. T. Carter, Jr. The doors will be open at 3:15 and the song service will begin at 3:45. All men over 16 are cordially invited to attend.

LIFE insurance is a subject that should be discussed frequently and freely in the family circle.

The money to pay for it comes out of the "family treasury" and all the family treasurers should understand it thoroughly.

And life insurance is quite easy to understand.

Everybody is invited to visit the Prudential Exhibit on Life Insurance and Public Welfare, Palace of Mines and Metallurgy, Panama-Pacific Exposition, San Francisco.

ENOCH ARDEN

We show in addition to these big features each day a program of other good comedies and dramas.

If you want to see the best productions in motion pictures and pictures that are entertaining, we would suggest if you are not a patron of this theatre to visit us just once. We are confident you will return soon.

OUR PRICE OF ADMISSION WITHIN REACH OF ALL.

No higher than an ordinary motion picture theatre.

Consider too, when selecting this theatre, how much more comfortable it is to set in a place that you know is clean, sanitary with good ventilation, where the surroundings are one of refinement.

Where the music is played to suit every mood. All these things are offered to you at this theatre.

It is without question the most up-to-date theatre in this section.

The furnishings compare with any New York Playhouse.

We are securing each day hundreds of patrons who have never visited a motion picture theatre in Plainfield before.

Why? Because we offer a class of entertainment that is of the highest standard.

We present the same big productions at our small price of admission that you have to pay 25c and 50c in New York and other large cities to see.

That is why the U. S. Astor theatre is fast becoming the theatre that all are selecting for their amusement.

We have big things coming each week.

Soon we will present

THERE ARE TWO KINDS OF ASSUREDS.

The kind that take out insurance when the spirit moves them, without considering their policy, the company its in, or the agent. And the other kind that realize the necessity and importance of insurance, who read over their policy and make sure it covers them properly, satisfy themselves that the company is sound and represented by a reliable agent.

The first kind is a hit-or-miss affair, while the other one is bound to obtain a satisfactory settlement when a loss occurs.

CHARMING TEA AND EXHIBITION

Annual Affair of Needlework Guild Held at Mrs. Percy H. Stewart's Home.

SHOW 2,500 GARMENTS

Interesting Illustrated Talk on Dr. Grenfell's Work in Labrador Given by Dr. James Wiltsie, a Co-Worker.

The annual exhibition and tea of the Plainfield section of the American Labrador branch of the Needlework Guild was held at the home of Mrs. Percy H. Stewart, on West Eighth street, who is president of the Plainfield branch, yeserday afternoon. Fully two hundred women viewed the articles of apparel made by the respective groups under the supervision of the following directors: Mrs. B. van D. Hedges, Mrs. Richard Boardman, Miss Margaret Mead, Miss Helen Harman, Mrs. Maybury B. Mellor, Mrs. S. D. Lounsbury, Mrs. John S. Zelie, Mrs. Duncan W. Taylor, Mrs. A. A. Tilney, Mrs. William M. Wherry, Jr., Mrs. Anna Stewart, Mrs. William G. Cooke, Mrs. Daniel F. Ginna, Mrs. John P. Stevens, Mrs. C. Boardman Tyler, Mrs. Ernest R. Ackerman, Mrs. F. W. French, Mrs. Henry C. White, Mrs. T. M. Day, Jr., Mrs. Celia Y. Holbrook, Bound Brook; Mrs. W. A. Conner, Miss Eva Browne, Mrs. Francis deL. Hyde, Miss Katherine A. Sargent, Miss Helen N. Lowden, New York city; Miss Edith H. Smalley, Mrs. W. L. Lockwood, Miss Priscilla W. Fraker and Mrs. Alfred F. H. Streuli. Each director is required to contribute two or more articles from each member of her group.

The Plainfield section was organized four years ago and the wonderful progress of the organization has been evidenced in the number of articles completed each year. Four years ago 500 garments were made while this year the branch has a total of 2,500 garments, an increase of approximate'y 1,200 over last year. The articles will shortly be sent to Dr. W. T. Grenfell's mission in Labrador for distribution among the na-

JUDGE READ "RIOT ACT" TO WOULD-BE ASSAILANT

Exhibiting an entire change of temperament, and pleading for mercy, William Kates, of 341 Leland avenue, the big negro who yesterday morning sought to assault City Judge William G. DeMeza because the latter had sent a "pal" of his to the county jail, was arraigned in the city court this morning, and had the luckiest escape of his career when the magistrate let him go with a suspended sentence. While he surprised many of the horde of spectators whoc rowded the courtroom to get a glimpse at the colored champion, the city judge qualified his action in the following words:

"Kates, you've got to realize that you can't come to the city court and make demands. You were a victim of an insane desire to 'clean up' on the police department, and your actions were disgraceful. In some other police departments you would have received treatment that would have prevented you from appearing in court the next morning. You would have landed in the hospital.

"The police department or myself do not want to appear vindictive, but we have got to enforce the law, and you had no right to demand the release of a drunken bum in the disorderly fashion you elected.

"I am not going to send you to jail this morning. My leniency is inspired by your previous good record and the fact that you have a wife and six children. Otherwise I would have given you the limit."

With remorse written all over his face, Kates replied in a faltering tone: "I'se have thought it all over, Judge, and I'se sorry."

His words were apparently sincere, and both Chief Kiely and Judge DeMeza, after court, voiced opinions to the effect that he was the victim of a temporary mania, and that he would cause no further trouble. He was made to apologize to Sergeant Higgins and Chief Kiely. V. W. Nash, Jr., represented Kates in court.

DELIGHTFUL DANCE AT THE PARK CLUB

Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Holstein Entertain in Honor of Their Son and Daughter.

Mr. and Mrs. George M. Holstein, of Watchung avenue, gave a delightful Easter dance at the Park Club last night for their daughter and son, Miss Abby Holstein and Meade Holstein, the latter being home from Princeton University for the holiday season. There were about two hundred guests at the dance, mostly all young people and including a number of students from Princeton. There were also a number of guests from New York.

Prior to the dance, Mr. and Mrs. Holstein gave a dinner at their home for some of the intimate friends of their daughter and son. The decorations at the Park Club were unusually attractive comprising spring flowers and tulips, arranged about the stage and throughout the large auditorium.

The music for dancing, which began about 9 o'clock, was furnished by VanEps Brothers, the program comprising all the latest and most popular selections. They were generous in responding to encores. The dancing continued until an early hour this morning.

A number of Mr. Holstein college friends remained in Plainfield over night as guests of their host, returning to Princeton today. The whole affair was one of the most pleasing of the Eastertide season.

ITALIANS FLOCK TO NORTH PLAINFIELD

Influx of the Foreign Element Due to Work on Sewer Trenches

So notable has been the influx of foreigners into the borough the past two weeks that the Councilmanic police board has deemed it advisable to put on an extra marshal to do night duty and transfer the oldest night marshal in the point of service to a day shift. Every effort is being made to police the foreign colonies in proper fashion and the precaution is being taken to prevent any possible disturbance.

Every night a group of foreigners, mostly Italians, are seen making their way down Somerset street in the direction of the various small colonies near the mountains. Attention has been directed to them by their novel baggage carrying schemes and the picturesque figure they represent tugging their worldly belongings through the streets on their heads.

A large number of Italians have migrated to North Plainfield for the express purpose of securing labor as ditch-diggers for the sewer contractors. While some come directly here from the boat a larger portion of them have claimed residence heretofore in Paterson and New York. Their knowledge of the English language is only meagre and they have considerable trouble in making their needs known in the borough. The fact that they have not developed a more fluent conversation in English is due to their custom of settling in colonies, working in squads of their own race and dealing with Italian merchants. The few retail stands conducted by the sons of "sunny Italy" in the borough are booming, due to the increase in trade occasioned by the rising foreign population.

While the Italians as a class are law-abiding the element that has come to North Plainfield is of the poorer calibre and has been used to more freedom than it will probably be accorded in the municipality across the brook. For this reason the Council, at its meeting Monday night, decided to engage an extra marshal to aid in enforcing the ordinances which prevail there.

REPORT 63 CASES OF COMMUNICABLE DISEASES

Sixty-three cases of communicable diseases were reported in this city at the monthly meeting of the Plainfield Board of Health held in the Board offices last night. Forty diphtheria cultures were examined during the month, 33 of which were negative and seven questionable. Thirteen specimens of tuberculosis were examined, all being negative.

A total of 1146 inspections were made by the inspector during the month and David Hand was granted a permit to dump ashes between Leland avenue and Terrill road. During the month of March there were 42 births, 34 deaths and 15 marriages.

HOPE TO RAISE $620 FOR BELGIAN RELIEF

This Would Provide Two Full Shipments of Condensed Milk.

The Plainfield Belgian Relief Committee is in hopes that the proceeds from the amateur presentation of Bernard Shaw's "Man of Destiny" and Barrie's "Twelve Pound Look," at the Plainfield Theatre, on Thursday night, April 15, will be sufficient to send two full shipments of condensed milk to Belgium.

This would mean $620 above expenses, and would demand a full house. It would result in supplying 9,600 cans of condensed milk, and since it is estimated that one dollar's worth of condensed mill will keep an average baby alive a month, it would mean that 620 babies, that would almost certainly die otherwise, would be carried through that period.

An erroneous impression is now common that the Belgians have been so well taken care of as to be out of all need by now. But the fact is, as stated by the Rockefeller Foundation recently, that so stupendous is the problem of supplying them that it has only been possible to fill the current needs without laying up a supply for the future. The need at this moment is therefore as great as ever.

The situation therefore is such that people purchasing a $2.50 ticket for these plays may consnder that half of that amount goes directly to Belgian relief, and will save the life of a baby for almost forty days. The purchase of a $2 ticket would carry a baby through thirty days, and of a $1 ticket, fifteen days. In any case, the entire proceeds above expenses will go toward this purpose, being put into the hands of Mrs. Frederick W. Wallace, chairman of the local Belgian Relief Committee.

The rehearsals of these plays, whose casts include such well known amateurs as Mrs. Lemuel Serrell, Charles H. Lyman, Brown Rolston and Mrs. Maxwell Perkins, are being held practically every night. Tickets will be on sale at the Plainfield Theatre on Friday.

DESIGNS A MODEL APARTMENT HOUSE

Evarts Tracy Honored by the American Institute of Architects.

The New York Chapter of The American Institute of Architects has just conferred a high honor in its award, the fifth of the year 1914, on Evarts Tracy, the well known architect, the designer, and Vincent Astor, the owner of the model apartment house on West Forty-fifth street, New York. Mr. Astor has received a medal in recognition of the excellence in the exterior design of New York apartments completed within three years from the present date. A reproduction of the medal has been placed in the building.

The building was erected at a cost of $250,000 and contains 82 apartments, the majority of which have all been taken. The New York Chapter makes a thorough inspection of modern apartments and its awards are valued highly.

Mr. Astor is now in California, and Mr. Tracy while in the former's office in New York yesterday had the opportunity of speaking to Mr. Astor over the telephone. He said that the latter's voice was unusually distinct and he experienced no trouble in carrying on a conversation.

MRS. EDWARD STEURWALD HURT BY FALL FROM TRAIN

Mrs. Edward Steurwald, formerly of this city but now of Madison, is confined to her bed, as the result of an accident which befell her at Elizabeth Sunday, as she was returning from a visit with Plainfield friends. She was unable to leave the train at the Elizabeth station owing to the rush of oncoming passengers and with her niece, Miss Eleanor Carle, started to alight just as the train started to move. Miss Carle jumped in safety but her aunt was thrown violently to the ground sustaining severe hurts.

Mrs. Steurwald was given medical attention at Elizabeth and was afterward removed to her home at Madison where she is still under the care of a physician.

MR. AND MRS. REED RETURN.

Corporation Counsel and Mrs. Charles A. Reed, of this city, has returned home after spending a month at Holley Inn, Pinehurst, North Carolina.

QUESTION MERIT OF SENATE BILL

Councilman Milne, of North Plainfield, Asks Committee to Investigate.

WHAT IS PROVIDED?

Vital Points of Proposed Measure Not Clear in the Minds of Borough Voters, According to Mr. Milne.

With a view to gaining information concerning the nature of Senate bill No. 286, referring to the consolidation of municipalities, Councilman Alexander Milne, of the North Plainfield Council, introduced a resolution at the April meeting asking that the committee on laws, ordinances and taxation be instructed to secure from the legislators at Trenton certain data on the topic that will be useful to borough voters. His suggestion was favorably received, and an investigation is now under way.

The Board of Trade, at its meeting last night, decided to send three representatives to Trenton next Monday afternoon to make application for a public hearing on the same proposition, and it was learned this morning that efforts are being made to induce the civic organization to postpone its trip until such time as the Council reports may be properly filed. The data will be turned over to the North Plainfield governing body Tuesday night, and in the event of the Board of Trade meeting being held Monday afternoon in Trenton, serious complications might develop.

In the opinion of Councilman Milne the bill in its present form does not provide for the legislation promised North Plainfield voters at the public hearings held last September, and on the strength of which they cast a majority ballot in favor of consolidating with Plainfield. When interviewed by a Daily Press reporter this morning Mr. Milne laid special emphasis on the point that those fostering the consolidation movement had made in promising that a mutual commission, composed of a representation from each side of the brook, would adjust civic interests and have a hand in the legislation of the combined municipality. He stated that North Plainfield voters, when they balloted at the special election last September, did so believing that consolidation would result differently from what it would if enacted under the provisions of the present Senate bill.

According to Mr. Milne the wrong impression has been sent out, and the Council is bent on "putting the voters right" and ascertaining the true merit of bill No. 286.

THE DANSANT PROMISES TO BE A GREAT SUCCESS

One of the most attractive affairs of the Easter season is the dansant to be given Saturday afternoon at the Park Club by the Pine Mountain Association. Guests are invited to come in whatever costume they desire, and those who do not dance may enjoy the good music and sip tea, served by charming young women.

Tickets may be obtained at Randolph's, Armstrong's, Hall's and Hodge's drug stores, or from the following persons, who compose the committee: Miss Eva G. Browne, chairman; Miss Ethel Colton, Mrs. Allan Cowperthwaite, Miss Helen Harman, Miss Helen Hyde, Miss Helen Joy, Miss Lillian King, Miss Margaret Mead, Miss Elizabeth McGee, Mrs. H. C. McMillen and Mrs. Daniel Runkle.

MISS HURLEY IS GIVEN BIRTHDAY SURPRISE PARTY

A pleasant surprise party was tendered Miss Anna Hurley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Hurley, of Belmont avenue, yesterday afternoon in honor of her eighth birthday anniversary. The home was prettily decorated, the dining room being in pink and white, while the hall was in green. The table decoration was appropriate for Easter, the centrepiece being a large birthday cake with eight white bunnies and eight pink lighted candles on it.

Each guest received a favor, it being a fancy Easter egg. Those present were Theresa Leivers, Harriet Coles, Laura Rose, Ethel Ollsen, Eva Frank, Everett Leivers, Frances and Anna Hurley. Mrs. Alfred Seidel assisted Mrs. Hurley in entertaining the children. Late in the afternoon refreshments were served.

TEMPERATURE REPORT.

The temperature report from The State Trust Company today is as follows: 9 a. m., 51 degrees; 11 a. m., 55 degrees; 1 p. m., 56 degrees.

NEWCORN PRESIDENT OF BOARD OF TRADE

Elected Last Night to Succeed William Jeffery, Who Resigned at That Time.

Members of the local Board of Trade, at their April meeting in the Exempt Firemen's Hall last night, elected William Newcorn president, to serve during the unexpired term of William Jeffery, whose resignation was received last night. The retiring head has been affiliated with the civic organization for a number of years, and has been instrumental in promoting many measures for the welfare of the municipality. In his resignation he stated that removal from the city was the cause for the action, he having recently taken up permanent residence in Berkeley Heights. It came as a decided surprise, no inkling of the step on Mr. Jeffrey's part having reached the members beforehand.

Mr. Newcorn has been active in the work of the Board for a number of years, and his election was an unusually popular one. He is well versed on all matters of civic interest, and prior to his election as president was vice-president and a member of the board of counsellors of the organization.

In accepting the honor the new head took occasion to express his views concerning the rightful disposition of the consolidation question, and reviewed the stand taken by the borough in the issue. He outlined the points involved in Senate bill No. 286, referring to the consolidation of two municipalities, and said that this piece of legislation was pertinent to the interests of both Plainfield and North Plainfield.

Acting on Mr. Newcorn's suggestion, the Board decided to send a representative committee to Trenton next Monday afternoon to appear before the Senate and ask that a special hearing be held on the bill. John A. Gaffney, A. E. Force and Mr. Newcorn will serve on this committee.

WANT THOROUGHFARE PUT IN BETTER SHAPE

East End Civic Association Making Inquiry Into City's Rights.

Following up the agitation started by the East End Civic Association for the paving of a portion of East Second street along the Main Line trolley line, Willard W. James, chairman of that organization's street committee, made an investigation of title records in the county surrogate's office last week and issued a report of his findings at the meeting of the body last night. He found certain records, dated 1899, granting to the Plainfield Street Railway Company, a simple right-of-way conditioned in the grant upon a further grant by owners of property along the entire strip, eighty feet wide, including that on which the railway has the right-of-way, to the city as a public street. Although the Common Council has never, by formal resolution, accepted the street, a sewer has been constructed through it and it is the opinion of the taxpayers that it should be put in a condition to insure safe travel.

The same committee reported that the Council had authorized the laying of crosswalks and sidewalks on Leland avenue, George street and North avenue, between Leland and Netherwood avenues.

The chairman of the school committee reported that he was attending the meetings of the Board of Education, and watching to see that the interests of the section are cared for. The chairman of the fire and police committee reported being unofficially informed that police lines are being extended east of Leland avenue, and that he was keeping in touch with the matter.

A considerable discussion of the difficulties arising from irregular trolley service was followed by a resolution asking the Public Service to run extra cars to Scotch Plains on half the present headway. Captain Peterson reported that the Freeholders are considering how to take care of the streams at North and Leland avenues and that the matter is now in the hands of the county and city engineers.

The special subject of the meeting was then taken up, and a series of lantern slides exhibited, showing what may be done to improve the appearance of vacant lots, back yards, division fences, etc., by cleaning up and planting simple flowers and vines. This was presented, not merely from the aesthetic standpoint, but as a commercial asset, increasing the attractiveness and the selling value of properyt.

FEDERAL JURY CALLS LOCAL WITNESSES

City Judge DeMeza and Former District Court Judge Wm. Newcorn Examined.

Two more Plainfielders, City Judge William G. DeMeza and former District Court Judge William Newcorn, have been added to the list of witnesses in the Federal Grand Jury's inquiry into the honesty of Rae Tanzer's $50,000 breach of promise suit against James W. Osborne, lawyer. They were examined yesterday concerning consultations they have had with William T. Kitchen, proprietor of Hotel Kensington, who is also a government witness.

Judges DeMeza and Newcorn advised Mr. Kitchen when David Slade, former attorney for Miss Tanzer attempted to get a copy of the registry. The girl registered at the local hostelry with a man alleged at first to have been James W. Osborne, but now, according to the girls' amended story, known to have been Oliver Osborne.

Frank D. Safford, former clerk in Hotel Kensington, who was held Monday in $12,000 bail because of his identification of James W. Osborne as Miss Tanzer's escort when she stopped in Plainfield, has asked for a hearing before the Grand Jury. He has offered to sign a waiver of immunity and it is thought that United States Attorney Marshall will advise the Grand Jury to accept the offer.

DOVER ELKS' SHOW PROVES A WONDER

Delegation From Plainfield Lodge Enthusaistic in Its Praises.

Twenty-five members of Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, B. P. O. E., formed a theatre party, which witnessed the annual musical comedy and modern minstrelsy production of Dover Lodge, No. 762, in Baker's Theatre, Dover, last night, which is to be repeated tonight. The trip was made overland by automobile, and every member of the delegation returned home enthusiastic in his praise of the affair. The production was elaborately staged and handsomely costumed, as contrary to the standards in Plainfield, the Dover show include young women in the company. Everything passed off without the slightest hitch, and it was hard for the local men to believe that the offering was strictly the work of amateurs.

Brother "Pete" Woodhull was the versatile producer who arranged the show and took an active part in it. Big hits were also made by "Sheriff" William Hosking, "Sheriff" Whit Gillen, "Doc" James, Howard Custard, "Fluff" Struble, Miss Lucy Cox, Miss Esther Tully and Miss Gretta Kelsey, all of whom are well known in this city. In the eyes of the Plainfielders, Miss Kelsey, who is only seventeen years old, proved a revelation, not only singing like a veteran actress, but dancing and whistling as well.

The local party was entertained at the Dover Elks' clubhouse after the entertainment, and returned to Plainfield at 5 o'clock this morning, declaring the reception they received was the best of the many the Doverites have given them. The party was arranged by V. W. Nash, Jr., and Thomas M. Muir.

The Dover boys will visit the Plainfield show on the first night of its presentation on April 28, a custom they have observed for several years.

"CRYING NEED OF A SIMPLER MOTIVE POWER"

J. B. Tygard, of South avenue, lectured before the heads of Engineering societies at a meeting held in New York last night on the "Crying Need of a Simpler Motive Power," explaining in detail his recent invention which is being put on the market by the firm of L. W. Randolph, Inc.

Following the talk the society voted unanimous / to place the local man's name upon the General Education Committee's staff of lecturers for the State of New York.

ST. MARY'S SOCIAL CLUB HAS DIVERSIFIED AFFAIR

The recently organized St. Mary's Social Club held its first informal social in T. A. B. Hall last night in the form of a musical, dance and program of athletic games. Squier's orchestra furnished music.

The musical portion of the program included the following numbers: Duet, "Does She Ever Think of Me," the Misses Margaret McCarthy and Mary Donnelly; solos, "Mother Machree" and "Spark of Love Still Burning," by Miss Henrietta Graniery. The chorus was composed of the following young women: The Misses Mary Donnelly, May MacAfee, Helen Graniery, Mary Harrington, Florence Hogan, Annie Ellis, Tessie Mahoney, Agnes Mahoney, Margaret McCarthy and Molly Traynor. Miss Jennie Higgins was the accompanist throughout the evening.

The athletic games included potato races, sack races, egg races, blank races and similar indoor sports, prizes being awarded the winner of each. These were taken by Hugh McDonald, William Boyle, Thomas Griffenn and James Cullen. Refreshments were served at a late hour.

The affair was in charge of a committee composed of Miss Mary Donnelly, chairman; the Misses Margaret McCarthy, Katherine Howe, Emma Sullivan, Catherine McCauley, Theresa Mahoney, Mary Harrington, Agnes Mahoney, Molly Traynor, Mary Hepner, Florence Hogan, Annie Ellis, May McAfee, Jennie Higgins, Henrietta Graniery and Mrs. M. D. O'Keefe.

IN THE TOILS AGAIN.

Lotti Burnett, aged nineteen, and Emma Backer, aged eighteen, were arrested by Patrolman Roy Martin last night at the Central Railroad depot charged with loitering about the streets at a late hour. Arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court this morning the two girls were remanded until tomorrow for further examination. Both have given the police considerable trouble in the past and have been repeatedly warned to keep away from the city.

A. E. KENNEY RE-APPOINTED.

ASSETS OF THE BORO TOTAL $35,261.69

Audit of Accounts of Dunellen Show An Excellent Financial Condition.

The Carpenter Audit Company, of New York, which audited the books of Treasurer Isaac J. Stites and opened up a set of double entry books, submitted its report at the monthly meeting of the Mayor and Common Council this week. The company certified the books and account of Treasurer Stites to be correct and submitted a complete statement of the financial condition of the borough. The general balance sheet, showing the borough to have an excess in assets over liabilities of $35,261.69, will undoubtedly be of interest to the boroughites. It is as follows:

ASSETS.

Cash on deposit in bank—Tax Collector's account, $2,184.29; borough treasurer, general, $29.13; borough treasurer, coll. sewer, $55,257.72; borough treasurer, joint sewer, $16,076.73; total, $73,541.87.

Accounts Receivable—Taxes unpaid, 1905-1913, $263.16; taxes unpaid, 1914, $11,215.41; due from property-holders on account sidewalk improvements, $588.09, total, $12,066.66.

Real Estate—Borough Hall property, $3,000; Borough Park, $5,000; Whittier School property, $20,000; Lincoln School property, $30,000; total, $58,000.

Borough Hall Property—Borough Hall equipment, $421.50; fire department equipment, $1,312.50; street department equipment, $300; police department equipment, $110; total, $2,144.

Deferred Assets—Coll. sewerage expenditures, $1,080; joint sewerage expenditures, $4,264.47; total $5,344.47.

Total assets, $151,097.

LIABILITIES.

Notes payable, $9,475.

Accrued Interest—On notes payable, $93.09; on collecting sewerage bonds, $687.50; on joint sewerage bonds, $225; on Whittier School bonds, $112.50; on Lincoln School bonds, $1,242.22; total, $2,360.31.

Library appropriation, $500.

Bonded Debt—Whittier School bonds, $2,500; Lincoln School bonds, $2,600; collecting sewerage bonds, $55,000; joint sewerage bonds, $20,000; total $103,500.

Total liabilities, $115,835.31; excess in assets over liabilities $35,261.69; total $151,097.

Bills aggreating $5,300.59 were ordered paid it found correct. $3,967.80 of this total is chargeable to the collecting sewerage system; $341.33 to joint sewerage and $98.38 to advertising relative to construction of the three drainage systems.

The treasurer's report for the month ending March 31, was as follows: Receipts—balance last report, $781.65; sundries $2.18; recorder's fines, $24.00; sidewalks, $26.49; 1914 tax and interest, $286; making a total of $1,121.20. Disburzements—Warrants honored, $517.67. Balance, $603.53.

Upon the bids for the construction of the three drainage systems being tabulated by Borough Engineer Churchill yesterday it was found that the Garafano Construction Company, of Summit, with a bid of $5,447.85, was the lowest bidder for the contract of constructing the Madison avenue system while E. W. Chamberlain, of Westfield, was the highest, with a bid of $8,655.75. The bid of H. K. Corbin & Company, the sanitary sewerage contractor, was $6,519.05. Camillo Massa, of Cranford, with a bid of $5,308.35, was the lowest for the North avenue work. The Sanitary Canstruction Co., of Paterson, was high with a bid of $9,563.50. H. K. Corbin & Co. bid $7,092.75.

The lowest bidder for the Front street system was T. Foster Callahan, of Elizabeth, with a bid of $933.90. The highest bidder was Pasquale Mauriello, of Orange, who bid $1,824.25. The bid of H. K. Corbin & Co. was $936.50.

If the bids of the lowest bidders are accepted the total cost of constructing the three systems will be $11,690.10, plus advertising and engineering expenses.

The petitioners for the systems in their petitions stated that they were willing to bear 80 per cent. of the cost and this per cent. will probably be satisfactory to the commissioners to be appointed by the Council. Those being effected by the work will probably have five years in which to pay for their share, the borough financing the work by selling improvement certificates. The interest on these certificates will be paid by the property holders benefitted by the improvement.

REV. H. L. POLAN IS INVITED TO RETURN

Sixty guests enjoyed the annual men's supper in the Secenth-day Baptist church Saturday evening. The supper was prepared by the men, who performed all the work. After the supper the annual meeting of the church was held, Rev. H. L. Polan, the pastor of the church, was invited to return and the invitation was accepted with a few appropriate remarks. A. E. Curtis was re-elected trustee and William Ryno was elected sexton.

Following the transaction of business an entertaining program was given. Miss Bernice Rogers recited two pieces and a male quartet composed of Rev. H. L. Polan, Frank Burdick and Leslie Randolph rendered several selections.

ARRESTED AGAIN.

For the second time in as many weeks, Tillie Walker, colored, was arrested Monday evening by Marshal I. V. Smalley for being drunk and disorderly. When arraigned before Recorder David S. The Criterion Quartet will render a few selections at the annual supper of the P. O. S. of A. to be held in W. G. Holton Hall tomorrow evening.

ENTERTAIN CARD CLUB.

Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Hunt, of Lincoln avenue, entertained the R. H. Card Club Friday evening. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Lester Nelson and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kelly, of New Market, and Miss Eva Dorflinger and J. Perry, of Plainfield. The next meeting of the club will be held at Miss Dorflinger's home.

ROBERT CAREY TO SPEAK.

Robert Cary, of Jersey City, will address the Board of Trade at its monthly meeting, to be held in Jr. O. U. A. M. Hall on Monday evening, April 19, on the commission form of government. He will endeavor to show in what way a commission form of government would be a benefit to Dunellen.

LICENSE IS GRANTED.

William H. Taylor was granted his liquor license by Judge Peter F. Daly seated at New Brunswick yesterday morning.

'Plains & Fanwood.

The many local friends of Mrs. Jane H. M. Sands, a resident of this place for several years, will regret to learn of her death last week in the Home for Incurables in New York, where she was taken early in the winter. She was eighty-four years of age, and the widow of Walter T. Sands, former district attorney of Westchester county, New York. She was also a cousin of General Wesley Merrett, who distinguished himself in the Spanish-American War. Two children, Walter E. and Louise Sands, survive her. Interment was made in White Plains, N. Y.

Miss A. M. Kyte, of Martine avenue, left yesterday for a trip to Detroit, Mich., where she will spend some time.

Miss Dorothy Becken, of North avenue, returned to her studies at Vassar College yesterday, after spending the Easter vacation with her parents.

Gordon Urner, a student at Cornell College, has resumed his studies, after spending the anual spring vacation with his mother, Mrs. Frank Urner, of Martine avenue.

S. Dana Townsend, principal of local schools, has returned to his home in the borough after spending several days with friends in New York.

Mrs. Robert Thomas entertained the members of the Tuesday Afternoon Literary Club at a very interesting meeting at her home on North avenue yesterday afternoon. The authors and their works and the customs of the Victorian age in English history was under discussion, and several excellent papers were contributed by several members.

The thirty members of the Belgian Society, who are working for the relief of the Belgian War sufferers will hold one of their regular meetings at the home of the Misses Kyte, on Martine avenue, tomorrow afternoon, to which anyone wishing to help the cause is invited. It is hoped to finish work on the articles to be packed in the sixth box.

The weekly meeting and drill of the local Boy Scouts was held in the lecture room of the Baptist church last night. Plans for the entertainments to be given in May, when it is hoped to raise sufficient funds to complete the uniform fund, are being completed. Following the meeting the Scouts listened to a very interesting lecture on "Compressed Air," which was the fourth of the series Captain S. B. Saunders has been giving the boys during the winter.

Maurice Mathews, son of the Rev. Franklin K. Mathews, former pastor of the Baptist church, is visiting friends in the 'Plains.

The Rev. J. Madison Hare will lead the prayer meeting in the Baptist church tonight.

A committee from the Board of Freeholders, including Burton P. Hall, of North avenue, has been appointed to investigate and report on the drainage conditions as they exist in three parts of the township, namely, Midway avenue and Terrill road, Jerusalem road and Wetfield road, and Park avenue and Westfield avenue. The first two are the result of complaints of residents, and the third was brought to the attention of the Board by the Township Committee.

In an effort to make an early start in the war on mosquitoes in this section a member of the Mosquito Commission has been in town for several days with the view of finding all the undeveloped land that needed draining, and then asking the owners to see that it is done.

The differences between the Fanwood Township Committee and the Westfield Council concerning the fire question in the Willow Grove section of the township, following the presentation of a bill for $100 by Westfield for the loss of hose in fighting a fire in Fanwood Township, has been amicably settled, and at recent meeting of the Council the Westfield department was notified that it was to answer fire alls in Fanwood Township. It is said by those connected with the affair that much of the unpleasantness was caused by the matter receiving undue publicity, which was misconstrued.

"Bill" Meyer has joined the ranks of the automobilists, and will shortly be followed by S. Dana Townsend.

Miss Elizabeth Babcock has been entertaining friends from Massachusetts for several days.

Mr. and Mrs. S. W. McAnneny entertained about twenty-five of their friends at their home onNorth avenue last night. Cards and dancing were enjoyed, with music as another pleasant feature. A collation was served at a late hour.

Louis Tuzo, of Terrill road, has again regained his health, following a puzzling illness of a month's duration, when he suffered a total loss of memory.

Dr. and Mrs. Maurice Hall, who have been spending the winter in New York, are expected to return to their home on South avenue for the summer some time next week.

Miss Alberta Hazelett, of Dover, N. J., is spending some time in the borough as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Louis J. Garda, of North avenue.

Considerable stir was caused in the borough yesterday afternoon when the five-year-old son of Calvin Betts, a new resident, living on LaGrande avenue, was found wandering on the tracks of the C. R. R. of N. J., at Fanwood, by Baggagemaster Edward Finney. He was crying, and when questioned said that the wanted to go to Plainfield. Chief Kiely, of the police department at that place, was called up and told who the child was, as Mrs. Betts had but a short time before notified him of the disappearance of her son. He had wandered away from the house to try and find his way to Plainfield, where he had taken a fancy to something he had seen when there with his parents.

WHAT IS ELECTRICITY?

It Seems to Be an Effect Produced by Energy on Matter.

It is a curious fact that although evidence of electricity in a primitive way was observed as long ago as the sixth century B. C. and its manifestation has become one of the greatest factors in our modern civilization, no one knows just what it is.

At different times it has been thought to be a form of matter, a thin, weightless fluid, a kind of force, a variety of motion and a disturbance in the ether—which is supposed to fill all space, including pores in most solid metals. Electricity is not something created by man. He has simply discovered ways of turning its manifestations to practical account.

From the time that Thales observed, centuries before the Christian era, that amber, after being rubbed by silk, had the property of attracting light bodies like bits of paper, discoveries of electric phenomena were made from time to time, but they were detached from a realization of the great possibilities brought to light in recent years.

Electricity becomes evident when rendered active by some molecular disturbance, such as friction, rupture or chemical action. Scientists today regard it as neither energy nor matter, but, like heat, light and sound, it is an effect produced by energy on matter.

It has been discovered that electricity is a self existent property, by which we are everywhere surrounded, and human as well as inanimate bodies can be charged with it. From this we can understand that many more remarkable discoveries of its application will be made.—Rocky Mountain News.

ARCTIC FROST BITES.

And the Popular Error That Rubbing With Snow Helps Them.

The idea that when your face or any other part of your body begins to freeze you must thaw it out with snow is declared to be a superstition by Vilhjalmur Stefansson. Few things could be more absurd, he says, and yet this is a superstition that has been carried with many an arctic explorer through long experience in the north. Tales are told of how even the application of snow failed to relieve the freezing, and these are taken as indications of the severity of the case instead of proof that, as a matter of fact, the snow only assists the freezing process. Any high school pupil, Stefansson says, could tell us offhand what would happen if liquid air were applied to a man's cheek or nose. Of course the part would freeze instantly. Snow has the same though less rapid effect.

The whole secret of dealing with frost bites of the face in arctic travel, he says, is to keep the hands warm and to run the warm hand over the face every few minutes to see if any part of it is frozen. Usually, also, one can keep oneself fairly well informed about the condition of one's face by wrinkling it and "making faces." If a spot of skin or cheek the size of a twenty-five cent piece becomes stiff one can always detect it by making a grimace. Then all one has to do is to take one's warm hand out of one's mitten and press it to the frozen spot for a moment until the whiteness and stiffness are gone.—Indianapolis News.

His Blasted Life.

John Grimes, a noted skinflint, residing in a rural district, became engaged to a lady of some means who chanced to be visiting in the neighborhood during the summer. Ascertaining his true character, as the weeks passed, she told him all was over between them, whereupon Grimes threatened to sue for breach of promise. Rather than incur publicity and notoriety his former sweetheart, through her attorney, offered to settle for $200. "Two hundred!" shrieked Grimes melodramatically. "Two hundred dollars for ruined hopes, a blasted life! Never, never!" "How much do you think would be about right?" asked the attorney. "Make it three hundred and it's a bargain," declared Grimes instantly.—Argonaut.

SCOTT TELLS OF INDIANS' ARREST

Reasons With Hostile Red Men Until They Give In.

HIS INFLUENCE WONDERFUL

Outlaws Treated as Wild Horses, Which False or Sudden Move Would Stampede Out of Sight—Renegades Accompany General Freely Without Handcuffs or Guards.

Accompanied by Lieutenant Colonel R. E. L. Michie of the general staff and Paul Randolph, my orderly, I left Washington on March 3 and heard at Chicago that the hostile Indians had run away westward, says Brigadier General Hugh L. Scott, chief of the general staff, U. S. A., writing from Thompsons, Utah.

We were prepared to follow them wherever they might go and expected they would go across the Grand canyon, Colorado. We left the railroad at Thompsons, Utah, on March 8, and after drives of thirty-eight, sixty-five and forty-eight miles, part of the time on sledges in snow three feet deep, we arrived at Bluff, Utah, the scene of the recent fight with the United States marshal's posse.

Bluff is the end of all communication. Taking Messrs. Creel and Jenkins of the Indian department and some Navajos who had been arrested at Beautiful mountain a year and a half ago and were strong indorsers of my integrity, we started west, down the San Juan river to Mexican Hat.

John Wetherell, after a ride of 100 miles, brought in a Ute Indian who came to his store at Kayenta, fifty miles south. From the Ute we found that the hostile Indians had taken all the Ute's Piutes with them to Navajo mountain, 120 miles west of Bluff, who, with the Piutes already there, numbered 200 in all.

Treated With Great Kindness.

All the Navajos had left in different directions. The Ute was carefully impressed with the importance of urging the hostiles to talk and was convinced that no trap would be set for them. He brought some in after four days, although he had to ride ninety miles to reach them. The others came after and had all arrived by the afternoon of the next day.

They were treated with the utmost kindness, as a wild horse which a false or sudden move would stampede out of sight would be treated. Assured of their safety and well fed, their condition and acts were carefully explained in conferences and interviews covering two days. No ultimatum was given, the door being left for further discussion.

I prepared to stay for a day, a week or a month until the time was ripe to put the question, "What are you going to do?" with certainty that my advice would be followed. The answer was, "We are going to do what you tell us."

"Very well. I tell you four, for whom the marshal has warrants, to go with me to the court at Salt Lake, and I leave in an hour."

Our success was considered a miracle at Bluff and places on the way north. It was the miracle always accomplished by reasoning with an Indian in a kindly, sympathetic way by any one who can gain his confidence and guide him with kind, steady firmness toward the right.

They came along freely without handcuffs or guards, curious about everything they saw and trustful that they were being taken care of.

KANSAS TO HONOR INDIAN.

Proposes Monument For William Walker, First Provisional Governor.

A bill has been passed by the senate of Kansas appropriating several hundred dollars for a monument to mark the grave of William Walker, a Wyandotte Indian, who was the first provisional governor of Kansas and was buried in Kansas City, Kan. There was considerable argument over the bill, and the venerable Senator L. P. King, who served in the Indian wars, gave a short speech in favor of the bill in the purest Sioux, although it was quite unintelligible to most present.

William Walker was chief of the Wyandotte tribe, which brought the first church and the first school to Kansas when it emigrated from Ohio to the mouth of the Kaw river in the thirties. When a large number of Indian traders, missionaries and Indians organized the provisional government of the then Nebraska territory they elected Walker the provisional governor. This territory included all of Kansas and Nebraska and parts of Oklahoma and Colorado. Walker served until the territorial government of Kansas was organized in 1854, when Samuel Reeder was appointed. Reeder was forced by the slavery exponents later to flee the country.

Walker also figured in the "American Notes" of Charles Dickens. Dickens met Walker in St. Louis and considered him a most remarkable man.

Ship Chased by Submarine.

Captain Whinster of the British steamer Parthenia, which arrived in Baltimore from Glasgow, reported that on March 11 when off the southeast coast of Ireland the Parthenia was chased for two hours by a German submarine.

Paris, 1915

In Her Day of Trial, Paris Sends Forth Her Supreme Fashion Message

She Creates Her Most Brilliant Models in Gowns, Costumes, Wraps, Millinery, to Retain the Sceptre of Fashion

These Models are to be Presented to the World for the First Time, in the Wanamaker Auditorium Beginning Tomorrow, Thursday, Afternoon at 2:30

"They may take away from us many things, but they shall not wrest from us the Sceptre of Fashion."

In the day of trial the real genius of a people arises to its highest point of triumph.

The genius of the French is their art.

The genius of Paris is largely its world leadership in fashion.

Paris, though stricken in body and mind and heart, today gives notice to the world that she WILL retain her supremacy in the realm of artistic fashion.

Paris herself is in mourning. She is wearing quiet colors and dressing simply. The Opera is closed. The races will open, if they open at all, only privately. Social functions exist only in the intimacy of the home—and then they are given over mainly to the care of the stricken soldiers and sorrowing families.

Yet shall Paris forego her art? Shall she fail in her duty as the Mistress of Fashion? Shall she forget that other countries and other peoples are not at war and that demand for the original, the novelty, the artistic, never dies? Shall Paris lay down her brush and her palette and roll up her canvasses? Shall she close her studios and her ateliers and smother her genius in her day of trial?

No, this is not the way of the French. It is not the way of any people of genius.

"Courts of Royalty are closed these days to fashionable functions," says Worth, "yet I create my most brilliant court gowns."

"The Opera is closed," says the Callot Soeurs, "yet we create the most exquisite fashions for the Opera."

"The races will not be run," say Paquin and Doucet, Beer and Lanvin, "yet we originate and produce race gowns and robes as charming as we know how to make them."

Monte Carlo, Longchamps, Vichy and other rendezvous of fashion are silent and solitary, yet in the French Fashion Exhibit at the Panama-Pacific Exposition, they are chosen as the proper artistic setting for the display of French genius.

Through this French Exhibit, to open later at San Francisco, Paris will speak to the world her supreme fashion message.

This message was to remain a secret for the present.

None of the American visitors, either personal or commercial, at the dressmakers' and milliners' openings in February, were privileged even to see the models fashioned for this Panama-Pacific exhibit.

Later, in March, we, too, were at first refused a view. Then the door opened a little. We were permitted to behold the wonderful models. But no, we could not buy them. "They are reserved," we were told. "We have entered into a treaty among ourselves not to duplicate these models."

Patiently we explained the vast area of our country. We showed that San Francisco is three thousand miles away from New York—as far as New York is away from Paris. We stated that although great crowds would go to the Exposition, not a woman in a thousand will see these supreme French fashions if they are shown only at San Francisco.

Finally the embargo was raised. The treaty was mutually repealed. And with the cooperation of M. Aine, President of the French Chambre Syndicale De La Couture Parisienne, the great dressmakers and milliners did us the honor to fashion with their own hands of the same materials, exact replicas of the gowns, wraps, costumes and hats created expressly for the Panama-Pacific French Exhibit.

Callot's models comprise such exquisite needlework that they could not be finished in time to make the steamer. They will arrive a week later and will be shown by themselves.

In this collective French Exhibit the notable absentee is Poiret. Poiret is in the trenches. His establishment is shut up tight. He is creating no models. Jean Worth and Jacques Worth are also under military orders, but the latter is permitted to spend half the day in his atelier. He is a soldier-dressmaker.

The other establishments—both of costumes and modes—are open and doing business.

Now, what are these new fashions of the day, in which the French have expressed their very soul?

They are original, of course. They are simple—genius never leaves the path of simplicity. They are brilliant, and they are quiet, just as the occasion requires.

The new silhouette is a small head, a straight line down to the waist, and another straight line from the waist out to the tips of the wide skirt. The waist is often veiled.

For the first time, in our memory, Paris dressmakers have agreed upon a certain fashion. This fashion is the wide short skirt.

Paris decrees that the skirt shall be short as well as wide, because a wide skirt, unless it is short, cannot be youthful. And the fashions of the day must express youth.

In this Panama-Pacific Exhibit, which we have the gracious privilege of reproducing in all its loveliness, Paris has expressed her own true self as she expresses it each season, more brilliantly than ever before to her own beloved people.

PRESS CENSORSHIP.

Press censorship in war time is both legitimate and necessary. The complaint against criticism of public officials or of pending legislation in times of peace is another mattter altogether. The cry of "lobby" brought against outspoken critics, as in the case of the opposition to the ship-purchase bill, is unreasonable and almost a confesion of unwillingness to acknowledge defeat. The committee which attempted to call to account alleged lobbying opponents of the Administration's ship-purchase plans has accomplished nothing, as was inevitable, and doubtless never expected to accomplish anything.

Free criticism both in and out of the press is sometimes abused, but even the worst abuse of the privilege is a thousand times better than its suppression, as Thomas Jefferson wisely contended more than a century ago, when he declared: "It is part of the price we pay for our liberty, which can not be guarded but by the freedom of the press, nor that limited without danger of losing it."

From Jefferson's day till now the popular attitude in the United States has never swerved from this view. Even labor unions, while endorsing the boycott as employed in other directions, have refused to countenance the placing of a newspaper on a boycott list as punishment for free expressions of opinion.

THE STATE POLICE BILL.

In commenting on the State Constabulary Bill, which has passed the Senate, and is before the House for consideration, the Newark Sunday Call sums up the true situation, when it says that the measure is a piece of political jobbery, framed up to give certain persons the control of a body of men who would do their dirty work at elections and, incidentally, make corporations safe when they wanted to bring on strike-breakers.

No union man in New Jersey would stand for the outrages possible under this measure for a moment. It would add heavily to State expenses at a time when economy is necessary, and its only excuse is that it might save some cowardly sheriffs or mayors the trouble of doing their sworn duty. A bill of the same kind was once proposed under Governor Abbett's administration, and those concerned suffered thereby. Those who attempt to place this yoke upon the public now will not be forgotten.

The State police scheme is an invasion of local and county government which no Jerseyman who knows his State's history should tolerate. The Assembly wil, we trust, defeat it, emphatically, and teach the Senate one more lesson in its duty.

Senator Moses E. Clapp, of Minnesota, who is making a tour of New Jersey in the interests of the Suffragists will speak in Plainfield next Monday night. The Senator has been in Plainfield before, having spoken at a political mass meeting in 1912, and he has a number of friends here. The Senator is thoroughly western, and in some ways suggests the Indian type. His home is in St. Paul, but he is a native of Indiana. Although sixty-four years old, he is an extremely able and vigorous talker. He has held political office for many years, and as a result has not been able to give much time to the practice of law, although at one time he was attorney general of Minnesota, which is an elective office. Senator Clapp is married, and is said to be a suffragist by strong conviction and experience.

Sheriff Otto's cherished plan to provide an instructor for the prisoners in the county jail has been put to sleep by the veto route, Governor Fielder having returned the bill to the House on Monday night. Mr. Otto's proposition met with the approval of many people, and it is too bad that the Governor did not approve it. In his veto message Mr. Fielder said: "It is carelessly drawn. In its title it speaks of a teacher and in the body it provides for an instructor for the inmates of county jails, but it fails to disclose what the prisoners are to be taught or instructed. As commitments to county jails are from thirty to ninety days and the ages of those committed run from 21 to 60 years, I cannot understand of what advantage an instructor is expected to be."

Governor Fielder's appointment of Thomas F. Martin, until Monday night the Democratic leader of the House of Assembly, to the office of Secretary of State, has met with State wide approval. Mr. Martin has proven, in his four years in the House, that he possess ability far above that of the average legislator, and his place will be a hard one to fill in the House. The corporations will probably have a regular field day from now until the Legislature adjourns. One of the first things that it is expected will be brought up will be the Morris Canal abandonment bills, which were defeated largely because of the determined fight made by Mr. Martin.

The Summit police seem to know how to cope with the strikers. Last night when a riot was threatened, after Sheriff Otto had arrested three of the rowdies, a crowd started to attack the police station and the mayor's house. The police called out the fire department, and when the strikers saw that they would get a bath if they started anything they decided that they were clean enough and went to their homes.

LADIES' AID GIVE A "WELCOME SOCIAL"

Rev. Dr. and Mrs. C. M. Anderson Honored by First M. E. Church.

Under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the First Methodist church a "welcome social" was given in honor of Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Charles M. Anderson in the Sunday school rooms last night. The event was to celebrate the beginning of the seventh year of Dr. Anderson's connection with the local church as pastor, and there were a large number present. Harry Gee made the address of welcome to the pastor and his wife, and Dr. Anderson responded to it.

Clifford A. Braider, organist of the church, had charge of the musical program, which was thoroughly enjoyed by all. The program included quartet selections, part songs and vocal solos by Miss Ethel Kinnaman and Edgar Cole. The rooms were appropriately decorated for the Easter season.

Refreshments were served at tables about the room, which were in charge of the following committees: Chocolate, Mrs. O. L. Jenkins and Mrs. James Peck; coffee table, Mrs. G. H. Whitney and Mrs. Lord; punch, Mrs. Francis Crawford, Mrs. Arthur Osmun, Miss E. L. French and Miss Helen Joy.

CATHOLICS TO BUILD A HANDSOME EDIFICE

St. John's Parish of Dunellen Approve Plans for $35,000 Church.

Following several years of preliminary effort, the members of St. John's Roman Catholic parish, of Dunellen, have definite plans in view for a new church. The present structure, a small brick affair, has been inadequate for long time, and the need of a new edifice has recently become absolute. With this fact fully realized, the parishioners have been securing the necessary finances, and are now prepared to proceed.

Architect Willis Enderbrock, of Trenton, has been delegated to draw the necessary plans for the church, as designed by Rev. Father Dunphy and the board of trustees. The estimated cost will be about $35,000. The dimensions of the edifice will be 50 feet wide and 115 feet in length. A spacious basement will be finished off as a place for social purposes and meeting room for church societies. The building will be located on the southwest corner of Washington avenue and First street, facing Washington avenue. The rectory will be either moved over nearer the present church or over on First street, in back of the location of the new church. The present church building will be used as a hall and a place for the boys of the church to play basketball, etc.

The decision to start actual work toward the new structure has been hastened by the large congregtion attending the masses for the past few weeks, especially last Sunday. The gatherings have frequently been so big that many persons were compelled to stand on the porch. The nucleus of the necessary building fund has been in the treasury for several years, and this amount will shortly be added to by the proceeds of large fair, arrangements for which are now being made.

LEWIS RANDOLPH CALLED BY DEATH

Native Plainfielder Passes Away at Son's Home in Rutherford.

Lewis C. F. Randolph, who was born on the well-known Randolph homestead on Park avenue and lived for many years at Mt. Pleasant, died yesterday at the home of his son, Herbert L. Randolph, of Rutherford, where he had lived for the past three years. Mr. Randolph was eighty-one years old and followed farming most of his life, his place at Mt. Pleasant being one of the best known in this vicinity. After retiring from active work he lived for a time with his brother, Nathan Randolph, of Belleview avenue, and then went to Rutherford. He was a member of the Seventh-day Baptist church and had hosts of friends and acquaintances throughout Plainfield and adjacent towns.

Mr. Randolph's wife, who was Miss Abbie Burke, of Schenectady, N. Y., died in May, 1886. He is survived by two sons, Herbert L., of Rutherford, and Frank Randolph, of South Plainfield, and an adopted son, Walter Harrison, of this city. Beside his brother, Nathan, he also leaves the following nephews and nieces: Asa Randolph, of this city, Robert Randolph, living in the West; the Misses Ida and Etta Randolph, of Mt. Pleasant; Mrs. Myrtle Kellogg, of South Plainfield, and Mrs. Bessie Hobart, of Pittsburg.

Arrangements for the funeral have not yet been completed.

FAILURE TO RE-APPOINT MEMBERS TIES UP BOARD

Elizabeth, April 7.—The Union County Mosquito Commission met at the county Courthouse here this morning for the purpose of holding its annual election of officers, but found it impossible to do so owing to the fact that Justice Bergen did not make any appointments to fill the vacancies in the membership of the board created by the expiration of the terms of Dr. Frank C. Ard, of Plainfield, and Health Inspector Lewis Ricketts, of Elizabeth. Justice Bergen does not sit here again until the first Saturday in May, and the organization of the Commission cannot take place until after that date, when it is expected that the appointments are to be made.

Just what the reasons are behind the failure of Justice Bergen in making the appointments is not known at the present time, although it is thought on some sides that it is probable that Mr. Ricketts and Dr. Ard are not seeking re-appointments to the Commission. In this case, two new members for the county body must be found. Others are of the opinion that an oversight on the part of Justice Bergen is responsible for the existing condition.

EDWARD P. TOWNLEY DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS

An illness from which he had been suffering for several years ended yesterday in the death of Edward P. Townley, whose home was at 718 West Third street. Mr. Townley was in his thirty-seventh year, and had always resided in Plainfield. His last employment was with Adam C. Blair. In his work he was always regarded as efficient and faithful, and his quiet disposition was such as to make and always keep a host of friends.

Mr. Townley is survived by Anna C. Townley and two children, John and Miss Loretta Townley; also two sisters and three brothers. These are Mrs. John Hopewell, of Plainfield; Mrs. Frank Kline, of Connecticut; Captain William Townley, John and Charles Townley, of this city. He was a member of Plainfield Aerie, No. 866, F. O. E., and a communicant at St. Mary's church.

The funeral will be held at St. Mary's church, Friday morning, at 9 o'clock, and burial will be at St. Mary's cemetery.

WAR NEWS

and maintained our advances, at the same time taking sixty prisoners, including three officers. In the Ban de Sapt we mined and blew up a German position."

Berlin, April 7.—The following statement was given out at German Headquarters today:

"The village of Dreigrachten, in West Flanders, which the Germans occupied on April 4, was raked by artillery fire from heavy guns and also from mine throwers. For this reason we abandoned the position last night.

"In the Argonne Forest French attacks broke down under our fire. Northeast of Verdun the French advance got only as far as our outer works.

East and southeast of Verdun French attacks failed with extraordinarily heavy losses. Two French battalions were annihilated by German fire on Combres Heights.

"Near Ailly, in the vicinity of St. Mihiel, our troops threw the French back to their old positions. Near Apremon French attacks were unsuccessful. Other French attacks near Flirey, in the Woevre district, failed.

"On the western border of Priest Wald one of our battalions beat back strong French forces from the thirteenth regiment after bloody bayonet fighting. Despite a blizzard, fighting has been going on at Hartmannsweiler Kopf since yesterday afternoon.

"Eastern Theatre—During our advance into Russia in the direction of Andrzejow, thirty kilometres southeast of Meme', our cavalry annihilated a Russian battalion. We captured 360 men, including five officers. 120 Russians were killed and 150 wounded. Another Russian battalion which hurried to the rescue was repulsed."

Petrograd, April 7.—A semi-official report was issued here today saying that in Poland, on April 5, Russian artillery destroyed a bridge over the Rozoga on the Ostroleka-Mysznymiec road, east of Wakh Zawady. In Galicia, from March 26 to April 3, in the sectors of Baligrod and Uzsok Pass, the Russians captured 33,155 privates; 378 officers; 11 army surgeons; 17 big guns, and 101 Maxims.

A statement was issued by the Russian Admiralty, reviewing operations since December 12:

"Russian mine laying operations off the Bosphorus have given satisfactory results. The Turkish cruiser "Hamidieh" struck a mine and was badly damaged. A few days later a Turkish gunboat, of the Reiss type, was sunk in the same region. On January 2 a large transport was sunk; on December 26, the cruiser "Sultan Selim," formerly the German cruiser "Goeben," was seriously damaged; on February 15, another gunboat was destroyed; a few days later a Turkish torpedo boat destroyer was blown up and at the same time two other Turkish torpedo boats were lost."

A MODERN VERSION OF AN AESOP FABLE

VOTES FOR WOMEN

Conducted by the Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield.

Yesterday Illinois women were sharers in a larger voting privilege than ever before: it was their first Mayoralty election. The "Woman's City Club of Chicago," previous to election, sent broadcast a leaflet entitled: "Heart Searchings for the Women Voters of Chicago." The heart searchings are such as to prove worth while to men voters also. The women of Chicago, however, seem to have taken it for granted that no woman voteth to herself alone—as witness the following questions from their leaflet:

"On election day, when I drop my ballot in the box, I am voting only for myself and my own family? Do I realize that I represent in this action the 500,000 families of Chicago?

"When I cast my ballot, is it for all the children of all the people, or am I thinking only of the children close to myself?

"On election day, does Chicago hold the first place in my mind, or do I think first of the political party and its advantage? Do I ever allow myself to think 'What's in this for me?'

"When I vote, am I content to be just one more party vote—doing the bidding of some politician? Am I following the old party spoils habit or am I bringing in a new, independent habit of political mind?

"Shall I vote for a man who listens first to the commercial interests, or shall I give the power of my influence to the man who listens to that greatest interest which women naturally represent?

"Do I sincerely represent politically the family and the children? Do I represent in my voting the human welfare interest, which is a municipality's chief function to conserve?

"Will I hold fast to this belief that the welfare of human beings is the chief business of a city government?

"Am I, as a voter, doing all in my power to emphasize the idea that 'civics is the home side of patriotism'? Will I live this patriotism and believe it to be as urgent as a call to die for one's country?

"Chicago asks us to live for her welfare. She asks us to hold firm that city-wide patriotism that wants all the children of all the people to have the best conditions in which to grow."

Many persons are honestly skeptical of the results of equal suffrage in the large centers, where a foreign and congested population, they claim, puts suffrage entirely out of the class it is in in the sparsely settled Western States. Let the skeptical take courage from the tone of these "heart searchings"—apparently even city women have souls, and, what is more novel, they apparently believe that there should be a soul quality in politics. The significance of this new spirit of citizenship is especially important to us here in New Jersey and New York, because the conditions in Chicago are more nearly like our own city conditions than those of the cities further west. Do the women of Newark, for example, feel that their spirit of citizenship is liable to be on a lower plane that that of the Chicago women? Have the men of New Jersey less confidence in the women of their State than the men of Illinois have in theirs?

City and Country Alike.

Four influential daily papers have lately come out for equal suffrage, after opposing it for years—the New York World, the Philadelphia Ledger, the Providence Journal and the Indianapolis News.

Two editors of important farming papers circulating largely in the campaign States of New York, New Jersey and Iowa have come out for equal suffrage. Herbert W. Collingwood, editor of the Rural New Yorker, which has a circulation among farmers of about 160,000, devotes two columns to his advocacy of the question in the issue of March 27, and comes out squarely in favor. James M. Pierce, publisher of the Iowa Homestead, Wisconsin Farmer and other farm journals, has also declared emphatically for the enfranchisement of women.

The Mary Cassatt Loan Exhibition for Woman Suffrage.

Every Jersey woman who goes into New York between today and April 24 has the opportunity to aid the cause by availing herself of the rare privilege of enjoying the Mary Cassatt pictures at 556 Fifth avenue.

"Miss Cassatt's pictures will be seen together with those by Degas in the large gallery at Knoedler's, the other two galleries being reserved for the carefully selected group of old masters. There will be approximately fifty pictures in the large gallery, and Degas, as well as Miss Cassatt, will be presented in an unequalled manner, which will illustrate the different periods of his development.

"In this connection it may be remembered that Mary Cassatt is a firm believer in woman suffrage, and is all the more interested, for this reason, in the coming exhibition. It has even been said that she has refused to have her pictures shown except for this cause. Among the museums which have acquired her paintings are the Metropolitan Museum, the Luxembourg Gallery, the Corcoran Gallery, the Wilstach Gallery, the Worcester Museum, the Rhode Island School of Design, and the Art Institute in Chicago. In 1904 she was made a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor of France."—New York Evening Post.

One is moved to clip this last paragraph and paste it into Moore's "Modern Painters" as an antidote to his "Sex in Art." But this is merely an aside from one whose blood has a tendency to boil whenever she reads that particular chapter.

"The painter of woman and maternity"—Mary Cassatt is surely that par excellence.

That imaginary terror of the antis, the "hysterical" woman, clamoring for the ballot, vanishes into thin air as one looks upon these lovely paintings of mothers and babies—real flesh and blood mothers and babies. And, above all, as one looks upon a portrait of the artist under her trees, with her wonderful face, so keen, so kind, so wise, so firm, so gentle—one thrills to the conviction: "Of such is the Kingdom."

TEA AND EXHIBITION

tives. Mrs. Percy H. Stewart has contributed numerous articles personally to the collection also from her "Temporary Workshop for Unemployed Women" of Plainfield and vicinity. Helmets, baby dresses, mufflers, infant bootees, blankets, sweaters, gloves, blouses, caps, socks, shirts, maternity outfits, underclothing and many other articles too numerous to mention are included in the exhibit. Everything is substantial and made to meet the needs of the people of that cold country.

At the conclusion of the exhibit, Mrs. Stewart introduced Dr. James Wiltsie, who gave an exceptionally interesting talk on "Labrador," illustrated with pictures taken of the country and the people. Dr. Wiltsie spent two years on the Labrador coast and so is fully conversant with the people, their customs, conditions and manner of living; and his delightful discourse was a rare treat to the attendants. Although the speaker saw very little of Dr. Grenfell while in Labrador, he spoke of the wonderful work the doctor and his helpers are doing among the people. Dr. Wiltsie was located on East Labrador, between Battle Harbor and Indian Harbor, the hamlet being called Spotted Islands. The trip from New York requires about two weeks. For six months the inhabitants of Labrador are absolutely shut out from the rest of the world and the period from the middle of June until the middle of November is the only time that steamers can go down the coast. The vessels make about ten trips a year. The population of Labrador, exclusive of the summer visitors, is about 3,000, 1,000 of these being Esquimaux and the majority of the remainder half breeds, a mixture of Indian, Esquimaux, English and Scotch blood. The population is scattered, about fifty to a hundred persons in a hamlet.

The character of the Labrador coast is perhaps the roughest on the face of the earth. All a person can see is mile after mile of huge rocks, palisades and cliffs. The arctic current brings many icebergs down from the North and there are frequent snows. The temperature during July in the middle of the day seldom rises above 50 degrees.

The laxity of any moral standards is woefully marked among the people and the simplest rules of hygiene are utterly unknown to them. The children of the country have no idea of what toys are and do not understand our simplest games. Dr. Wiltsie has accomplished much in Spotted Islands in ministering to the sick in body as well as in mind, teaching the children, distributing clothing and books and giving them recreations. On his return East two years ago, Dr. Wiltsie raised sufficient money to build a combined schoolhouse, church and dispensary for the natives.

After Dr. Wiltsie's talk, tea was served to those present. Mrs. Ernest R. Ackerman and Mrs. William F. Taliaferro poured. Mrs. William L. Lockwood served punch.

"THE BEGINNING OF THIS CHURCH"

"The Messenger" Tells of Organization of the Crescent Ave. Presbyterian.

IS 71 YEARS OLD

First Meeting Held on March 21, 1844, at What Was Then Known as the Academy, Where Leal's School is Now Located.

"The Beginning of This Church" is the subject of an interesting article appearing in the current issue of "The Messenger," the monthly publication of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church. It not only tells about the organization of that body, but gives a number of facts which will be recalled by the older members, and will be read with interest by some of the younger ones. "The Messenger" says:

"The beginning of this is always interesting, and very few of our people, we imagine, know anything about the beginning of the Crescet Avenue church. The meeting at which this church was organized under the name of the Plainfield Presbyterian curch, was held Thursday, March 21, 1844, at what was then known as the Academy. This was a building used as a hall and general meeting place, erected in 1811, and which stood on the ground now occupied by Mr. Leal's School. It was subsequently moved across the street, where it still stands and is now known as 428 West Front street. Rev. Samuel H. Cox, D. D., and the Rev. Jonathan M. Rowland, both of Brooklyn, N. Y., had been invited to be present, and Dr. Cox acted as moderator. Robert Anderson was elected clerk of the Session, the other elders elected being John Layton, Ephraim Corriell and Ira Pruden. Rev. William Whittaker was subsequently called as the first pastor.

"At this first meeting it was ordered that the following outline of the origin and organization of this church be recorded in the minute book:

"A number of persons, members of the Presbyterian church previously formed in this place, having been for various reasons and for considerable time, persuaded that their own edification and usefulness, and the proper education of their children alike demanded some decisive change in their ecclesiastical relations; and determined to proceed, in effecting it, in a way, as much as possible, agreeable to the principles of peace, order and good neighborhood, they asked and received a regular dismission for the purpose of becoming a regular church of Christ; and having invited Messrs. Cox and Rowland, as above, to officiate in their due organization, and appointed by agreement this March 21, 1844, at 2 o'clock p. m., the parties being all present, and in the progress and performance of public worship, in the upper chamber of the academy, the document marked A on the files of the Session, purporting to be a regular dismission, as aforesaid, in favor of eighty-six persons, and a certificate of their good and regular standing, was delivered to the committee of organization, and being read and found in order, they agreed to proceed immediately with said organization; whereupon, the names of all the persons being called, and all answering to them, except a very few, who were providentially detained, and for whom others spoke, representing their accordant desire was, if present, the nature of a particular Christian church, its profession and covenant, were duly explained, when, by request, the parties all rose, and as an act of solemn worship assumed said profession and covenant, and were pronounced by Dr. Cox to be a regularly organized church of Christ, builded on the foundation of apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone." The name was subsequently changed to Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church.

TAPS FROM THE GAVEL.

An entertainment will be given by Queen City Homestead, No. 4,998, Brotherhood of American Yeomen, Monday evening, April 19, at the lodge rooms, 109 Park avenue. This will be the first social to be given under the auspices of the recently instituted homestead. The social evening will be for the enjoyment of members and their friends.

At the meeting last evening two candidates were initiated.

Court Watchung, Independent Order of Foresters, will hereafter meet in Eagles' Hall, 109 East Second street, instead of in the Jr. O. U. A. M. Hall. A special meeting of the court will be held Thursday evening in John Fraed's store on Park avenue near Fourth street.

SCHOOL TEAMS OPEN SEASON THIS WEEK

Plainfield, North Plainfield and Leals Will Pry off the Lid on Saturday.

Interscholastic baseball contests in this city will begin this week and continue until the middle of June, when the schools will close. All of the three local teams have hard scheduled to play Saturday afternoon, Plainfield and North Plainfield opening at home, while Leals are scheduled to go to Roselle and meet the High School team of that place. P. H. S. will meet a team of graduates, as usual, while the boys across the brook will entertain the team from Rutgers Prep.

The interscholastic series for the championship of the city will be started on May 1, when Leal and North Plainfield meet. The two public school teams, which are generally the main contestants for the big honors, will not clash until May 15, that game being staged in the borough. Plainfield has been practicing hard for some time, and the boroughites will have to go the limit to retain their honors and win two titles in succession, something hat has never been done by North Plainfield either on the diamond or court.

The champions have been disappointed and forced to start a week later than usual, but beginning next Saturday they will have over a month to get into perfect trim before the first big contest of the season.

RUTGERS COLLEGE NINE OPENS SEASON TOMORROW

One Jersey college is scheduled to open its baseball season this week. Tomorrow afternoon the Rutgers College nine will meet the Colgate College boys at New Brunswick. The snowstorm last Saturday put the diamond at New Brunswick in bad shape, but it is expected that it will be put in condition so that the game arranged can be played.

Saturday afternoon the Rutgers team will go to West Point to play the West Point Cadets.

Harry Jennings, who has appeared in this city a number of times, will probably pitch the first game for Rutgers.

SENIORS VS. JUNIORS.

The bowling match at the Elks' Club tomorrow night between the Senior and Junior teams will undoubtedly prove a good one, and Nash's men will have no cinch in disposing of their "little brothers." The regular teams will be on hand, and a fight for blood is sure to result. A good time is promised the pinners and the spectators after the match no matter who wins the majority of the games.

POSTPONED SHOOT SATURDAY.

The Climax Gun Club's open shoot, which was put off last Saturday because of the snow, will be held Saturday on the club's grounds, on Plainfield avenue. The list of events will be the same as was first announced for last week.

BOROUGH BOWLING MATCHES.

Three matches will be rolled in the borough one-man tourney tonight and tomorrow night.

SPORTING NOTES

The war correspondents' Southland dreams are nearly over.

The Eastern amateur wrestlers depart for 'Frisco tomorrow to compete against Western matmen on the 16th and 17th.

Martin Sheridan may go after the decathlon championship. The elimination of the walk and substitution of the discus, he thinks, may give him a chance.

Sam McVey is on his way from Havana to Boston, where he meets Sam Langford in the revival of boxing at the Hub.

The Central Association is out with a schedule of 128 games, to open May 5: Burlington at Waterloo, Keokuk at Cedar Rapids, Muscatine at Mason City and Clinton at Marshalltown.

The national amateur trapshooting championship will be held April 30 and May 1, at Traver's Island, New York. It looms up as a record event this year.

Charley White and Jimmy Duffy meet at 136 pounds at Buffalo tomorrow night. Both boys are claimants to the lightweight championship of America.

The Federal League magnates assure us that all discord has been patched up, and the opening gun will be fired on Saturday. It is said that peace is in sight for next year, with three big leagues operating in harmony.

The sale of Joe Gans' hotel in Baltimore recalls the fact that he built it with the money he got in the Bat Nelson fight. This was his largest plum, and it was his undoing.

English soccer players have had their pay cut to $15 a week. The boys used to get the princely sum of $20 per week, but this princely sum has nearly bankrupted several clubs.

The Western racing circuit will open in Denver on June 12. Reno and San Francisco are now in the circuit. Forty days of sport will be furnished the horsemen at the 'Frisco Fair.

Big Chief Bender will tonight hurl a ball the length of the banquet hall at Baltimore, where the Baltimore Feds will feast and be merry. Catcher Jacklitsch will receive the pill, and everybody will cheer.

Snowy Baker writes to friends from Australia of the Boxers' Union, into which the Australian boxers were roped, to demand 30 per cent. of the gate receipts for each fighter.

The Gibbons-McFarland bout will go to the club bidding highest. Milwaukee is said to have made a big bid for the mill.

Pal Brown has a hard job on his hands for Friday night, when he mixes it up with Joe Mandot, of Superior, Wis. He is showing good form, and plans to show in the East before making another trip to Australia.

LONG SCHEDULE FOR BORO TENNIS TEAM

Manager Elmer French Announces List of 14 Matches for N. P. H. S. Players.

Manager Elmer H. French, of the North Plainfield High School tennis team, has just completed his schedule for the coming tennis season. The schedule comprises fourteen games including one pending date with the D. K. E., of Rutgers, final arrangements for this game not having been sufficiently completed to make it certain. Out of this number, seven are listed to be played on the home courts, while three are scheduled to be played out of town, the remaining games being played with P. H. S. and Leals on their courts.

The home games will be played on either the Park Golf Club or DeLacey avenue courts and the games with Rutgers, West Orange and Summit, which occur on the same dates as baseball games, will be played before the ball games on the DeLacey courts, which adjoin Hyde Oval, thus allowing the spectators to take in both events.

Previous to this year North Plainfield High School had not supported a tennis team, although much tennis had been played by its members and inter-class tournaments had been held, a cup being presented to the winners. This year, however, it was decided that a tennis team be put out to represent the High School by the vote of the athletic association and Hoyt Tomkinson was elected captain.

The courts on which the third games of the interscholastic series will be played have not yet been decided upon but will be arranged for in the near future, probably by the "tossing of a coin."

The schedule follows:

MAY.
4—Summit at Summit.
8—D. K. E. of Rutgers at home (pending).
11—Leals at Leals.
12—West Orange at home.
18—P. H. S. at home.
21—Leals at home.
25—Battin at home.
28—Cranford at home.
31—Summit at home.

JUNE.
1—P. H. S. at P. H. S.
3—Cranford at Cranford.
7—P. H. S. (undecided).
9—Leal (undecided).
15—West Orange at West Orange.

N. P. H. S. WILL TRAVEL.

The North Plainfield baseball team is scheduled to play its first out of town baseball game one week from today. The team will go to Clinton provided the weather is favorable. P. H. S. plays Westfield at home, its third home game.

FIGHT PROCEEDS BIG.

Havana, April 7.—The promoters of the Willard-Johnson fight yesterday finished the counting and dividing of the gate receipts of the fight. They announced last night that the battle drew into the box office $110,000 and that the attendance was 32,000.

PARK CLUB CHANGE.

The Park Club handicap five-back tournament will be played tonight instead of Thursday night. Ten pins will be rolled Friday.

WILLARD GETS BIG OFFER.

Jess Willard, the new heavyweight champion, will get $5,000 for his first week on the stage after winning the title. A contract calling for that amount was closed by Hammerstein's Victoria last night with Lawrence Weber, home representative of Harry H. Frazee, Jack Curley and Tom Jones, joint managers of Willard, who approved the deal by cable from Havana. Willard's engagement begins next Monday. His sparring partner, Jim Savage, will box with him, and a dramatic sketch, containing only brief speaking parts for the champion, is being prepared. The contract gives the theatre an option to extend the engagement a week at a time.

SUNDAY BASEBALL TABOOED.

Albany, April 7.—It now appears improbable that any bill legalizing Sunday baseball will be passed by the Legislature of New York this year. The Rules Committee made its final report on all measures in the committee. The McElroy Sunday baseball bill was not reported out. The measure, if passed, would have permitted free games and those to which admission was charged.

BAN ON FIGHT MOVIES.

Washington, April 7.—Officials of the Treasury Department and the Department of Justice refused to venture an opinion as to the justice of the Federal statute prohibiting the importation of moving picture films and negatives of the Johnson-Willard prize fight.

No doubt existed here, however, that Chaper 263 of the Revised Statutes enacted by the Sixty-second Congress will have the effect of prohibiting the importation of the films into the country, but their transportation in interstate commerce.

BOY SCOUTS WILL AID BABY EXHIBIT

A Competitive Torchlight Parade to Be Held With Flag Presentation.

Through the generosity of several public spirited citizens the projected competitive parade of the Boy Scouts of this and neighboring cities to be held on a date to be selected by the Scout Council Monday night, will be a torchlight procession, the red fire having been promised by William M. Wherry, Jr. The flag, which will be offered by the troop showing the most unique and original transparency, tableaux or device for advertising the Baby Saving Exhibit, now being held here, will be presented by Robert Fairbairn, of Westfield, and will bear the words:

B. S. A.
CIVIC WELFARE
PLAINFIELD,
N. J.

The presence of many boy scouts at the exhibit rooms since the display opened the first of the month indicates that there is already considerable brainwork being done by the scouts in getting up novelties. One patrol plans to wheel a boy dressed up as a baby in a baby carriage and a competing patrol has evolved a secret device that will fully demonstrate the value of the exhibit to the community. Another is working out an elaborate transparency.

The competition is open to Boy Scout Troops from Westfield, Dunellen, Bound Brook, Cranford and New Brunswick. Patrols may compete for the honor of winning the flag for their troop. Competitors must register with the Scout Commissioner, Allen E. Beals, 634 East Second street, before Monday evening, April 12, the night that the Scout Council meets at the Y. M. C. A. Late registrations will be received up to 8 p. m.

A personal appeal has been made to all members of the Council to attend the meeting on Monday night. So rapidly is the scout movement growing in this city that provision has to be made at once for taking tests of scouts desiring promotion. The full membership of the Council now comprises the Court of Honor, but the number of applications for advancement has become so great that some scouts are in danger of having their promotions delayed half a year or more. There are at present fifty-two applications pending with a Court of Honor attendance of an average of three. As the Court meets only twice a month it has become apparent that the field officers will have to call for assistance upon the Council members.

ARDENT SUPPORTER OF "VOTES FOR WOMEN"

Senator Clapp, Who is to Speak Here, Has Actively Supported Movement.

The campaign in New Jersey for the suffrage amendment, which will come before the voters next September, is actively supported by United States Senator Moses E. Clapp, who will speak in the auditorium of the Plainfield High School on the evening of Monday, April 12, at 8 o'clock.

Ever since Senator Clapp's election to the United States Senate in 1901, he has been an ardent supporter of "votes for women." In the Sixty-third Congress, in 1912-13, besides being on the Committee of Standards, Ways and Means, Indian Affairs, Interstate Commerce, Naval Affairs, Pacific Islands and Porto Rico, and Privileges and Elections, he served together with Charles S. Thomas, of Colorado; Robert L. Owen, of Oklahoma; Henry F. Ashurst, of Arizona; Joseph E. Ramsdell, of Louisiana; Henry F. Hollis, of New Hampshire; George Southerland, of Utah; Wesley L. Jones, of Washingtonn, and Thomas B. Catron, of New Mexico, on the Woman Suffrage Committee.

A Republican in a Democratic administration, he had small chance of succeeding in his committee's attempt to pass an amendment to the Federal Constitution granting the franchise to women, although the movement attained one of the highest pinacles of success it has ever reached in this country. The Senate Committee on Woman Suffrage, of which Mr. Clapp was a member, ordered a favorable report on the Chamberlain resolution providing for an amendment. This was the first time a committee of either branch of Congress had so much as favorably reported a proposition to grant suffrage to women. This happened May 14, 1913.

On September 20, during a special session called to discuss only the tariff and the currency bills, the Senate spent all day discussing the suffrage amendment. Senator Wesley Jones is reported then to have said that only inertia kept the Senate from passing the suffrage amendment, and again Senator Clapp made an enthusiastic speech in favor of suffrage.

Despite the fact that this amendment did not pass, most of the Republican Senators, including Senator Clapp voted for a test amendment, pertaining only to the women of the Pacific possessions, but duplicating the amendment to the Federal Constitution, which the women desired to have adopted for the entire country on October 11, 1914.

On the eve of a Congressional election, this vote was taken at a rather inauspcious moment. The amendment was lost by a vote of 58 to 84, the votes of the sold South routing the advocates of equal suffrage. Senator Clapp has decided to give a few days to the campaign in New Jersey, hoping that the effort here may not only enfranchise the women of New Jersey, but may also act as a wedge to open the way to successful campaigns for the suffrage amendments in New York, Pensylvania and Massachusetts, which will be voted upon later in the year.

West Virginia Greets World In Magnificent Palace

CONSPICUOUS among the buildings of the states at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition is that of West Virginia. Thousands of residents of West Virginia and former residents and their friends visit the building, which is ideally located on the shores of San Francisco bay. West Virginia was one of the first states to hold dedication ceremonies, attended by a distinguished group of notables and hundreds of Virginians. Since the opening day it has been the mecca for a constant stream of visitors. Don't fail to see the world's greatest Exposition.

INDIANA, famous for achievements in American literature and noted for native hospitality, has erected a state building at the Fair in the Queen Anne or early form of English architecture. As a reason for this departure Indianians say that a replica of the old English club style of building would be most suitable for their plans, as it is to be a place of entertainment, first and foremost, for the people of their state and those from other states who will enjoy and frequent the house as guests.

"We will entertain our friends and provide them with a postoffice, rest rooms, ballroom and, last but not least, a library filled, of course, with the representative works of the authors of our own state," says Mrs. A. E. Carroll of Fort Wayne, who is in charge of the building and brought with her plans and specifications which have been carried out under her supervision according to the dictates of architect and artist. Thousands of Indianans register at the building.

CONTESTANTS SEEK SAFE LEAD IN RACE FOR TRIP TO WEST

Many Strive to Gain Safe Margin Now and Have Easy Sailing at Finish—Those in Rear Have Chance to Forge Ahead.

Now that the excitement of the Special Prize Contest has subsided, and the winners are known, all efforts will be turned toward the original contest, and the winning of the four trips to the Panama-Pacific Exposition. Less than two weeks remain before the close of the contest, which terminates April 17, at 10 p. m. Start in today and hustle as fast as you can until the final day, then you won't be obliged to say "If I had only worked a little harder I could have won the trip."

Athletes who are entering a race over an extended course frequently run the first part of the course at top speed in order to "take the heart out of the opponents." Later, if they can hold the speed, all well and good; if not, they have a safe lead in which to loaf a little and catch their breath before the other runner comes up.

This is a system that some of the contestants in the Plainfield Press Tour Contest have adopted. Apparently their motto is: "Take the heart out of the other contestant if you possibly can; otherwise the chances are she will try to take the heart out of you."

Votes are going to come in by the bushel during the coming days. The farther you get ahead of the rush the easier sailing you will have. But don't get discouraged just because somebody hops ahead of you. Most of the big contests are won in an eleventh-hour finish. A few thousand votes are a mere bagatelle. They can be won in a half day's canvassing. If you have to start late you can still go up to the head if you work hard. Better start late than not start at all.

Get Extensions.

There were many subscriptions taken for three months each along toward the beginning of the contest which will expire soon after the contest closes. In many cases the contestants are renewing these subscriptions for six months, one and two years, and subscribers are waiting to have the contestants who took their subscriptions come back to them for longer term subscriptions. If their subscriptions will soon expire they will not want to miss a issue of the Press, and if they have given the contestant an extension of their previous subscription they insist she has turned it in. If the contestant is holding the subscription, she should not overlook the expiration date of the subscriber's subscription.

Be sure you are well supplied with subscription blanks and have all your subscriptions made out as the Contest Department will be rushed and will not be able to fill them out. Get right after every friend you have now and take possession of every subscription you can lay your hands on. Do not limit yourself to any certain amount, as nobody knows how many you need, and it is better to be on the safe side by getting all you possibly can.

Ten days will flit by very rapidly, therefore, every minute of your time is valuable from now until April 17. "Go the limit." Let this be your motto in the race for these trips.

Disregarded Stories.

Don't pay any attention to the stories that are going the rounds relating to such-and-such a candidate having so many hundred thousand votes, as stories of this calibre are just used for the purpose of frightening out of the contest as many opponents as will believe them. It stands to reason, if a certain candidate had a certain vote, she would not stand on the street corners shouting it out to everybody, for fear that somebody would go her one better; then her big vote would be useless. Candidates are not going around telling each other how many votes they have in their possession. They know a little better than to spoil their chances of winning. Turn a deaf ear to all yarns; keep busy, and by doing so verify your chances of winning.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

The fine vaudeville program at Proctor's Theatre the first half will give way tomorrow to an entire new change, bringing the following excellent acts: The Seven Mischief Makers, one of those delightful juvenile schoolroom acts in which five girls and two boys give songs and dances and wholesome comedy; Billy Wayne and the Warren Girls, in musical comedy skit, "On Board," singing, dancing and repartee; Louise and Ferrera, Italian character musicians, using novelty steel guitars; Lloyd and Adams, comedy singing and talking, and Broomstick Elliott, novelty comedy musician.

Scene from "Such a Little Queen," at Proctor's Theatre Today.

The program today will contain two special features, one of which is another of those laughable Chaplin comedies entitled, "A Busy Day." You all know who Chaplin is and what he can do, so, that is sufficient. The other feature will be the Paramount feature, "Such a Little Queen," with Mary Pickford, the highest priced camera artist in the country. Tomorrow's picture feature will be Robert Bosworth in "The Pursuit of the Phantom." Watch for the date for the appearance of Eva Fay, the greatest artist in vaudeville, to be seen at Proctor's Theatre this season. She is coming soon.

A FOOL AND HIS MONEY

By GEORGE BARR M'CUTCHEON,

Author of "Graustark," "Truxton King," Etc.

Copyright, 1915, by George Barr McCutcheon.

"You will do well, sir, to keep a civil tongue in your head," said I, paling with fury.

"I have nothing more to say to you, Mr. Smart," said he contemptuously. "Good night. Francois, conduct Mr. Smart to the corridor."

Strangely enough, I did not recover my sense of speech until I was well

"You will do well, sir, to keep a civil tongue in your head."

out into the corridor. Then I deliberately took a gold coin out of my pocket and pressed it into the valet's hand.

"Kindly give that to your master with my compliments," said I in a voice that was intended to reach Tarnowsy's ear.

Mr. Poopendyke was waiting for me in the courtyard on my return.

"What is the matter with you?" I demanded irascibly. "What's up? What are you doing out here with a lantern?"

"I was rather anxious," he said, a note of relief in his voice. "I feared that something unexpected might have befallen you. Five minutes ago the—Mr. Pless called up on the telephone and left a message for you. It rather upset me, sir."

"He did, eh? Well, what did he say?"

"He merely commanded me to give you his compliments and to tell you to go to blazes. I told him that you would doubtless be at home a little later on and it would sound very much better if it came from him instead of from me. Whereupon he told me to accompany you, giving rather explicit directions. He appeared to be in a tremendous rage."

I laughed heartily. "I must have got under his confounded skin, after all," I said.

The countess gave a little sigh of relief when I dashed in upon her a few minutes later. She had it all out of me before I had quite recovered my breath after the climb upstairs.

We sat down at the table. "Now tell me everything all over again," she said.

CHAPTER XV.

I Am Informed That I Am In Love.

POOPENDYKE stared for a long time at the portrait of Ludwig the Red. "Isn't it odd that the countess, an American, should be descended from the old Rothhoefens? What a small world it is, after all!"

I became wary. "Nothing odd about it to me. We've all got to descend from somebody."

"I dare say. Still it is odd that she should be hiding in the castle of her ances"—

"Not at all, not at all. It just happens to be a handy place. Perfectly natural."

"Perfect rot," I added without rime or reason.

He grinned. "Nevertheless it's the general opinion that you are," said he.

I sat up very straight. "What's that?"

"You're in love," said he succinctly. It was like a bomb.

"You're crazy!" I gasped.

"Don't think we're all blind, Mr. Smart."

"We?" I murmured, a curious dampness assailing me.

"That is to say, Britton, the Schmicks and myself."

"The Schmicks?" It was high time that I should laugh. "Ho, ho! The Schmicks! Good Lord, man—the Schmicks!"

"The Schmicks are tickled to death over it," said he. "And so is Britton."

Collecting all the sarcasm that I could command at the instant I inquired, "Are you, Mr. Poopendyke—are you not ticklish?"

"Very," said he.

"Well, I'm not!" said I savagely. "What does all this nonsense mean? Don't be an ass, Fred."

"Perhaps you don't know it, Mr. Smart, but you are in love," said he so convincingly that I was conscious of an abrupt sinking of the heart.

"The deuce you say!" I exclaimed rather blankly.

"Oh, I've seen it coming! For that matter, so has she. It's as plain as the nose"—

I leaped to my feet, startled. "She? You don't— Has she said anything that leads you to believe— Oh, the deuce! What rot!"

"No use getting angry over it," he said consolingly. "Falling in love is the sort of thing a fellow can't help, you know. You are heels over head in love with the Countess Tarnowsy and"—

"Shut up, Fred! You're going daffy from reading my books or absorbing my manuscripts or"—

"Heaven is my witness I don't read your books, and I merely correct your manuscripts. God knows there is no romance in that! You are in love. Now, what are you going to do about it?"

"Do about it?" I demanded.

"You can't go on in this way, you know," he said relentlessly. "She won't"—

"Why, you blithering idiot," I roared, "do you know what you are saying? I'm not in love with anybody. My heart is—is— But never mind! Now, listen to me, Fred. This nonsense has got to cease. I won't have it. Why, she's already got a husband. She's had all she can stand in the way of husb"—

"Rubbish! She can stand a husband or two more, if you are going to look at it in a literal way. Besides, she hasn't a husband. She's chucked him. Good riddance, too. Now, do you imagine for a single instant that a beautiful, adorable young woman of twenty-three is going to spend the rest of her life without a man? Not much! She's free to marry again, and she will."

"Admitting that to be true, why should she marry me?"

"I didn't say she was in love with you. I said you were in love with her."

"Oh," I said, and my face fell, "I see!"

He seemed to be considering something. After a few seconds he nodded his head decisively. "Yes, I am sure of it. If the right man gets her she'll make the finest, sweetest wife in the world. She's never had a chance to show what's really in her. She would be adorable, wouldn't she?"

The sudden question caught me unawares.

"She would!" I said, with conviction.

"Well," said he slowly and deliberately, "why don't you set about it, then?"

He was so ridiculous that I thought for the fun of it I'd humor him.

"Assuming that you are right in regard to my feelings toward her, Fred, what leads you to believe that I would stand a chance of winning her?" It was a silly question, but I declare I hung on his answer with a tenseness that surprised me.

"Why not? You are good looking, a gentleman, a celebrity and a man. Bless my soul, she could do worse."

"But you forget that I am—let me see—thirty-five, and she is but twenty-three."

"To offset that, she has been married and unhappy. That brings her about up to your level, I should say. Her father ought to pay what he owes. He gave a million to get one husband for her. He ought to give a million to be rid of him, so that she could marry the next one without putting him to any expense whatsoever. I told her I thought it was the cheapest and quickest way out of it, and she said, 'I wonder!'"

"Have you been discussing her most sacred affairs with her, you blithering"—

"No, sir," said he, with dignity. "She has been discussing them with me."

I have no recollection of what I said as I stalked out of the room. He called out after me, somewhat pleadingly, I thought:

"Ask Britton what he has to say about it."

Things had come to a pretty pass! Couldn't a gentleman be polite and agreeable to a young and charming lady whom circumstances had thrown in his way without having his motives misconstrued by a lot of snooping, idiotic menials whose only zest in life sprung from a temperamental tendency to belittle the big things and enlarge upon the small ones?

Unexpectedly I met Britton!

"Britton, what's all this gossip I hear going the rounds of the castle behind my back?" I exclaimed.

Confound him, he looked pleased! "It's quite true, sir; quite true."

"Quite true!" I roared. "What's quite true, sir?"

"Isn't it, sir?" he asked, dismayed.

"Isn't what?"

"I mean to say, sir, isn't it true?"

"My God!" I cried, throwing up my hands in hopeless despair. "You—you—wait! I'm going to get to the bottom of this. I want the truth, Britton. Who put it into that confounded head of yours that I am—er—in love with the countess? Speak! Who did it?"

He lowered his voice, presumably because I had dropped mine to a very loud whisper. I also had glanced over both shoulders.

"Begging your pardon, sir, but I must be honest, sir. It was you as first put it into my 'ead, sir."

"I?" My face went the color of a cardinal's cap.

"You, sir. It's as plain as the nose on your"—

"That will do, Britton," I commanded. He remained discreetly silent. "That will do, I say," I repeated somewhat testily. "Do you hear, sir?"

"Yes, sir," he responded. "That will do, you says."

"Ahem! I—ahem!"

Five minutes later I was at her door my heart in my mouth. A sudden inexplicable form of panic took possession of me.

After some deliberation I came to a decision. The proper thing for me to do was to show all of them that their ridiculous suspicions were wrong. Resolutely I marched downstairs.

For some two long and extremely monotonous days I toiled. I could not deny to myself that I was missing those pleasant hours with the countess. I did miss them. I missed Rosemary and Jinko and Helen Marie Louise Antoinette and Blake.

Blatchford came to the door.

"A note for you, sir, if you please," said he. He was holding the salver almost on a level with his nose.

My heart—my incomprehensible heart—gave a leap that sent the blood rushing to my face.

"Thank you, Blatchford; that will do."

"I beg your pardon, sir, but there is to be an answer."

"Oh!" said I.

I tore open the envelope.

I managed to dash off a brief note in a fairly nonchalant manner. Blatchford almost committed the unpardonable crime of slamming the door behind him, he was in such a hurry to be off with the message.

Then I went over and stood above Mr. Poopendyke.

"Mr. Poopendyke," said I slowly, darkly, "what do you know about those violets?"

He quailed. "I hope you don't mind, Mr. Smart. It's all right. I put one of your cards in so that there couldn't be any mistake."

Halfway up the winding stairways I paused in some astonishment. It had just occurred to me that I was going up the steps two at a time and that my heart was beating like mad.

I reflected. Here was I racing along like a schoolboy, and for what? What occasion was there for such unseemly haste? In the first place, it was now but a few minutes after 11, and she had asked me for luncheon. There was no getting around that. At best luncheon was two hours off. So why was I galloping like this? The series of self inflicted questions found me utterly unprepared. I couldn't answer one of them.

After ten minutes of serious, undisturbed consideration of the matter I came to the final conclusion that it was not love, but pity, that had driven me to such abnormal activity. It was nonsense to even argue the point.

For an hour and a half by my watch, but five or six by my nerves, I paced the lonely, sequestered halls in the lower regions of the castle. Two or three times I was sure that my watch had stopped, the hands seemed so stationary. The third time I tried to wind it I broke the mainspring, but as it was nearly 1 o'clock not much harm was done.

That one little sentence, "Have you deserted me?" grew to be a voluminous indictment. I could think of nothing else. There was something ineffably sad and pathetic about it. Had she been unhappy because of my beastly behavior?

At last I approached her door. Upon my soul, my legs were trembling! I experienced a silly sensation of fear. I hesitated; then, plucking up my courage and putting all silly questions behind me, I rapped resoundingly on the door.

The excellent Hawkes opened it. I started back in dismay. He stood aside impressively.

"Mr. Smart!" he announced.

I caught sight of the countess. She was arranging some flowers on the table. Blatchford was placing the knives and forks. Helen Marie Louis Antoinette stood beside her mistress holding a box of flowers in her hands.

What was it that I had been thinking out there in those gloomy halls? That she would greet me with a pathetic, hurt look and—

"Good morning!" she cried gayly. Hurt? Pathetic? She was radiant! "So glad to see you again. Hawkes has told me how busy you've been."

"Awfully, awfully busy," I murmured. Was it relief at finding her so happy and unconcerned that swept through me? I am morally but shamelessly certain it wasn't.

"Don't you think the roses are lovely in that old silver bowl?"

"Exquisite!"

"Blatchford found it in the plate vault," she said, standing off to admire the effect. "Do you mind if I go on arranging them?" she asked, and without waiting for an answer resumed her employment.

"Bon jour, m'sieur," said Helen Marie Louise Antoinette over her mistress' shoulder. One never knows whether a French maid is polite or merely spiteful.

"It seems ages since I saw you last," said the countess in a matter of fact tone, jiggling a rose into position and then standing off to study the effect, her head cocked prettily at an angle of inquiry.

It suddenly occurred to me that she had got on very well without me during the ages. The discovery irritated me. She was not behaving at all as I had expected.

"There hasn't been a great deal of news," I said.

She dropped a long stemmed rose and waited for me to pick it up.

"Thank you," she said. "Oh, did it prick you?"

"Yes," said I flatly. Then we both gave the closest attention to the end of my thumb, while I triumphantly squeezed a tiny drop of blood out of it. I sucked it. The incident was closed. She was no longer interested in the laceration.

"So you thought I had deserted you?" I said, and was a little surprised at the gruffness in my voice.

"The violets apeansed me," she said with a smile. For the first time I noticed that she was wearing a large bunch of them. "You will be bankrupt, Mr. Smart, if you keep on buying roses and violets and orchids for me."

So the roses were mine also! I shot a swift glance at the mantelpiece, irresistibly moved by some mysterious force. There were two bowls of orchids there.

"But they are lovely!" she cried, noting the expression in my face and misconstruing it. "You are an angel."

That was the last straw. "I am nothing of the sort!" I exclaimed, very hot and uncomfortable.

"You are," was her retort. "There! Isn't it a lovely centerpiece? Now, you must come and see Rosemary. She adores the new elephant you sent to her."

"Ele"— I began, blinking my eyes. "Oh—oh, yes, yes! Ha, ha! The elephant!" Good heavens! Had that idiotic Poopendyke started a menagerie in my castle?

I was vastly relieved to find that the elephant was made of felt and not too large to keep Rosemary from wielding it skillfully in an assault upon the hapless Jinko.

Of Interest to Women and the Home

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

The lovely spring days changed to the heat of summer. There had been little rain and clouds of dust were blowing down the streets.

Nell was not well. She drooped with the heat as did the tender plants. Night after night Dick came home and found her prostrate on the bed. At first he was all solicitude, but life was not easy for him at the office in the blistering heat and the new responsibilities were hard to carry. Then to come home to depression and silence or remarks disparaging the climate and country seemed an unnecessary addition to his burden.

"Nell could throw off this lassitude if she would," he grumbled inwardly.

Mrs. Parsons and the children had gone east, and she was the only one with whom Nell had formed any real intimacy. Everything fell flat when she left.

On coming home one evening Dick went into the darkened bedroom, mopping the perspiration from his face.

"Aren't you nearly melted?" asked Nell in a weak voice from the bed.

"It's been pretty hot today," he replied briefly.

"How I hate this burnt, scorching country; living by the lake has spoiled me for residence in the corn belt."

"I've got so I go about my work and pay no attention to it. If you would think of something besides the heat you would not notice it so much." Dick threw up the window and sank into a chair, leaning his head on his arm.

"Do you think I am lying on this bed to escape the heat? I suppose you think I imagine all my sick feelings." Nell sat up.

"If you are sick, call in Dr. Ellson and let him do something for you. I'll tell him to come and see you tomorrow."

Nell tried feebly to rise from the bed. "I'll get a little something to eat. That may make me feel better."

"Don't bother; it's too hot to eat now. I'll make a pitcher of lemonade and we'll have something before we go to bed. Come out on the porch." Dick made her comfortable in the swing and went to make the lemonade. When he returned Mrs. Brown was coming through the gate with a bowl in her hand.

"I brought over some ice cream; I knew Mrs. Morton was not feeling very well and thought this might taste good."

"Thank you so much!" Nell tried to sit up.

"Don't move. I can't stay but a minute," said the friendly soul. "I have all the supper dishes to do yet."

Dick brought out a plate of cake and some dishes and soon Nell was enjoying the cool delicacy.

"It really is the only thing I've eaten today and it tastes so good."

"You had heard of Miss Rudolph's trouble, hadn't you?" continued the neighbor. "No! Why she got a dispatch telling her of the death of her only brother. The poor girl is all broken up. She leaves on the night train; he lived in Kansas City."

"I wish you felt equal to going over to see her," said Dick after the caller had gone. "The poor thing is all alone in the world now. Do you think you would feel able to walk over after a while? It's cooler now."

"I'll try," said Nell.

Household Hints

To Reduce the Gas Bill.

Pin the following suggestions near the gas stove, carefully follow, and then note the gas bill lessening:

Remember: "Matchess are cheaper than gas."

Have all food ready for the blaze before lighting the burner.

Never use a large burner when a small one will do.

Remember a small blue flame gives more heat and burns less gas than a high yellow flame.

After the water on the vegetables reaches the boiling point, turn gas down. Slow boiling cooks just as well and takes less gas than fast boiling.

A strip of asbestos pinned around a burner causes the heat to concentrate on the cooking, instead of scattering into the atmosphere.

Place a colander in sausepan where potatoes or other vegetables is boiling. In colander set sauce or soupplate containing pudding or any left-over vegetable you wish to reheat. Then set saucepan cover in colander. Thus no extra gas is required for heating "leftovers."

Set gravy, to be rewarmed, on top of any boiling vegetable; cover, and it will heat thoroughly.

When having a roast, do all the cooking in the oven. Any article that requires boiling will cook just as well in the oven.

Salted nuts can be cooked just as well in a popcorn popper as in an oven.

The burner on top of stove, as well as in the oven, may be extinguished after food is cooked, and still retain enough heat to keep food warm for at least five minutes.

SIMPLE HOME REMEDIES

For Chapped Hands—Five tablespoons lemon juice, two tablespoons glycerin, two tablespoons alcohol.

For Sore Throat—One teaspoonful each of salt, sugar and turpentine in a pint of water; use as a gargle.

When giving a sick person an alcohol bath, make a mitten for your hand out of an old bath towel. It will hold more moisture and be better for rubbing purposes.

A mustard plaster mixed with the white of an egg will not leave a blister.

UP-TO-DATE RECIPES

Venetian Stew—Take one tablespoon each of chopped onion, parsley, flour and Parmesian cheese, a little salt, pepper and ground mace. Spread this between two slices of freshly fried veal steak, leave for a few hours, then stew this meat sandwich in same pan veal was fried in adding a little hot water or stock and butter. Serve hot.

Lenten Eggs (may be served hot or cold)—Boil six eggs twenty minutes, remove shells and cut in halves lengthwise. Remove yolks with a spoon, mash to a paste and mix with two tablespoons minced sweet red peppers, half grated onion, four tablespoons grated bread crumbs, salt, celery salt and paprika to taste, sufficient olive oil to blend to a paste. Mix well and fill into egg whites. To serve cold, lay on lettuce leaves, cover with boiled dressing and garnish with slices of pickled beets. To serve hot, heat carefully in tomato sauce and serve on buttered toast.

Puffy and Delicate Fried Cakes—Measure one cup each of milk and granulated sugar into a mixing bowl, stir till dissolved. Beat three eggs well and stir in. Take two quarts flour and three heaping teaspoons baking powder and sift together. Mix the whole into a rather soft dough, using as little flour in manipulating as possible. Cut into rings and fry in very hot lard. Mixing the milk and sugar together keeps first the dough from soaking grease, and avoiding the use of a great deal of flour in working the dough makes the cake puffy and delicate.

Delicious Dessert—Make a sponge with following recipe: Four whole eggs beaten light, one teacup granulated sugar, 1½ teacups flour, to which add 1½ teaspoons baking powder, and four tablespoons water. Put into floured pan and bake about twenty minutes in hot but slow oven. When cold, split through middle and spread with cream filling of the following recipe: One cup sugar, one heaping teaspoon flour, 1½ cups milk, two whole eggs. Whip one pint cream, serve on top and sprinkle with chopped nuts and maraschino cherries.

STRIKINGLY SMART THIS TREATMENT OF STRIPES.

The gown that is not individual this spring is not modish. Much individuality is evinced in this treatment of striped taffeta—black and white, with a sash of orchid mauve moire. The long lines produced by the pointing and mitering of the silk should be most becoming to women of short stature.

Animal Jingles

FOR LITTLE FOLKS

BY ALICE CREW GALL

The Envious Ant.

An envious Ant remarked one day, "I do not understand
Why I should have to build my house out on that homely sand!

"I don't like living on the ground down in a little hole;
I want a house up in a tree, just like an Oriole.

"And if I can't have one like that, I don't want one at all;
I'd like to have a lovely nest, although I am so small."

And though his family scolded him, their words were all in vain;
He sat and sulked till suddenly it started in to rain.

The way the rain came pouring down was terrible to hear;
The little Ant ran in his house and fairly shook with fear.

His mother said, "You naughty Ant, I'm sure that you must be Glad that you're safe here under ground instead of in a tree."

"Oh, yes, indeed! I 'm very glad," the little Ant replied,
"And from this day I don't intend to be dissatisfied."

Now bear in mind this little tale, whatever else you do.
Remember that the things you have are mostly best for you.

PUT CREAM IN NOSE AND STOP CATARRH

Tells How To Open Clogged Nostrils and End Head-Colds.

You feel fine in a few moments. Your cold in head or catarrh will be gone. Your clogged nostrils will open. The air passages of your head will clear and you can breathe freely. No more dullness, headache; no hawking, snuffling, mucous discharges or dryness; no struggling for breath at night.

Tell your druggist you want a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream in your nostrils, let it penetrate through every air passage of the head; soothe and heal the swollen, inflamed mucous membrane, and relief comes instantly.

It is just what every cold and catarrh sufferer needs. Don't stay stuffed-up and miserable.—Adv.

STOPS HEADACHE, PAIN, NEURALGIA

Don't suffer! Get a dime pack- of Dr. James' Headache Powders.

You can clear your head and relieve a dull, splitting or violent throbbing headache in a moment with a Dr. James' Headache Powder. This old-time headache relief acts almost magically. Send some one to the drug store now for a dime package and a few moments after you take a powder you will wonder what became of the headache, neuralgia and pain. Stop suffering—it's needless. Be sure you get what you ask for.

CHRISTIAN WORK RELIEF SHIP READY TO LEAVE

The executive committee of the Albanian Relief Fund, to which the people of Plainfield have contributed so liberally within the past few weeks, makes the following announcement:

"The 'Christian Work Relief Ship' will be ready to leave port in a few days. The vessel has already been chartered, and is on the way to Halifax. On the arrival in New York harbor, where she is expected daily, her present cargo will be discharged, and she will be immediately reloaded with the flour and see corn, for the purchase of which the people in this community have so generously contributed. The executive committee desires that no time be lost in getting the ship, which is the only hope of Albania's starving thousands, on her journey.

"Persons who have not contributed, but expect to do so are requested to send their gifts at once to the Plainfield Trust Company, or directly to the Rev. Frederick Lynch, treasurer, No. 70 Fofth avenue, New York.

"The exact date of the relief ship's departure will be announced later."

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

"False Colors," a powerful drama, in which right triumphs, is the feature film at the Plainfield Theatre this afternoon and tonight. Reproduced on the screen by the Paramount Company, the play that scored such a marked hit when it appeared the first night on old Broadway is full of thrills and interesting complications.

The story covers a period of eighteen years and deals with the return of Lloyd Phillips, a noted actor, who has scored a triumph on the stage. While he is rceiving congratulations from admirers he hears of the birth of an infant daughter, but also learns that his wife is dying. He rushes to her bedside, but loses out in the race with death. Grieving, he abandons the infant and takes up his residence on a lonely island. Eighteen years later he returns to claim the child, but is told that she is dead.

Westfield.

Rev. G. Franklin Ream, formerly pastor of the Methodist church, moved with his family from here to Madison Monday, where he will make his home.

An entertainment and reception was given at Westfield Theatre last night under the auspices of Trinity church.

BORO FINANCIAL REPORT FOR 1914

Annual Resume Made Public With Four Specific Exhibits.

COMPARED

Statistical Survey for 1912, 1913 and 1914—Resources and Liabilities Indicated — Total Unpaid Taxes $37,197.61.

Many interesting comparisons are shown in the thirtieth annual report of the borough of North Plainfield, which has just made its appearance. The statistical resume is compiled by Loomis, Suffern & Fernald, certified public accountants, and has four exhibits, as follows: "A"—Statement of receipts and disbursements, January 1 to December 31, 1914; "B"—Statement of resources and liabilities December 31, 1914; "C"—Statement showing resources available for current liabilities; "D"—Comparative statement of disbursements for the years 1912, 1913, 1914.

The total receipts for the year amounted to $123,083.93, the tax levy being responsible for $80,492.41 of this amount. In the receipts gathered from other sources the liquor licenses brought the largest amount, which totalled $2,991. The cash balance remaining on January 1, 1914, was $47,967.43.

The disbursements for the general government totalled $6,587.97. The amount expended on street work was the highest department item and the police department came second. The streets cost the borough $9,860.30, and the police $6,212.52. The total disbursements were set at $158,878.29 and the cash balance on hand December 31, 1914, inclusive of receipts from taxes up to January 7, 1915, was $12,173.07.

The resources December 31, 1914 amounted to $257,274.03 and the liabilities $188,631.79. The surplus was $20,028.69. The unpaid tax item from 1896 to 1914 amounts to $37,197.61. The current resources totalled $44,496.70 and the current liabilities $39,613.64, the latter item including $21,613.64 special school tax. The excess current resources over current liabilities is set at $4,883.06.

The light account was the only one to show a decrease over 1913. In 1912 the borough expended $5,863.70 for illumination; in 1913 it spent $5,821.93 for this purpose, and last year $5,551.70 was needed. Thus a $312 decrease was effected in two years.

OBJECTS TO RULING MADE BY JUDGE ON THE CODICIL

With a view to setting aside the decision of Judge Martin in the Essex County Orphans' Court, involving the construction of the will of his brother, Harry G. Runkle, of this city, has made an appeal to Chancellor Walker. The testator, William Runkle, of Orange, who died January 31, 1914, leaving an estate of $2,500,000 and Randolph Rodman, of Orange, was named as the executor.

Harry Runkle objected to Judge Martin's ruling that the will and codicil be admitted to probate. He is represented by former United States District Attorney John W. Griggs, who contends that the codicil, against which objection is made, shows no evidence of having been annexed to the will at the time it was written, and also, that the will lacks evidence of having been offered to probate in the same shape in which it was left, by the testator and that it had lain in an open envelope which had shown signs of wear.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD GIRL BRIDE OF STANTON MAN

Miss Myrtle S. Randolph, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Randolph, of Maple avenue, South Plainfield, was married to Raymond L. Smith, of Stanton, N. J., by the Rev J. J. Allen at 7:30 last night. The ceremony, which was performed in the bride's home, was followed by a reception after which the couple left on a short honeymoon trip. They will reside in Stanton where the bridegroom is employed as a carpenter.

The couple was attended by Mr. and Mrs. Lewis D. Randolph. Miss Randolph wore a brown travelling suit.

MYSTERY SURROUNDS GIRLS' CONFESSIONS

Believed That Further Developments Will Soon Follow —a Lengthy Conference.

For over two hours this morning Mayor Leighton Calkins, Police Chief Kiely, City Judge DeMeza, Sergeant Higgins and Miss Mabelle Phillips, agent of the local Charity Organization, were closeted in Chief Kiely's office examining Lottie Burnett and Emma Backer, two young girls, arrested at the Central Railroad Station, Tuesday night, by Patrolman Roy E. Martin. During the interview two patrolmen and another young man were summoned into the room.

The two girls, both are under twenty, have given the police of the city considerable trouble, and have several time been arraigned. A charge of disorderly conduct is made this time. It is probable that something more will develop soon.

On their last appearance before Judge DeMeza the Backer girl was liberated with the understanding that she leave town, and the Burnett girl was released to appear the next morning. She fled from the city, and Sergeant Higgins went to Summit to bring her back. Arraigned before Judge Connolly, in Elizabeth, the girl pleaded for another chance, and she was sent to the home of her father in Kennebunkport, Me. She stayed there only a few days, however, and again sought the companionship of the Backer girl. Their return to Plainfield and subsequent loitering about the street was the cause for their apprehension.

The story related to the police by the girls is said to have caused a favorable impression among those in charge at headquarters, and their waywardness, it is said, has been largely due to influence exerted by men who should have known better. Following the session they were liberated, it being decided to give them another chance. They may later be called to appear as witnesses against those whom, it is said, they have implicated.

Their previous arrests were shrouded in mystery, and to Sergeant Higgins yesterday, one of the girls said: "I'm getting tired of being hounded. I'm going to show the whole bunch up."

SAFFORD TESTIFIES BEFORE GRAND JURY

Former Local Hotel Clerk Remanded Under Bail for Further Examination.

After signing waiver of immunity, Franklin B. Safford, the former Kensington Hotel clerk, who was arrested on a charge of perjury, growing out of his testimony that James W. Osborne once registered with Rae Tanzer at the local hostelry, for almost an hour and a half yesterday afternoon was before the Federal Grand Jury, which is investigating United States Attorney H. Snowden Marshall's charge that Rae Tanzer's $50,000 suit against Mr. Osborne was the result of a conspiracy. Mr. Marshall personally took charge of the questioning, but not an inkling could be obtained from him as to whether or not Safford stuck to his original story.

When arrested last Saturday Safford said he was still sure that he had identified the right man. When the jury was finished with him yesterday he was sent back to the Tombs, and Mr. Marshall said there was no reduction in the $12,000 bail in which he is being held. It is expected that the grand jury will finish the examination this afternoon.

It is believed by those who have followed the cast that indictments will be returned for conspiracy to obstruct and impede the due administration of justice and for conspiracy to induce perjury. Both of these crimes, on conviction, are punishable by two years' imprisonment and $10,000 fine, or any part of either, or both.

ELKS INSTALL.

These officers were appointed by the exalted ruler, Esquire, William Mulvey; inside guard, George Pope; chaplain, Edward Harding, Jr.; organist, William Smith, Jr.

LIVING CARTOONS TO BE A FEATURE

Well Known Residents to Pose as Figures at Suffrage Meeting at High School.

SEEK 'ANTI' VOLUNTEER

Senator Moses E. Clapp, Who is Campaigning in the State for Woman Suffrage, Will Speak Here Under Auspices of Men's League.

Senator Moses E. Clapp is to give his famous lecture, "Government By the People," in the High School Auditorium, Monday evening, April 12, under the auspices of the New Jersey Men's League for Woman Suffrage. This is to be the last appearance of the Senator in the State, after a series of lectures given in the interest of woman suffrage.

The women's cause has no more able and eloquent advocate in the country than Senator Clap, who has represented Minnesota since 1901. His influence has been strongly felt in the Sixty-third Congress when he was on the Woman Suffrage Committee of the Senate. In the opinion of the Senator New Jersey is the most promising Eastern State from the suffrage point of view. It is also the most important, because it goes to the vote two months before its neighbors.

The Men's League announces that the lecture will be preceded by a unique entertainment, for which H. C. White and the committee supporting him are responsible. A series of the best kown suffrage cartoons are to be represented on the stage, with Plainfield residents posing as the figures. Serving on the committee are Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Riley, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Jones, Mrs. F. O. Ball, Miss Eunice Watson, C. C. Wheeler, Miss Dorothy Parvin, Miss Helen Hyde, L. Fred Aungst, Tom Ball and others.

Among the cartoons selected are three by Lou Rogers, "Is This a Square American Deal?" "His Master's Voice," "Modern Representative Government." Another cartoon selected is, "It Makes a Difference Who Says It," in which Miss Eunice Watson, as a chained and helpless woman, appeals to the judge, Mr. Wheeler, to apply the principle "taxation without representation is tyranny." Miss Euice Watson, as Liberty, is to hold the torch to enlighten the judge.

One number on the program not yet anounced is to represent the anti-Suffragist. Although only one figure is required for this picture, no volunteer as yet is forthcoming. The committee's energies are being devoted to finding a Suffragist who will pose as an anti-Suffragist.

WILL DISCUSS PROBLEM OF EXCEPTIONAL CHILDREN

For the purpose of presenting the problem of exceptional children who are not feeble-minded, a mass meeting will be held Thursday evening, April 15, at 8 o'clock at the Burnett School Auditorium, Newark, which the school board has placed at the disposal of the National Association for the Study and Education of Exceptional Children.

The speakers will be Dr. Ira S. Wile, president of the association and a member of the New York School Board; Assistant Superintendent Corson, of Newark; City Counsel Frazer; Dr. Holmes, the chief medical inspector; Miss Anderson, supervisor of ungraded classes and Dr. M. P. E. Groszmann, education director of the national association, under whose auspices the meeting will be held. There will be special music.

ENTERTAINS AT A BARN DANCE AND CARD PARTY

Roy L. Force, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Force, of Mountain avenue, entertained a number of his friends at a "barn dance" and card party at his home last night. There were twelve present and dancing was enjoyed in the barn in the rear of the host's home, with music by a vitaphone. During the evening Miss Edna Mantz and Arthur Townley gave an exhibition of the fox trot.

After the last dance the party went to the house and enjoyed cards and refreshments which were served by the hosts' mother. Those present were the Misses Adelaide Ricketts, Helen Thompson, Edna Mantz, Helen Ryno, Marian Blair and Madeline Blair and Malcolm Sheppard, Harold Meade, William Seidel, Sidney Dunning, Alfred Townley and Roy Force.

NEW ENGINE "JINX" AGAIN PLAYS HAVOC

Official Test Unsatisfactory and Another is Ordered for Saturday.

The jinx that has been hovering over the new Nott pumping engine kept up its work yesterday afternoon, when the official test was started on the Elm street bridge. The trials were unsatisfactory, and as a result, the firm's officials will make another effort to dispell the "hard luck" next Saturday afternoon, when another test will be held. When the trial was started it was found that the magneto was not working and the batteries had to be used. On battery power the engine pumped 692 gallons of water a minute for one hour and ten minutes, the normal amount being 700 gallons a minute.

Present at the test were Councilmen John Cose and Charles Graves, Fire Chief T. O. Doane, officials from the Board of Fire Underwriters, who had the test in charge, and men from No. 4 engine house. As a result of the outcome of the test yesterday the underwriters stated that in the future a battery test, such as was resorted to in yesterday's emergency, would be required at all future trials.

During the hour the test was being conducted Councilman Graves took occasion to examine the tri-car apparatus, which came here from New York to witness the trials. This piece of department equipment resembles in many respects a motorcycle, although it has two front wheels, and carries a complete assortment of fire fighting paraphernalia, including 200 feet of chemical hose, axes, hand extinguishers, lanterns, etc. The councilman rode about town on the rear seat, and he was favorably impressed with the manner in which the novel engine operated.

EXHIBITION DANCES GIVEN AT CLOSING RECEPTION

The Friday afternoon and evening dancing classes of which Miss Eunice Watson is the teacher, gave a closing reception and dance at the Park Club last night the affair being largely attended by guests as well as the members of the two classes.

During the evening there were several pleasing exhibition dances, Miss Elinor Stewart presenting "The Saibari," a novel Japanese dance, and Miss Penelope Overton dancing "The Nightingale," while Miss Ruth Foulks demonstrated the "Pavlowa Gavotte." "The Venetian Furlana" was given by Miss Ruth Foulks and Miss Katherine Foulks.

After the exhibitions there was general dancing and later refreshments were served. The music which was a feature of the affair was furnished by Miss Jubilee Rowley.

MISS JUSTINA SMITH GIVEN A MISCELLANEOUS SHOWER

Miss Justina Smith, whose marriage to Thomas Derick, of this city, will take place the latter part of this month, was given a miscellaneous shower last night at the home of Miss Minnie Young, of 443 West Fifth street. The affair was a complete surprise to the bride-to-be, who receved numerous articles of linen, cut glass and china.

The parlor and dining room were prettily decorated in daffodils and sweet peas, yellow and white being the predominating colors.

Twentyfive of Miss Smith's friends were present, and the evening was spent in singing, dancing and playing games. The guest of the evening rendered several beautiful solos. At a late hour refreshments were served.

SMOKE—NO FIRE.

An excited citizen saw smoke issuing from one of the stores in the Hand building, corner East Fourth street and Watchung avenue, at 7 o'clock, last evening, and turned in a fire alarm from box 21, corner of North and Watchung avenue. When the firemen arrived they found that the occupant of the store had filled his stove with rubbish, set it on fire, and then went away leaving it. The volume of smoke was so great that the chimney could not let it out, and it spread through the store and issued through cracks in the door and windows. There was no damage.

MANY FEATURES FOR DANCE.

The dance to be given at the Plainfield High School tomorrow night for the benefit of Muhlenberg Hospital promises to be a great success. Frantzen's orchestra, of New York, will furnish music and Ritz will serve refreshments to order at small tables for a nominal charge. Admission tickets can be obtained at the door. The indications are that the attendance will be large.

WILL CELEBRATE LEE'S SURRENDER

Winfield Scott Post, G. A. R., Complete Plans for Observance of Event.

INTERESTING PROGRAM

Assemblyman W. N. Runyon and Dr. H. C. Krebs to Make Addresses—Vocal and Instrumental Music Will Be a Feature.

Final arrangements for the big celebration in observance of the fiftieth anniversary of the surrender at Appomattox were made at a meeting of the committee from Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., last night. All details have been taken care of, and nothing remains but a capacity audience in Reform Hall tomorrow night to make the affair a complete success.

Fire Chief T. O. Doane, who is commander of the post, will be the presiding officer at the celebration. Assemblyman William N. Runyon and H. C. Krebs, superintendent of the Somerset county schools, will be the principal speakers. The latter will give an historical account of what led to Lee's surrender to Grant and features of the actual occurrence, while Assemblyman Runyon will recount the result of the surrender and the progress of the reunited nation during the past fifty years. Both speakers are gifted orators and can be counted on to give stirring addresses.

The musical features of the program include orchestral numbers under the direction of Dr. J. F. Berg, and vocal selections by William G. Smith, Mrs. John Manley and other well known singers. Rev. Edward Ralston, of Netherwood Reformed church, will invoke the divine blessing at the opening of the exercises, and Father B. M. Bogan will pronounce the benediction. The committee, which is composed of all the officers of Winfield Scott Post, has worked very hard to provide a satisfactory program, and extends a general invitation to the public to attend. The larger the gathering the more they will feel that their efforts to instill patriotism in the hearts of the younger generation are appreciated.

In the eyes of the veterans of the Civil War, the surrender of Lee at Appomattox was even of greater importance than the signing of the Declaration of Independence. When the Confederate general handed over his sword, it implied the absolute finish of the rebellion and the real cementing of the United States into one big union, without which it would have been impossible to attain the success that has been its lot. The fiftieth aniversary of the great day has been designated by the national commander as being especially appropriate to remind the people of what the Civil War brought about, and no greater tribute can be paid the old soldiers than the attendance of old and young at their exercises in Reform Hall tomorrow night.

SAY DIVORCE LITIGANTS BURIED THEMSELVES HERE

That Mrs. Helen Barker and Gilbert Hicock, defendant and co-respondent respectively in a divorce action brought by Horsley Barker, buried themselves in Plainfield, N. J.," was the testimony given by one of the witnesses during the hearing before Justice Samuel T. Maddox in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, yesterday. Horsley Barker was a rising young druggist back in 1877, when he married, and later came to Plainfield, conducting the drug store now located at West Front and Grove streets.

According to the testimony, a year or so ago Mrs. Barker became interested in Hicock, who was her own age and that of her husband, who was three-score. One of the witnesses testified to having seen the woman and the co-respondent weeping because they could not elope. Later they found they could, and made the alleged trip to Plainfield, but how long love's young dream lasted does not appear. Judge Maddox took the testimony under advisement and will decide the matter in a few days.

WILL ARRAIGN DRIVER.

With a view to determining the responsibility for the crash between autos owned by the Plainfield Cab Company and the Castle Ice Cream Company the driver of the latter machine will be arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court tomorrow morning. The Castle truck badly damaged the local concern's taxi on Park avenue during the snowstorm of Saturday afternoon.

FIRST ANNIVERSARY OF FLOWER GUILD

Interesting Program Presented at the First Baptist Church.

Interesting addresses, together with reports for the year and an attractive program of music by the Plainfield High School orchestra, under the leadership of Mrs. J. C. Evans, were the features of the first anniversary of the Plainfield branch of the Plant, Flower and Fruit Guild held in the First Baptist church yesterday afternoon. Joseph Harper, president of the local branch, presided.

Mrs. William Stewart, of Montclair, national president of the organization, was the principal speaker of the afternoon, and she told of the great work being accomplished throughout this country and in Lyons, France, where extensive relief work is being carried on among the wounded and sick soldiers. She explained somewhat in detail the purpose of the organization.

Rev. C. H. Mallery, of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, who was present at the organization's first meeting, made a few remarks in which he emphasized the excellent results that have been accomplished by carrying fruit and flowers to the sick and "shut-ins." He advocated a plan whereby committees could be appointed for various sections of the city and a central committee to which reports would be made, thus carrying out the work in a systematic way. Mr. Mallery also praised the local newspapers for the help they have given in all lines of religious work.

Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong, pastor of the First Baptist church, spoke of the meaning of flowers, adding that they are more appealing than music or poetry. He believed them to be one of the greatest creations of God, to be enjoyed by poor and rich alike.

The annual report for the year was read by Mrs. L. M. Case. This showed how extensively the work has been carried on in Plainfield among the sick. She made an earnest appeal for united support of the organization. Robert Love led in the congregational singing, Rev. C. L. Goodrich, of the Congregational church, read the Scripture lesson, while Rev. Edward S. Ralston, of the Netherwood Reformed church, offered prayer. After the meeting there was a social hour.

$5,000 GARAGE FIRE ORIGIN A MYSTERY

Handsome Structure in Watchung Destroyed by Late Afternoon Blaze.

Fire, the origin of which is a mystery, did $5,000 worth of damage to the handsome garage and chauffeur's quarters owned by Ora B. Cloates, on Hillcrest road, Watchung, shortly before 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Included in the loss is the two story structure, the furnishings of the chauffeur's apartment, a large quantity of hay and a consignment of potatoes.

When the fire was discovered the entire second floor of the place was in flames and a call was sent to the Watchung Chemical Company who responded with an autq apparatus. The firemen's efforts were directed toward saving the residence nearby and the garage was almost totally destroyed. A gasoline tank, which had just been filled with 100 gallons of the fluid, was protected from the flames.

LAST MUSICALE.

The last Biltmore musicale will take place in the ball room of the Hotel Biltmore, Friday morning, April 23. This will be a costume recital, and the artists who will appear are Lucrezia Bori, soprano, Andreas de Segurola, baritone, and Rosina Galli, premiere danseuse, all of the Metropolitan Opera Company.

MRS. DUNHAM LAID AT REST.

The body of Mrs. Eliza Dyer Dunham, widow of George H. Dunham, who died at her home last Monday, was brought to this city today and burial was made in Hillside cemetery at noon. Funeral services were held from her late residence, 19 West Eighty-first street, New York city, yesterday afternoon.

LEAVING THE CITY.

Mrs. James Stewart, of Grant avenue, whose husband died in January last, will leave tomorrow for Montreal, Canada, where she will reside in the future, making her home with relatives. Mr. Stewart at the time of his death was assistant superintendent of the Pond Shop foundry.

GERMANS GIVE UP THEIR ATTACKS

Have Failed in Region of Kosciowa, Russia, After Suffering Great Losses.

FIGHTING IN FRANCE

Terrific Artillery Duels Between Allies and Germans in Belgium—Progress Between Meuse and Moselle by French—Aviator Killed.

Petrograd, April 8—The following official statement was given out here today:

"German attacks in the region of Kosciowa and Roznanka have ceased. There have been no attacks in that district since March 27. The German operations in that sphere were carried on with a view to breaking our front. They began about February 1 and for eight weeks they vainly attempted to take our positions by assault. The German regiments' operations in this region, in consequence of the enormous losses caused by our stubborn resistance, changed their compositions three or four times. Recognizing the uselessness of further attacks and alarmed by their heavy losses the Germans finally abandoned their efforts to pierce our lines."

Paris, April 8.—Hard fighting is reported from all parts of the battle front in an official communique issued by the French War Office today. Terrific artillery duels between the Allies and the Germans are taking place in Belgium and there is great activity in the Valley of the Aisne. East of Rheims the French have maintained their gains against furious German counter attacks. In the Forest of Brule the French stormed a German trench. In the Woevre district, between the Meuse and the Moselle rivers, the French claim further progress despite the stubborn resistance of the Germans.

Constantinople (via Berlin), April 8.—A torpedo boat destroyer and a cruiser were damaged by Turkish shells when a squadron of the Anglo-French fleet bombarded the Turkish works at the western entrance of the Dardanelles on Sunday, it was officially announced today.

Amsterdam, April 8.—A German aeroplane which had bombarded Bergues, ten miles south of Dunkirk, France, was shot to earth at Stennworde, Belgium, today, and the aviator and observer were killed.

A German submarine seriously damaged put into the naval base at Zebrugge recently. It was so badly injured that it was sent to Antwerp to be rebuilt.

Berlin, April 8 (by wireless).—The following statement was given out at German Headquarters today: "Fighting between the Meuse and Moselle continues. All French attacks at the following points in the Woevre plain failed: On Combres Heights, near Selouse Forest, north of St. Mihiel, in Ailly Forest, near the Forest line, west of Apremont, north of Flirey, and west of and in Priest Wald. The French losses along their entire front are enormous without their having obtained the slightest success.

"Eastern Theatre—There are no important operations in the East. Bad weather and bad roads make movements almost impossible."

London, April 8—The Government Press Bureau made the following official announcement today:

"A skirmish between Turkish cavalry and British forces is reported from the region east of Elkancara, but as far as known there were no casualties on either side."

An official contradiction of the allegation that the Steamer Falaba was armed is contained in a statement given out by the Press Bureau today. The statement adds that but five minutes was given to clear the liner which was impossible.

The great eastern army has announced that a bi-weekly passenger service between London and the Hook of Holland will be resumed next week.

ADDRESS POSTPONED.

Owing to the illness of Samuel Ridout the usual gospel address given by him on Thursday, at 8 p. m., in the room, 209 East Front street, will be discontinued for this evening. A meeting will be held, however, at 8 o'clock to which all are cordially invited. Due notice will be given regarding the Sunday evening address.

STATE BOARD MEETING.

The State Board for the Equalization of Taxes will meet to hear Union county appeals in Elizabeth, Wednesday, April 21. There are a number of appeals from Plainfield and Fanwood taxpayers and these will be heard at that time.

ITALIAN LABORER ALMOST BURIED IN SEWER TRENCH

An Italian working in the sewer trench on Third street between Washington and Lincoln avenues, where the steam digger is now at work, was almost entirely covered with earth shortly before noon yesterday when the sidewalls of the trench caved in just as they were about to be braced. The man was covered to such an extent that he could not see. Under the direction of Inspector G. Sumner Smith the earth was removed with dispatch from about the man's head so that he could breathe and then it was dug from about him as quickly as possible. When he was finally assisted out of the trench he collapsed.

Dr. Cooley was summoned and administered restoratives upon his arrival. The fellow was then taken to the doctor's office where a careful examination revealed a fractured rib and a possible fracture of a leg.

This is the second serious accident that has occurred since the sewer work started. In addition there has been four minor accidents.

Willie Maier, the three-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph M. Maier, of North avenue, is suffering from an abscess under his right eye.

Miss Gertrude Scandell, daughter of Hiram Scandell, has accepted a position at Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

George T. Schenck, the North avenue grocer, was at his store yesterday for the first time in over three weeks. Mr. Schenck was confined to his home during that period with bronchitis and heart trouble.

Margaret Eckert, daughter of Contractor and Mrs. H. B. Eckert, is confined to her home on Washington avenue suffering with throat trouble.

The spring dance that the Crescent Tennis Club planned to hold this month has been postponed.

GIVES UP TEACHING.

Miss Bessie Outterson, a teacher in the Lincoln School, after a lengthy illness at her home at Stroudsburg, Pa., has decided to give up teaching this year.

Miss Bessie Lindsey, teacher of the reception grade of the Lincoln School, is ill with the grip at her home at Plainfield. Miss Grace Barker is substituting for Miss Lindsey.

GIVEN SURPRISE PARTY.

Irene Titus, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Titus, of Washington avenue, was tendered a surprise party last evening at her home by 40 of her friends from this place and surrounding towns. The party was arranged by Ronald Noble, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Noble, of Front street, and was in honor of Miss Irene's fourteenth birthday anniversary. The evening was pleasantly passed with games and music.

Refreshments were served late in the evening. The centerpiece of the table was a large birthday cake with white icing, made by George Zink, the local baker.

Mrs. William H. Snyder, of Penfield place, who has been ill for several months, has been showing steady improvement since Sunday and the family is greatly encouraged.

Mrs. George W. Churchill, of Washington avenue, has practically recovered from the effects of her recent severe illness.

Mr. and Mrs. Stephen T. Kennedy, who have been making their home with Mr. Kennedy's mother, Mrs. Ella Kennedy, of Washington avenue, are planning to move to Plainfield the first of the month.

Miss Lillian Fisher, of the Mansion House, has returned from Lebanon, where she visited relatives.

The Apgar Construction Company has been awarded the contract of erecting a $14,000 house for C. D. Manning, of Plainfield, at Elizabeth.

Albert Maurer, son of Edward Maurer, of Madison avenue, returned to Bordentown to resume his studies at the Bordentown Academy after spending his Easter vacation at his home.

John P. Faber, accompanied by Instructor Nicolaysen, motored to Newark Tuesday in his new car and successfully passed the examination for his license.

MRS HEBARD IMPROVING.

Mrs. Abram Hebard, of Washington avenue, who had several bones broken in a hand last Thursday when a window in her home dropped on that member, the result of a sash cord breaking, is doing as well as can be expected. Mrs. Hebard will be unable to do anything for five weeks. Dr. Rogert L. Cooley is attending her.

GETS ANOTHER CONTRACT.

Contractor H. B. Eckert is excavating for a cellar of another house on Third street, near Washington avenue. The type of houses that Contractor Eckert is erecting there would be a credit to any place.

Mrs. Mary Guest, of Madison avenue, is on the sick list.

A. E. Smith is confined to his home on Front street with throat trouble and a general run-down condition.

Miss Edna Hardcastle, teacher of the third grade of the Lincoln School, is confined to her home at Somerville with the grip. Miss Zella Kelly is substituting for Miss Hardcastle.

FANWOOD TO PRINT REVISED ORDINANCES

Council Will Collect Present Laws and Adopt Several New Ones.

The question of the adopting and revising of ordinances formed the chief issue at the April meeting of the Fanwood Borough Council, held last night. After consulting with W. R. Coddington, borough attorney, it was found that the recently perfected dog ordinance will stand. The borough clerk was instructed to be ready to issue licenses by May 1. The tags and form blanks are now being prepared. A copy of an ordinance that will govern and provide for the licensing of junk dealers, circuses and peddlers or exhibitors was presented to the Council, and after a few minor changes, will be brought up for first reading at the next meeting. Following the passing of a resolution by the Council providing for the printing of all of the borough ordinances under one cover, it was brought to light that there is at present no ordinance governing the police department or salary of officials, including recorder, overseer of the poor and assessor. The proper committee will draw up drafts of all the new ordinances needed at present and present them to the Council, after which they will be compiled in their entirety.

The resignation of William G. Britton, elected a member of the Council at the last election as a member of the Board of Health, was received and accepted. To fill the vacancy C. W. Fernald was appointed.

The street committee reported that it had finished the repairing of all of the macadamized roads, leaving nothingn more to be done on them until the annual application of oil. During the coming summer it is planned to macadamize a number of the side streets that have been opened recently. Tre first will be Watson road, from the firehouse to Russell road, which will be done during the coming month. The committee was authorized to have printed blanks for the issuing of permits for the digging up of roads for pipes or other purposes. Upon the suggestion of the borough clerk resolution was passed authorizing the purchasing of a desk and typewriter for the use of that official. A matter which has been brought up before was referred to the proper committe for the gathering of further information and to be brought up at the next meeting in connection with the establishing of a call box or signal at a central point in the borough for the purpose of enabling anyone needing the service of Marshal Logan during the night to get in communication with him. The present plan provides for the building of a box to contain a telephone on some pole, presumably near the railrod station. If a party should need Logan the telephone central would be able to light a bulb on the pole, which the marshal could see from a distance, and on answering the 'phone, know where he was wanted. A balance of $2,233.21 was reported by the treasurer.

The weekly meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society of the All Saints' Episcopal church was held at the home of Mrs. H. P. Robinson, on North avenue, yesterday, when the usual profitable period of sewing was spent, following the business meeting.

Mrs. Augustus Sheelen, of North avenue, is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Emma Kent, of Greenville.

Miss Rose Thomae, of North avenue, is entertaining her cousin, Miss Thomae, of Bound Brook.

Mr. and Mrs. George Estelle, of Jersey City, are visiting the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Ford, Sr., of Montague avenue.

Miss Claire Hall, a student at Mt. Saint Mary college, has been spending the past week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Hall, of the borough, who are residing in New York for a number of months.

Miss Ida Whitehead is detained at her home on Martine avenue by illness.

Mrs. William Meyer, of Stout avenue, has been entertaining her sister, Miss Grace Debele, of Plainfield.

Now that the weather will permit work will be started shortly on a number of improvements to the Westfield Golf Club, near the border line between the township and Westfield. The golf course is to be enlarged and the tennis courts put in excellent shape. Night tennis, which was introduced at the club last summer, will be made possible for the coming season by the addition of new high-powered lights.

William H. Hoar, mayor of Fanwood borough, will leave with his wife and two daughters tomorrow on route for California, where they will visit the Panama-Pacific Exposition. Mr. Hoar expects to be gone for several months and during that time the duties of office will fall on Thomas Norton, president of the Council.

Clarence Bettman, a former resident, but now living at Deal, has been visiting friends in the borough.

Owing to a number of the local members of the Fanwood Township Sunday-school Association having to attend a meeting in Plainfield on Monday night the regular monthly open meeting of that body will be postponed, probably until Tuesday night, when it will be held in the Episcopal church. A report of the still proposed religious canvass will be made. Interest seems to have dwindled in that project, although the executive board of the association is still endeavoring to bring it to a point where it will become a reality.

Rutgers Neilson, a local student at N. Y. U., returned to his studies today, after the annual spring vocation.

Warrenville.

A surprise party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Zimmerman, of Springdale, last night, in honor of their daughter, Tillie. Dancing and games were enjoyed and at a late hour lunch was served. Those present were the Misses Gussie and Mayme Meyers, Mayme Alletta, Addie Anderson, Clara and Hettie Hahr, Maribel Mundy, H. Frawley, Anna Freiday, Minnie Steffens, Myrtle Cooper, Helena Hahr, Tillie and Emma Zimmerman, Messrs. Harry Williams, Chauncey Flammer, Edward Miller, Herman Meyers, "Ted" Cooper, Rudolph Steffens, Leslie and Bert Toms, Ralph Mundy, John Scott, John Cooper, Willie Zimmerman, Claude Harrison, Dan Scott and Mr. and Mrs. Zimmerman. The party was a complete surprise and was arranged by Miss Gussie Meyers and Herman Meyers.

Charles Fritts, who has been visiting relatives in New York city, has returned.

Miss Anna Zwiner, who has been operated on for appendicitis in a Jersey City hospital, expects to return to her home with Mrs. Kate Herlich, this week.

Rev. George Bowers is confined to his home by a severe cold.

Miss Frances Littell, of Elizabeth who has been visiting Mrs. John Bowers, has returned to her home.

The sale of H. B. Tapscott brothers, which was to have taken place last Saturday, at the Washington House stables, was postponed until Saturday, April 10.

Harry Williams, who is working in Millington, visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Williams, last night.

Mr. and Mrs. John Cooper entertained on Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Walter Scriven and children, of Plainfield; Mr. and Mrs. E. Becker, Elmer Scriven and Harry Smalley.

Harry Woods, of New York city spent Sunday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eli Woods.

Mrs. Jennie Hall, of Newark, and Mrs. Eliza Stites, of Plainfield, visited friends here over the week-end.

South Plainfield.

The farm and personal property belonging to the late Samuel K. Manning on the road leading from South Plainfield to Stelton will be sold at public auction next Wednesday.

The many friends of Miss Lorena Harris is elated over the fact that she was awarded third prize in the special prize contest to the candidates for the Panama Exposition trip given by the Daily Press.

Mr. and Mrs. Verne Arnts are entertaining Mrs. Arnts' mother, from East Bangor, Pa.

John McDonough, of New York, is the guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Galligan, for a few days.

A valuable farm horse, owned by William Van Ness, of Alton, was stricken ill on Front street yesterday. The horse is now in Manning Brothers' barn in a critical condition.

The Misses Ruth and Grace Boss have returned home after a visit with friends in Perth Amboy.

Edward Ripgee, of Lehighton, Pa., moved into the house owned by John Geary yesterday.

William Shields has returned home after spending a few days with his aunt, Mrs. George Thomas, at South Amboy.

Miss Marie Soper is enjoying her Easter vacation with her sister, Mrs. A. L. Kelley, of Plainfield.

Mrs. Walton Smith and daughter, Marion, are spending a few days with Mrs. Smith's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Pace, of Martinsville.

Miss Nellie McDonough is the guest of her aunt, in New York, for a few days.

Harry Klinger has resigned his position as operator in the Lehigh Valley tower and has accepted a position with a responsible firm in New York.

Peter McDonough, of Plainfield, is spending a few days with his aunt, Mrs. William Hamilton.

Miss Mary Kaine, of Plainfield, is the guest for a few weeks with Mr. and Mrs. P. F. Kaine.

Watchung.

The monthly meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association will be held this evening in the Watchung School Auditorium. William I. Mogey, of Interhaven avenue, will speak.

Miss Helen L. Schmidt has been visiting at Union and Springfield.

The Misses Carol and Lucy Hughes have been visiting in East Orange.

Mrs. Frank Moore and daughter, Miss Alice, have returned home from Brooklyn.

Mr. and Mrs. Ora Beverly Coates have closed their New York home on Riverside drive and opened their home here.

Mrs. Francis Bartels and daughters have been visiting in Rahway.

The anti-suffrage meeting will be held in the Watchung School Friday evening, April 16, instead of this week as scheduled. Mr. Matthews will be the speaker.

The first annual meeting of the Mary E. Wilson Memorial Union church was held last evening in Wilson chapel. Encouraging reports were given by the officers and various committees. The church membership now includes seventy-five members. A roll call by the secretary was answered by a large majority. George Dinans, president of the church organization, presided. The following executive board were elected: George W. Winans, George T. Hughes, John Mobus, Harry B. MacDonald, William E. Patte, Henry R. Kennedy, John Herrmann, Ephraim S. Ackor, Melvin H. Cleaves and Charles E. Spier. Harry B. MacDonald was also elected trustee to serve three years. After adjourning, refreshments were served by the Ladies' Aid Society.

Y. W. C. A. GIRLS TO FORM BALL NINE

Miss Marion Mair Will Do Mound Work for Association Aggregation.

Agitation is rife among the girl athletes of the Y. W. C. A. to organize a feminine baseball nine, and judging from the number of girls who have signed up their intention of entering the national pastime, the association will have an unusually strong team to put on the diamond this year. Practice will start Saturday afternoon, on the Belmont avenue field, under the personal supervision of Miss Marion Mair and Miss Elizabeth Wetherell. The former, who is a well known follower of sports, will hold the pitching position for the nine. Miss Mair was one of the star guards on the basketball aggregation this season, and if her indoor ability is taken as a criterion, she will perform wonders on the baseball diamond. She has been practicing for the past two weeks, and spectators say she is as adept in throwing the ball as many of the best male pitchers in this section.

The following girls will be out for the initial practice Saturday afternoon: Miss Elizabeth Wetherell, Miss Marion Mair, Miss Margaret Hawkins, Miss Gertrude Mair, Miss Ethel Blazier, Miss May Doughty, Miss Marion Doughty, Miss Evonnie Harrigan, Miss Elsie Kurzhals, Lora Smith and Clara Smith.

RICE WINNER OF FIVE BACK PLAY

Annexes Three Points Last Night and Ties Fisher for Monthly Prize.

C. A. Rice took three points in the handicap five-back play last night, his score of 197 being the biggest returned. He made an actual mark of 184, and was aided with a 13 handicap. A. M. Abbott took second honors with a mark of 170 plus 5.

H. K. Dumont was awarded the remaining tally, he being 4 points behind Abbott's mark. Dr. Hubbard was placed at scratch and made a total of 158. The scores follow:

Hall	106	40—146
Hammann	127	40—167
Dr. Hubbard	158	0—158
Dr. Clawson	112	35—147
C. A. Rice	184	13—197

WESTFIELD STARTS SATURDAY.

One of the noticeable features of the baseball schedule of the Westfield High School team, which has just been issued by the manager, is that North Plainfield does not appear on the list. These teams have always had it "hot and heavy" on the diamond and in all lines of sports, but the managers evidently could not come to satisfactory terms. The Westfield team opens the season Saturday with Kearny High School at Westfield. The schedule contains twelve games.

FINAL OF FIVE BACK TOURNEY.

The final night's play of the Park Club handicap five-back tournament, which has been in progress for the past four months, will be held on Thursday night, April 29, at which time a "big" time will follow the bowling. There will be a special program, and the prize winners will be awarded their prizes. This makes three more nights of the contest.

TENNIS TO BE ONE OF Y. W. C. A. SPORTS

Y. W. C. A. girls continue to enter in various sports, the latest being the organization of a tennis team to represent the local association. Mrs. James W. DeCraff, of Central avenue, has given the young women the use of her court for practice and games, and the girls will shortly be wielding the racquets. Miss Margaret Hawkins will probably represent the team in the singles, the young women being an adept in the handling of the racquet.

Contests with the Plainfield and North Plainfield High School tennis teams will be started, and it is possible that a tournament may be arranged for the city feminine tennis championship.

Y. M. C. A. BOYS HOLDING SEVERAL HIKES THIS WEEK

A number of the members of the Indian League of the Y. M. C. A. took a hike to Washington Rock yesterday, starting at 10 o'clock in the morning and returning at 3:45 p. m., when a swim was enjoyed in the pool. The party was accompanied by Physical Director Meermans, Secretary Glaentzer and Wendell Glover.

This morning Mr. Meermans and Mr. Glaentzer took out a party of College Leaguers for an all-day trip. The Ladies' Auxiliary of the association entertained the members of the Employed Boys' Class at dinner last night. There were about twenty present and Lindsay Bohl acted as toastmaster. The speakers were Seymour Day, Mr. Meermans and Mr. Glaentzer. Games were enjoyed in the boys' rooms after the dinner.

SPEAKS IN THE INTEREST OF LORD'S DAY ALLIANCE

T. B. Lindsay, of Rahway, spoke at the prayer meeting service of Trinity church last night in the interests of the Lords' Day Alliance. Mr. Lindsay is field secretary of the organization and presented its object in a very clear manner.

The organization is a national one and has been taken up in most of the Eastern States, gradually working Westward. Its purpose is to promote the better observance of Sunday and it also has strong views on the subject of Sunday recreation which is right in line with the work. The speaker was interesting throughout his talk.

AUTOS BADLY DAMAGED IN WEST END COLLISION

Two automobile runabouts, one owned by Harry Lude, of Clinton avenue, and the other by J. D. Loizeaux, crashed head on at South Second street and Clinton avenue this noon. Lude was thrown headlong into the roadway, but escaped with a bad shaking up and cuts and bruises. Mr. Loizeaux stuck to his seat and was unharmed.

The Lude car was almost totally wrecked from the manner in which it struck the opposing force. The Loizeaux machine had the wheels on one side ripped off and considerable other damage. The responsibility for the accident has not been fixed.

MRS. HAPNEY'S FUNERAL.

The funeral of Mrs. Philip Hapney, whose death occurred Sunday morning after a brief illness with pneumonia, was held at her late home at 216 East Second street, yesterday afternoon. The service was in charge of Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, of the First Methodist church, and was attended by many relatives and friends. Two solos, "Asleep in Jesus" and "Saved by Grace," were sung by Miss Etta Raybert. Many handsome floral tributes were extended, among them several set pieces. Burial was in Hillside cemetery, the pallbearers being Theodor Martin, William De Camp, William Julliard, James Strappe, Patrick Eganey and David Finegan.

HOPE CHAPEL HAS PROSPEROUS YEAR

Reports Presented and Officers Elected at Annual Meeting.

Reports as presented by the various societies and organizations of Hope chapel at the annual meeting of that institution held last evening indicated that the past year has been prosperous in every way. The church has at the present time a membership of 345, seventeen additions having been made during the year. The Sunday school has an enrollment of 551.

The reports of fifteen organizations, aside from the organized Bible classes, which carry on the institutional work of the church, all indicated that much had been accomplished in all lines of work, and that the finances were in excellent shape.

Neal Head and Samuel Cratsley were elected to the church ways and means committee to succeed Henry Keen and James Penney, whose terms expired, while Walter I. Firstbrook was elected to another term as church treasurer. Frank Rimmer was elected as clerk of the congregation.

WILL DESCRIBE MANUFACTURE AND USE OF CEMENT

The West End Civic Association will hold its montnly meeting tomorrow evening, in Washington School, at 8:15. Edgar F. Sheppard will address the meeting on the subject of the "Manuafcture and Uses of Cement."

It is especially requested that all members and those interested in the West End of the city to attend this meeting, as matters of importance to the residents will be brought up.

The association invites every one to its meetings, whether members or not, as special efforts are being put forth to make them attractive, as well as instructive.

Y. W. C. A. NOTES

The class in "The First Aid to the Injured" visited Muhlenberg Hospital yesterday afternoon for the purpose of visiting the different medical departments. Miss Jessie N. Cann, superintendent, escorted the young women through the building.

The Brussels Sprouts Club will hold a business meeting in the association parlors tomorrow night at 8 p. m.

PARK CLUB EASTER DANCE.

All preparations have been completed by the committee for the annual Easter dance of the Park Club which will be held in the clubhouse tonight. A large number are expected, including the members of the club and their friends. The reception room has been decorated for the affair, over one thousand attractive tulips being used. Evergreen trees and fruit blossoms add to the effect and a successful affair will udoubtedly result.

L. C. F. RANDOLPHS FUNERAL.

The funeral of Lewis C. F. Randolph, whose death occurred at the home of his son, Herbert L. Randolph, of Rutherford, will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 at the undertaking parlors, 111 West Fourth street. The service will be in charge of Rev. Edwin Shaw, of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, and interment will be made in Hillside cemetery.

MEN'S CLUB EUCHRE.

The Men's Association of the Heavenly Rest church will hold a progressive euchre and social in the Parish House tonight. The members and their friends are cordially invited. Following the play refreshments and a social hour will follow.

WILL ELECT OFFICERS.

The annual meeting for election of officers of the Plant, Flower and Fruit Guild will be held tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock in the Friend's Meetinghouse, corner Watchung avenue and Third stret.

LAND OF THE TURK

A Region Literally Teeming With Historic Interest.

THE HOME OF BIBLE EVENTS.

Stirring Scenes and Dramas Were Enacted Within the Confines of the Later Ottoman Empire—Mighty Babylon That All but Ruled the World.

No other people possess lands of such wonderful historic interests as the Turks, says the National Geographic Magazine. Occupying a region only a third as great in area as the United States, they have yet a territory within whose boundaries the greatest, the most influential events in human history have occurred.

The Bible with little exception is an account of the doings of people who never got beyond what have hitherto been the confines of Turkey. From a single corner of the Ottoman empire arose the Babylon that in its day all but ruled the world. From that same region envy and famine conspired to send the children of Abraham into Egypt, which until recently was embraced in the empire of the Ottomans. Thence, as they marched back from Africa to Asia through the wilderness of sin to the promised land, they never once set foot off of what came to be Turkish soil. And when the star of Bethlehem arose it stood over a manger on land that is now Turkish soil.

In Asia Minor once dwelt Croesus, whose name to this day expresses the last degree of wealth. Here was Pergamus, whose library in its period was the finest in the world, making such demands for papyrus that Ptolemy was led to prohibit the exportation of that commodity from Egypt. Under the reign of the Caesars Asia Minor alone contained 500 populous cities, enriched with all the gifts of nature and adorned with all the refinements of art.

The civilization of the Hittites, whose lands finally were occupied by the hosts of Israel; the civilization of Tyre and Sidon, the greatest colonizers of ancient times; the civilization of Egypt, rival of Persia and Chaldea in the value of the heritage it bequeathed to the future; the civilization of Constantinople and the Byzantine empire, in its day more gorgeous than any that had gone before—all found their home within the boundaries of what later came to be the land of the Turk. Mohammed and the religion which bears his name and now claims several hundred million adherents were also born in the Ottoman empire.

The greatest of these ancient empires was the Babylonian. The Babylonians built their civilization upon an irrigation ditch and made Babylonia a land teeming with people, the seat of magnificent cities and the home of a world conquering empire. Babylonia rivaled the valley of the Nile in production. Every Greek traveler who wandered that way marveled at the luxuriousness of the crops of Mesopotamia. Even Herodotus hesitated to tell the story in its fullness lest the people for whom he wrote history might regard him as a nature faker. The hanging gardens of Babylon stirred the admiration of the travelers out of the west, so that they wrote them down as one of the seven wonders of the world. Nebuchadnezzar built them for his wife, Amytis, the beautiful Mede, to rescue her from her homesickness for her native Medean hills.

King Sargon, though he lived at the dawn of history, reviewed his reign much as a president of the United States or a great European sovereign might review his official career. He tells us that he restored ancient ruined cities and colonized them; that he made barren tracts of land fertile; that he gave his nation a splendid system of reservoirs, dams and canals; that he protected the needy from want, the weak from oppression, filled the nation's granaries with corn, brought down the high cost of living and found new markets for the nation's products.

Babylon's fortifications are said to have had a circumference of fifty-five miles, the outer wall of which was 350 feet high and 85 feet thick. The palace of Sargon II, covered about twenty-five acres, and its front was twice as long as that of the United States capitol. Forty-eight great winged bulls guarded its entrance, and upon its walls were more than two miles of sculptured slabs telling the story of the king's reign.

Turkey holds by an uncertain tenure a narrow strip of land on the Red sea coast of Arabia that is of great historic interest. Within its limits are the two holy cities of the Mohammedans. Mecca was the birthplace of Mohammed and is visited yearly by thousands of pilgrims from Asia, Africa and Turkey in Europe. At Medina, which lies about 270 miles north of Mecca, is the tomb of Mohammed, who died there.

Damascus, the capital of Syria, is one of the most ancient cities in the world and is a vast conglomeration of mosques and bazars, and northwest of Damascus are the mighty ruins of Baalbek.

A NEEDLESS PANIC.

According to report, many cotton planters now regret the "buy-a-bale" campaign that was started early last fall, realizing that their business was hurt rather than stimulated by such an appeal to the country at large for help.

Unquestionably there is more to be lost than to be gained by virtually advertising in such a manner that an article of commerce is a drug on the market, whether the sale has been checked by war or other accident. The inevitable result is a holding back for expected lower prices on the part of those actually in a position to buy. Moreover, it is a well-founded principle recognized in every business that optimism, a cheerful show of lack of concern, a pretense of greater prosperity than really exists, invites custom that is apt to be repelled by the opposite policy.

The low price of cotton early in the season was the result of reported over-production, and the war that caused the panic among cotton planters or the politicians representing them eventually proved to be almost a blessing. The interruption of shipping was soon past and now for four or five months the export of the staple has been reported in excess of what it was the previous year, while the price has been steadily advancing.

Cotton is needed in Europe not merely for clothing, but in the manufacture of explosives, and it is now said to be "going up in smoke on every battlefield." Of the total great crop of 16,645,000 bales, 12,500,000 bales, or three-fourths of the whole, had been sold or bargained for before the end of March. According to some authorities, the planters do not now hold more than 10 per cent. of the crop.

The scare among Southern farmers, caused by the interruption of cotton exports for two months, will have served a useful purpose if it should be long remembered as a forcible reminder of the unwisdom of putting too many eggs in one basket, and lead to that greater diversification of crops that is more often preached than practiced.

Governor Fielder, in a special message to the Legislature, told the members not to fool the people in the matter of the constitutional amendment for Assembly districts. If the Governor thinks for a minute that anyone is being fooled by the large majority of the men in both branches, he is very much mistaken. The people have a very good idea as to what is going on, and unless there is a decided improvement before the adjournment next week, many Legislators are going to suffer when they come up for re-election.

The appropriations committee, according to report, has cut the State budget for 1915-1916 nearly two million dollars, which means that it will be run on that much less money next year, than is the case during the present fiscal year. It shows one of two things; either that the Democrats have been most extravagant in their handling of the State finances during the past few years, or some of the State departments are to be compelled to get along with insufficient funds. We are inclined to believe that the former explanation is the proper one.

The Board of Trade has decided to send a committee to Trenton to find out why the bill has not passed the Assembly which will grease the ways for the consolidation of the city and borough. Councilman Milne, of the borough, thinks nothing should be done about the matter until after an investigation has been made by the Council. In the meantime the Legislature is planning to adjourn next week. Unless there is some mighty quick action nothing will be done about the matter.

Plainfielders are perhaps as proud of their trees as of any other attraction of the city. Just at this season of the year there is unusual interest and activity on the part of residents to improve the condition of the trees, and for that reason we will present on Saturday a very timely editorial by an expert on that subject. He is a graduate of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, and his advice will be well worth heeding on the part of every resident of the city.

Both the Chamber of Commerce and Board of Trade have elected new presidents recently. Now if the two new executives would only get together and have the two combined, an organization of real power in the community would be established. There has been too much working at cross purposes by the two bodies, and while they are both in existence, little or nothing will be accomplished for Plainfield.

Governor Fielder has received his first rebuke from the Legislature in the passage by the Senate of the bill repealing the branch bank act, over the Governor's veto. It is said that the House plans to do the same thing, making it impossible for the big banking "trusts" to go into the various counties and interfere with the business of the local banks.

After the way in which Sergeant Higgins took care of a wild man who started to beat up Judge De Meza the other day, we're inclined to believe that Jess Willard will have to look to his laurels.

We thought "Bill" Jeffrey had the job of President of the Board of Trade for life. His resignation certainly was a surprise.

Soon be time to get the screens out.

MRS. FRANK W. JONES IS RE-ELECTED PRESIDENT

Mrs. Frank W. Jones was re-elected president of the Brightside Circle of King's Daughters at the annual meeting of the organization held at the home of Mrs. W. B. Vail, of Mountain avenue, yesterday afternoon. The other officers elected were: Mrs. Emily Cory, vice-president; Mrs. C. Frank French, secretary, and Mrs. Daniel Clawson, treasurer. During the afternoon a reading was given by Miss Elizabeth Claypoole.

Plans were made for a social to be held at the home of Mrs. C. Frank French, of Washington avenue, next Tuesday evening, from 8 to 10 o'clock. All of the members and their friends are invited to attend. Mrs. Jones and Mrs. Vail will be in charge of the entertainment. The object of the social is to raise money for a part of the circle's annual contribution to the Visiting Nurses' Association and the Day Nursery.

LYDIA CHAPTER COMPLETES ARRANGEMENTS FOR DANCE

The committee in charge of the annual ball to be given by Lydia Chapter, No. 41, O. E. S., at the Park Club, Monday evening, April 12, has completed all arrangements, and according to expectations, it will be one of the most successful social events of the kind ever held by the chapter. Van Eps will furnish music for dancing.

The committee in charge comprises Mrs. W. R. Causbrook, Mrs. George Wescott, Mrs. A. E. Force, Mrs. Arthur McVoy, Mrs. Elizabeth Woodard, Mrs. E. W. Poinier and Miss Stein. Tickets may be purchased from any member of the committee.

TRY A PRESS WANT AD

TO DISCUSS MANY PHASES OF CHARITY

Miss Phillips to Speak at State Conference in New Brunswick.

The New Jersey Conference of Charities and Correction will be held in New Brunswick, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, April 25, 26 and 27. Special groups of people have been invited to participate in the following meetings: Opening meeting, Sunday, 3:30 o'clock, Opera House, address, "Conservation of Human Resources," by John Greer Hibben, president, Princeton University; Sunday evening, 8 o'clock, union services, Second Reformed church, topic, "Relation of the Church to Public and Private Charity," address, Rev. Dr. John McDowell, Newark.

Monday morning, 10 o'clock, Second Reformed church; topic, "Conserving the Brain Power of the State"; addresses, "Social Utility, the New Standard of Conduct," "Fundamental Causes of Dependency" and "The Value of a Knowledge of Mental Hygiene to Teachers." Monday afternoon, 2 o'clock, Second Reformed church; topic, "Preventive and Protective Care of Juvenile Delinquents"; addresses, "The Girl and The Boy"; Monday evening, 8 o'clock, Rutgers gymnasium, topic "Prison Reform and Prison Management"; address, "A View from the Inside"; discussion by Joseph P. Byers, of Trenton; Dr. Frank Moore, of Rahway; Robert N. Heath, of Hackensack; William H. Thompson, of Morristown, and Amos H. Radcliffe, of Paterson.

Tuesday morning, 10 o'clock; topic, "Public and Private Relief"; discussions, "From Viewpoint of Overseer of the Poor" and "From Viewpoint of Private Charities." Miss Mabelle Phillips, of the Plainfield Charity Organization, will take part in the latter. Tuesday afternoon, 2 o'clock; topic, "Hospital Work in New Jersey." Henry L. DeForest, of this city, is on the program committee.

"FLY BOOTH" INTERESTS MANY AT BABY EXHIBIT

The second highest attendance since the opening of the "Baby Saving Show" in the Stirling Building on Park avenue was recorded yesterday. The sidewalk in front of the store where the show is held was decorated nearly all afternoon with a collection of baby coaches and youngsters whose mothers were inside.

THE PEARS OF BABYHOOD

At this time of the year the fly problem begins to manifest itself, and the booth on flies was the subject of much attention. Though people are still wearing overcoats, the fly problem should be attacked by pursuing the winter fly, who manages to survive the winter in cracks and crevices in houses where it is warm all winter, and now is the time to kill them, while they are still stupid and sluggish.

A large photograph of a fly is shown, in which can be seen the hairs and sticky pads on the feet which make it possible for a fly to stand on the ceiling. When these are dirty, he drops off the surface he is standing on.

THOMAS J. MERCIER DIES AT HIS HOME IN SCOTCH PLAINS

Thomas J. Mercier, a well known resident of Scotch Plains for many years, died at his home on Grand street, that place, this morning. Mr. Mercier was 77 years old and was a landscape gardner. For the past thirty years he had been in charge of the beautiful grounds surrounding the home of Dr. J. Ackerman Coles, one of the show places in this vicinity.

Beside his wife, Mr. Mercier is survived by four daughters, Mrs. William Skinner and Miss Mary Mercier, of this city, and the Misses Isabelle and Maude Mercier, residing at the parental home. There are also the following brothers and sisters: Victor Mercier, of Berkeley Heights, Edward Mercier, of Plainfield; Mrs. Andrew Schaefer, of Scotch Plains; Mrs. Floyd Simmons, of Berkeley Heights, and Mrs. John Wahl, of Westfield.

The funeral will be held at the late home in Scotch Plains, Saturday morning at 8:30 and in St. Mary's church, this city, at 9 o'clock. Burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

MISS WRIGHT CELEBRATES 96TH BIRTHDAY ANNIVERSARY

Miss Sarah McKissick Wright, of 83 Manning avenue, quietly observed her 96th birthday anniversary at her home yesterday. Miss Wright received a large number of callers at her home who extended congratulations and also received a large number of post cards.

She was born in Millstone on April 7, 1819, but has lived in the borough for many years. Her parents both died when she was quite young and she has lived with her uncle, Dr. McKissick, who was a physician. For her age Miss Wright is unusually active and takes especial interest in current event topics. She is the oldest member of Grace M. E. church, of the borough, and attends the services regularly.

INTERN EITEL FRIEDRICH AT NORFOLK NAVY YARD

Washington, April 8.—Orders were issued today by Secretary of the Navy Daniels for the interning of the Prinz Eitel Friedrich at the Norfolk Navy Yard. The instructions were sent by wireless to Admiral Fletcher.

Fearing destruction by the cruisers of the Allies Commander Thierichens of the Prinz Eitel Freidrich last night notified Collector of the Port Hamilton at Newport News, and Rear Admiral Helm, of the Battleship Alabama, that he would intern his vessel. Mr. Hamilton immediately telephoned the Treasury Departmen tthe decision of the German naval officer.

The German commander in the communication sent to the American people intimated plainly that he had expected a German squadron to appear outside the Virginia Capes and engage the Allied fleet, giving him an opportunity to make a run for the open sea. The German ships having failed to put in an appearance, commander Thierichens said that he would not sacrifice his crew and ship in a hopeless effort to leave port.

U. S. ASTOR THEATRE

Patrons of the U. S. Astor Theatre have two big treats in store for them in the closing attractions for this week, today's special feature being "The Idler," with Charles Richman in the title role, and for Friday and Saturday the beautiful Mutual Master production of "Enoch Arden," Tennyson's appealing poem, which had won the hearts of millions of readers long before the photoplay was dreamed of as an additional attraction of the theatre.

The dramatization of "Enoch Arden" for the film has been accomplished with exquisite taste, and not a line of the poem is lost in the screen production, so smoothly does one reel follow the other in the original sequence. There is the quaintly attractive fishing village of old New England, with its simple fisher folk. The boom of breakers on the beach all but makes itself heard to the ear as the play proceeds, and back to memory come trooping the smooth-running verses of the late poet laureate of England. The tears are bound to come, unless one is particularly unfortunate in his share of human sympathy, and no one need be ashamed of such tears—it's a good sign to have them come.

The regular daily bill for the three days will be of the same high class that is now recognized by patrons of the theatre as being the unfailing policy of the management, comedy and drama from the leading producers of the country adding to the attractions of the special features.

CIRCUS OF ALL NATIONS AT MADISON SQUARE GARDEN

The Barnum & Bailey Greatest Show on Earth has opened the circus season for 1915, at Madison Square Garden and large crowds have attended every performance in New York city. As had been advertised it was truly "A Circus of All Nations," and the 480 representative artists brought from every part of the world, presented a program that has not been equalled before in the history of circus business.

The magnificent, new, spectacular pageant, "Lalla Rookh" was a most fitting prelude to the wonderful program that followed, and in the great display, the entire arena was filled with hundreds of gorgeously costumed characters all of whom celebrated in magnificent form, the departure of the beautiful princess, "Lalla Rookh" from the Royal Gardens of Delhi. Following immediately came three herds of war elephants presented by the first and only lady elephant trainers. Then hundreds of circus acts, nearly all new to New York, among which were the Six Riding Hannafords; Madam Bradua's Angel horses and dogs, Adgie and her lions, Pallenberg's wonder bears, Barnum and Bailey's Posing Horses and Living Statutes of Perfect Women.

Ce-Dora in the Golden Globe proved herself to be the most daring girl in the world and the ground and air was continually filled with hundreds of artists presenting novelty circus performances that went to form what has always been and is today, "The Greatest Show on Earth."

Residents of nearby cities must take advantage of the New York engagement in order to see the circus this year, as no exhibitions will be given in Brooklyn, in New Jersey or in Connecticut.

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

A production extraordinary is that which comes to the Plainfield Theatre tomorrow and Saturday is the presentation of "Du Barry," with Mrs. Leslie Carter playing her original role of Mme. Du Barry. The photoplay is in six parts as arranged by George Kleine, and is based on the drama as arranged and staged by David Belasco. When the production was first seen on the legitimate stage in New York city, Mrs. Carter scored the greatest success of her career, and the Belasco Theatre was crowded nightly for an entire season.

In the picture version "Du Barry" has lost none of its charm of intense dramatic action. The name of Belasco attached to anything in the theatrical world is a synonym for that which is best, and Mr. Kleine has followed out the wonderful producer's ideas in preparing "Du Barry" for the screen. This is possibly one of the picture treats of the year, and there is no doubt but that the Plainfield Theatre will be crowded at all performances tomorrow and Saturday.

More big features are coming to the Plainfield Theatre next week, and devotees of the silent drama have the following list to select from: Monday and Tuesday, Booth Tarkington and Harry Leon Wilson's story of the South in anti-bellum days, entitled, "Cameo Kirby," with Dustin Farnum in the title role; Wednesday, Charles Frohman's success, "The Conspiracy," with John Emerson appearing in the original role created by him in the stage version; Friday and Saturday, Mary Pickford, in a modern and original version of the century-old classic, "Cinderella."

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

Another of those Chaplin comedy pictures, "His New Job," is being shown at Proctor's Theatre this afternoon and tonight, in addition to the five-part Paramount, "The Pursuit of the Phantom," and the new change of vaudeville. "The Exploits of Elaine" is scheduled for tomorrow, and Saturday will bring another fine list of picture numbers, among them a Chaplin comedy. The Chaplin comedies are the talk of the town, and whenever one of them is presented at Proctor's it is absolutely certain that a big laughfest is bound to occur.

Miss Vivian Martin, one of the most popular of the leading camera actresses will be seen at Proctor's next Monday and Tuesday in one of the World Film Corporation's pictures, "The Arrival of Perpetua." It has been produced on a magnificent scale, and contains scenes and action never before embodied in one of these big films. Miss Martin has been seen at Proctor's on numerous occasions, and this announcement will be received with much pleasure by her large number of followers.

Eva Fay, who took Plainfield by storm when she appeared at the Casino in company with her husband, John P. Fay, is to be a vaudeville attraction at Proctor's Theatre within the near future. She will offer her thaumaturgic demonstration, which has set the whole world to wondering. Mrs. Fay was seen at Elizabeth recently, and played to such capacity audiences that she was compelled to give a return engagement. The announcement that she is coming here is already being widely discussed, and it is safe to predict that the attention she attracted eight years ago will be more than duplicated.

LOCAL PROPERTY SOLD.

Elizabeth, April 8—Two Plainfield tracts were disposed of yesterday at sheriff's sale. F. W. English was the purchaser of a plot on the southeasterly side of East Seventh street, southwest of Leland avenue, Plainfield, for $3,025. It was owned by William J. Robins, and Michael W. Boyle was complainant. Another tract in which Edith H. E. Foster was complainant and guardian, and Martin R. Van Duyne et als was defendant, went to the complainant for $3,100. It is located at Arlington avenue and West Third street.

MANY CASES OF RHEUMATISM NOW

Says We Must Keep Feet Dry, Avoid Exposure, and Eat Less Meat.

Stay off the damp ground, avoid exposure, keep feet dry, eat less meat, drink lots of water, and above all take a spoonful of salts to keep down uric acid.

Rheumatism is caused by poisonous toxin, called uric acid, which is generated in the bowels and absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine. The pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly, cold weather the skin pores are closed, thus forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate this uric acid which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and is used with excellent results by thousand of folks who are subject to rheumatism. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which overcomes uric acid and is beneficial to your kidneys as well.

AN OLD RECIPE TO DARKEN HAIR

Sage Tea and Sulphur Turns Gray, Faded Hair Dark and Glossy.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." You will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Everybody uses this old, famous recipe, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears and after another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.—Adv.

IN THE SPORTING SPOTLIGHT

FORTUNES in PREMIUMS for HARNESS RACES at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition

1—Hal Boy, 2:06¼, driven by Marion Childs and owned by Edward Peterson of Omaha. Hal Boy, the largest money winning pacer in the northwest in 1914, is an entry in both big pacing stakes and several class races at the exposition. 2—Maymack, 2:04½, holder of world's record for three-heat-race by a trotting mare and a starter in the free-for-all trot at the exposition. Maymack is owned by Rod McKenzie, the famous California turfman, and will be driven by Charlie De Ryder. 3—Walnut Grove, 2:0[illegible]¼, by Constantine, 2:12½. An entry in various races at the exposition, including the three big pacing stakes. Walnut Grove will be driven by A. F. Ruthven of Kansas City. 4—Fleeta Dillon, II, 2:08¾, holder of world's record for two-year-old pacing fillies. One of V. L. Shuler's entries in the Panama-Pacific International Exposition harness races.

While the various sport events held so far at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition have made the world sit up and take notice, there is one part of the list to come which is attracting the attention of some of the most prominent men in the United States and abroad. This is the program of the harness races to be held on the Exposition track in June, October and November. In arranging for these events the officials of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition took a step that had never been taken by past universal fairs and the move was one deserving great credit.

Two meetings are scheduled, a summer and fall schedule having been prepared. The first of these begins on June 5 and closes on June 19. The fall meeting opens on October 30 and runs until November 13 and the entry list to date shows that some of the greatest horses and drivers of the speedy sulky have tossed their hats into the ring for all these dates. Twenty-four days of racing have been provided for by the Exposition officials and considering that such meetings would be worth thousands of dollars to any Eastern track, the foresight of those who arranged the exposition schedule must be appreciated.

The prizes hung up are sufficient to attract the greatest drivers in the world and have done so. For the first meeting, which occupies eleven days in June, there is approximately $110,000 to be distributed among the winners of the thirty-three events. In only four of these have the entries already closed and these are confined to the younger set of two and three years old. These winners will take $12,000 of the big amount donated, leaving the kingly sum of nearly $100,000 to go after.

The conditions drawn up for these races are extremely liberal and make the cost to the owner slight in comparison with the prizes offered. As the first day in April will see the close of all entries, it would be well for all, who have not already signified their intention of entering, to do so with all possible haste There is one exception to this rule, however, the four topnotchers, because of their importance, having until June 1 to be selected. Each of these events are worth $20,000.

The wonderful responses that have come from the harness schedule have set at rest all doubts as to its success. Despite the fact that the big war in Europe will keep many important trotters at home, the entry list will be one of the largest ever known among American and Canadian candidates. Famous Eastern drivers, such as Alonzo McDonald and L. Shuler are already in California, grooming their entries for the big purses. McDonald is located at Pleasanton, both busy with active training, something they could not accomplish in the East with the cold weather prevailing there.

The advisory board chosen by the executive committee, which was itself named by the exposition directors, comprises some of the greatest figures in American turfdom. Among them are the presidents of the National and American Trotting Association, P. P. Johnston of Lexington and W. P. Ijams of Terre Haute. Neither of these veteran drivers is active in harness racing today, but H. K. Devereux of Cleveland, who is the head of the Grand Circuit, has expressed his intention to enter the events for amateurs which are on the exposition schedule. William Simpson of New York and Russell Allen of Pittsfield, Mass. and C. C. Tegethoff of New York have agreed to assist in making the exposition meets the most successful in years.

M. W. Savage of Minneapolis and George H. Estabrook of Denver, the former the man who purchased the famous Dan Patch for $60,000 and who will bring several of that great racer's descendants to the exposition, are two others who have taken a great interest in the schedule prepared. Dr. John C. McCoy, once manager of Directum I, another prominent figure of the American turf, is working hard to secure the best material from Eastern stables.

With such men behind the program the harness meets at the exposition are sure to attract attention the world over. The gathering will see such drivers as Budd Doble, Pop Geers, Billy Andrews, Knapsack McCarty, Billy Snow, Harry Hersey, Charley De Ryder, Walter Cox, Walter Maben, Tommy Murphy, Charley Dean, Charley Durfee, Millar Sanders, Willie Durfee, Lon McDonald, Mike Bowerman, A. L. Thomas, Lon Daniels, Elmo Montgomery, Fred Wrad, Al Stewart, Arlie Frost and at least twenty others who are preparing their strings to compete for the princely prizes offered by the exposition officials.

And with the coming of these turf figures will come such men as Sterling Holt, C. K. G. Billings, William Simpson, William Russell Allen, Ed. Tipton, William Loftus, R. K. McKenzie, John C. Bauer, C. J. Berry, D. J. Campau, H. Markey, W. A. Clark, Jr., Sydney Toman, W. P. Murray, W. E. D. Stokes, Palmer Clark, J. W. Considine, S. S. Bailey, Frank Malcolm, M. L. Woy, David Bonner, A. B. Coxe and hundreds of others prominently connected with the trotting industry of Europe, Australia, New Zealand, England, Canada and the United States.

The schedule as prepared by the Exposition committee arranges for Sunday matinee races each Sunday from 11 A. M. to 5 P. M. during May, June, July, August and the first three Sundays in September.

The exposition track where the great events are to be held, is declared by expert horsemen to be ideal in every respect, and that many records will be shattered is a foregone conclusion. The equipment at the exposition course is modern in every respect and with the track built particularly for fast time many a record is sure to go by the boards during the summer and fall meetings. Dazzle Patch, one of the great Dan Patch family and owned by Savage, is one of the entries already in and the Savage string will include many noted performers. Shuler's stable is looked upon as one of the greatest in the country, including such wonderful speed marvels as Peter McCormick 2:08¾ (eligible to the 2:10 class on allowance) by Peter the Great, 2:07¼; Fleeta Dillon, 2:08¾, by Sydney Dillon, and Twinkling Dan, 2:06¼, by Dan Patch.

Rod McKenzie's string including the great Joe Patchen II, is being "prepper" by Charlie De Ryder at McKenzie's big Pleasanton plant.

Mention of Budd Doble, that quiet little blue-eyed man who has held the reins of some of the greatest harness horses in the world, awakens memories of the past in the minds of those who do not belong to the latter day aggregation of reinsmen. Doble's name is inseparably linked with the names of three champion trotters whose performances during the past forty years have startled the world, namely Nancy Hanks, Dexter and Goldsmith Maid, a trio of remarkable equines whose list of victories form long and interesting chapters in the history of light harness records.

N. P. H. S. TEAMS HAVE BIG ATHLETIC LISTS

New Schools Continually Being Placed on Borough Schedules.

The baseball and tennis schedule recently issued by the managers of the North Plainfield High School teams, contain several schools which the boroughites have never had athletic connection with before. The list of schools with which North Plainfield has athletic negotiations has grown larger and larger every year until the borough managers now are always able to fill a good list.

Some years ago the North Plainfield teams did not have as many trips or entertain as many out of town teams as they have in recent years, and the schedules generally consisted of teams located in cities along the Central Railroad, from Elizabeth to Somerville. This gave the local team about six teams to play each year, including Battin, Roselle, Westfield, Plainfield, Bound Brook and Somerville, while now the basketball schedules have twenty-five and thirty games. Among the schools that have been placed on the borough list within the last three years are West Orange High School, Morristown, Seton Hall "Prep." of East Orange, Clinton High School, Rutgers "Prep" and Kearny. All of these have always enjoyed hard but friendly battles, both in bsseball and basketball, with the North Plainfield teams, and now tennis has come to the fore as another active branch of sports. While new teams have been taken on from year to year, a few schools have been dropped entirely from the borough lists, including Somerville and Bound Brook, and as both of these schools are in Somerset county, county leagues will no longer be featured.

One year the North Plainfield basketball five had a poor schedule, and the longest trip taken from the borough was to Hope chapel.

TAUGHT SCHOOL 48 YEARS.

Westfield, April 8.—After teaching school for forty-eight consecutive years here, Miss Elizabeth Stryker notified the Board of Education last night that she will retire from service at the end of the term. The teachers' committee has been instructed by the board to prepare a fitting testimonial for the veteran teacher.

"BILL" SEERY AS MANAGER.

Bill Seery, formerly catcher on the Plainfield "Pets" team, has been appointed by the Elizabeth Athletic Park Commission to manage the team that is to represent the Singer Manufacturing Company in the New Jersey Manufacturers' Baseball League.

BIG DEMONSTRATION FOR NEW CHAMPION

Jess Willard Greeted by Thousands and Announces His Plans.

Key West, Fla., April 8.—Jess Willard, the new heavyweight champion pugilist of the world, arrived here last night from Havana. A crowd of several thousand who gathered became so demonstrative that they broke down fences and parted ropes in their eagerness to get near the Kansas giant.

When the steamship bringing Willard steamed into the harbor all the shipping flew flags of welcome and the crews lined the rails and cheered.

Later, when Willard was shown telegrams offering $20,000 as a purse for a fight with Frank Moran, he said:

"I don't know anything about my future plans. See Tom Jones," indicating his manager. Jones said emphatically that Willard would not fight for nine months or a year.

"Willard," said Jones, "has been training for a year and a half and had earned a rest. He is going to tour the country, picking up the money that is due him, for you know Willard has not made any big money out of the fight.

"After Jess has completed his touring and had a rest he will be ready to defend the title against any heavyweight the public may think worthy. He will never fight another negro and will not meet any joke fighters. Any time, however, that a real white contender appears who gives indications of real ability and popular support Jess will be found ready to meet him for the title in any part of the world."

Last night it was announced that Willard will travel direct to Baltimore, where the first exhibition by the new champion will be given tomorrow night. On Saturday Willard will arrive in New York, where a big welcome and reception is said to have been planned.

HOLDING, ETC., BARRED IN THIS EXHIBITION

Parlor Tactics Eliminated in Game Between Boys and Girls.

Probably the last basketball game to be played on local courts is scheduled for tomorrow night when the Chi Gamma Chi girls will line-up against the St. Joseph Boys Club at Columbus Club. Tickets have been selling rapidly and indications point to one of the largest and most enthusiastic audiences of fans that the hall has had this year. Each quintet is bringing bands of lusty cohorts who will cheer their respective teams during the contest.

During the game the male members of the aggregation will demonstrate their ability of manipulating a ball while handicapped by a hobble skirt and also playing in a crippled condition, one arm being tied. One half of the game will be played with lines while the other half will be played without. During the whole thirty minutes, girls' rules will be played.

The boys from "across the brook" expect their scoring to be done mainly by Moulton, their forward, who can throw the ball easily with one hand. The "lassies" put their confidence in their shooting forward Miss Jaque Daly, who cages baskets from all angles of the floor.

"Bob" Hebert and Miss Lillian Spencer, of the North Plainfield High School, will officiate in the referee and umpire positions, respectively.

Following the game, the players will be given a banquet by the members of the Chi Gamma Chi. The game attendants will dance until 12 o'clock. George Dunn and his orchestra will dispense music for the occasion.

The two teams will line-up as follows:

Chi Gamma Chi.	St. Joseph.
Miss Daly	Moulton
Forward.
Miss Bryniarski	McDonough
Forward.
Miss McCullough	Denny
Center.
Miss Newman	Bryniarski
Guard.
Miss McGinnes	Carty
Guard.

MARTIN WILL GIVE HOPE TEAM THE "ONCE-OVER"

Jack Martin will go out with the Hope team when the Fourth street aggregation practices on the new held on Second street Saturday. Jack will stay in this city for a short time, and may be able to give the boys some good dope, which will benefit them later in the season.

The Hope candidates are practicing hard and will start their season soon. Manager Luthman is booking games with good teams in this vicinity, and would be glad to hear from any fast amateur combination. There are a large number of candidates trying for positions, and the prospects for a good year are exceptionally bright. Dick Schott will probably do most of the mound work, and the majority of last year's players will again be seen. The team will play every Saturday afternoon.

MORRIS BADLY WALLOPED BY THE "DUBLIN GIANT"

Jim Coffey, "the Dublin Giant," administered a severe beating to Carl Morris, of Oklahoma in a ten-round bout at the reopening of the St. Nicholas Club, in New York, last night.

Coffey forced the fighting nearly all the way and in two rounds had Morris groggy at the bell.

Coffey made good use of a left jab and a right hook to the head, while Morris, who weighed 228 pounds to Coffey's 200, leaned heavily upon his opponent in the clinches. At close quarters Morris landed many hard body blows. Coffey appeared overanxious at opportune moments. Both fighters had issued challenges to Jess Willard and a large crowd witnessed the contest.

ONLY ONE MATCH.

Clarence Smalley and Eddie Conshay played a match in the borough one-man tourney last night, on the Somerset street alleys, the former making a clean sweep. There were no other games rolled. The scores follow:

C. Smalley	168	134	134
E. Conshay	117	119	101

B. A. C. DEFEAT P. H. S. BY A SCORE OF 2 TO 1

The P. S. S. and B. A. C. baseball teams played a game yesterday afterwhich was a regular midseason affair. The final score was 2 to 1 in favor of the B. A. C. The winners did not get their final tally until the latter part of the contest. Vail and Perry were the opposing pitchers.

Leals, of the losing side, scored a quartet of bingles, while Journeaux hit safely four times.

WILLARD VS. MORAN MAY BE NEXT BIG BATTLE

London, April 8.—A London syndicate has offered a purse of £4,000 ($20,000) for a fight between Jess Willard, who won the heavyweight championship from Jack Johnson at Havana last Monday, and Frank Moran, of Pittsburg. Willard will be offered £200 ($1,000) for his traveling expenses.

Moran was defeated by Johnson in twenty rounds on points in Paris on June 27 of last year, and on March 29 of this year he knocked out Bombardier Wells, of London, in ten rounds.

SCHOOL TEAMS RETURN TO HARD PRACTICES

After four days layoff due to the snow and rainy weather, the interscholastic baseball teams, of this city, took the fields again yesterday and held a good practice. Some of the arms were stiff from idleness, but they will be well by Saturday, when all the teams begin their schedules.

The rain Tuesday made the fields good for fixing the ovals, and both the city and borough diamonds should be in fair condition by the end of this week.

ELKS' BOWLING.

The Elks' Senior and Junior bowling teams will meet on the club alleys tonight for the first time. Captain Nash, who has been ill for the past few days, will probably not be in the line-up of the Seniors.

CONTESTANTS CLIMB TOWARD GOAL UPON STACKS OF BALLOTS

Flood of Votes in Special Contest Shows Workers What They Need to Win Free Trips to Panama Exposition at San Francisco.

The new vote standing of candidates published today includes the big vote cast on Saturday last, and now that the secret is out and the reserve vote has been shown, all candidates can now plan on what will be needed between now and the end of the contest in order to win the big prizes—the Panama-Pacific Exposition Tours.

It is not hard to find the reason for the interest taken in the Press' great contest. It is not often that the women of Plainfield and vicinity get the chance to win a trip of this sort, without one cent of expense to themselves either during the contest or on the trip.

Now is the time to get all the votes you can. The race will not be decided until the last hour of the contest. A few subscriptions may either make you a winner or a loser, so don't run any risk, but get every one in your power. Don't overlook promised subscriptions. Be on hand to remind your friends who may have promised support with their subscriptions.

Organization Counts.

Organization is being preferred as the end draws near, and every indication is that there will be a tremendous vote. To a critical observer this is more than evident. Already women are being prompted by more experienced friends to pull every wire possible.

Only after a great effort can the trip be obtained, yet the women in the contest are alive to the situation and capable of coping with any features that arise.

Another thing that should not be lost sight of is that in the remaining days it is better to keep near the leader. The contestant who actively adds to her present number by voting her ballots in will receive many complimentary votes. There are numbers of persons in the world who, as the saying goes, "like to be on the band wagon." They like to have it said that they voted for a winner. So will a contestant's vote be affected. The vote-getters will be the wearers of the crowns.

Now is the time to make the final play. It is the all-absorbing hour, the time to make the supreme effort.

Who will have the most points?

Don't be disappointed by failing to realize ballots on subscriptions—the promiser may overlook the date of the closng of the contest. It is, therefore, up to you to get the ballots and win.

Must Eliminate "Ifs."

In the bright lexicon of the contestants there is no such word as failure. If you asked one of the hustling candidates how to spell failure she would probably tell you that it was more fun to spell success. The difference between success and failure is that little word "if."

If I had done this I might have won.

If I had not quit work at the time victory was within reach I would surely have won.

If I had only tried a little harder things would have come my way easily.

All the work that has been done up to the present reflects credit on your ambition. Credit alone, however, is not what you are working to achieve. You intend to go just the necessary step farther to victory, and, with the proper effort and rightly directed mental and physical force, you can do so.

Subscribers Are Interested.

Many people each day call at the Press office to pay up their back subscriptions, or to give orders to have the paper started. These people are entitled to votes if they ask for them.

Some candidates can get these votes very easily, for in the regular round of routine work it is simply amazing how frequently you just stumble on to those who want the Press. The candidates cannot expect these people to vote in their favor unless they hunt them out and request them to do so.

The promises that you are getting will mature all right in due season, provided they are followed up properly.

Sometimes a candidate may find a person just a mite cold on the taking out of a subscription. If this is so, it is to your advantage to make him warm up to it. This is why some candidates are ahead of others.

Remember that a convert is ten times more enthusiastic than one who always believed as you did, and when these lukewarm people really get back of you, you will find you vote ascending skyward.

THERE ARE TWO KINDS OF ASSUREDS.

The kind that take out insurance when the spirit moves them, without considering their policy, the company its in, or the agent. And the other kind that realize the necessity and importance of insurance, who read over their policy and make sure it covers them properly, satisfy themselves that the company is sound and represented by a reliable agent.

The first kind is a hit-or-miss affair, while the other one is bound to obtain a satisfactory settlement when a loss occurs.

AN ORDINANCE

To License and Regulate Omnibuses, Stages and Other Vehicles Used for the Transportation of Passengers In or Through the City of Plainfield in Connection With Any Omnibus Line or Stage Line.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Sec. 1. No person, persons or corporation shall either as principal or as agent or employe of another, drive, run or operate in or through the City of Plainfield, any omnibus line or stage line for the transportation of passengers without first obtaining a license for each vehicle so used for that purpose, as hereinafter provided.

Sec. 2. Any person, persons or corporation may make application, written or printed, or partly written and partly printed, to the Mayor of said City for license to drive, run or operate in or through said City, an omnibus or stage line, but every such application shall be signed by the applicant or a duly authorized agent of the applicant, and shall designate the particular description of vehicle or vehicles intended to be so used. Whenever any such application is granted as hereinafter provided, the City Clerk shall cause the same to be endorsed with the date of the grant and the numbr of the license granted, and filed in his office.

Sec. 3. The Mayor shall have the power to grant, and to refuse in his discretion, any such application, but every such license granted by the Mayor shall state the object for which it is given, the number and description of vehicles licensed thereunder, the name or names of the person, persons or corporation to whom the license is granted, the number of the license, the date of its expiration, and it shall be signed by the Mayor, attested by the City Clerk and countersigned by the Chief of Police before it shall become operative.

Sec. 4. Every such license shall expire on the first day of March following the date on which it is granted, and no such license shall be granted except upon the payment by the applicant therefor to the City Clerk for the use of the City of a license fee of Five Dollars ($5.00) for each vehicle to be used thereunder and no vehicle shall be used thereunder other than a vehicle specified therein.

Sec. 5. The Common Council may, from time to time by resolution, forbid the use of any particular street or streets, avenue or avenues, highway or highways, or portion or portions thereof, in said City by any vehicle or vehicles licensed under this ordinance and, after the adoption of any such resolution and before the same is rescinded, no vehicle licensed under this ordinance shall use or pass through or along any street, avenue or highway or portion thereof, the use whereof by such vehicle is forbidden by any such resolution.

Sec. 6. Every omnibus, stage or other similar vehicle, the use whereof may be authorized by any license granted under this orinance, shall at all times have displayed on each side of the outside thereof, in a conspicuous place, the number of the then current license under which it is being used in said city; also another numeral sufficient to distinguish it from every other vehicle used under such license.

Sec. 7. Every vehicle used by virtue of any license granted under this ordinance shall be subject to every ordinance of the City of Plainfield, and every regulation of the Board of Police of the City of Plainfield, touching upon or regulating street traffic or the standing or movement of vehicles in public streets or highways.

Sec. 8. Any license granted under this ordinance may be suspended or revoked by the Mayor or City Judge upon proof to his satisfaction that such licensed person, persons or corporation, or any person acting in his, their or its behalf, has violated this ordinance or any other ordinance of the City of Plainfield, or regulation of the Board of Police aforesaid, provided, that no license shall be so suspended or revoked without reasonable opportunity first afforded to the licensed person or corporation to be heard in his or its own behalf, and no person or corporation shall, during the suspension or after the revocation of his or its license, use any vehicle so licensed, in the operation of any such omnibus line or stage line.

Sec. 9. Each and every person or corporation who or which shall violate, and each and every person or corporation who shall direct, assist in or connive at the violation of this ordinance shall, on conviction thereof, be punished by a fine not exceeding Twenty Dollars for each offense.

Adopted by the Common Council April 5, 1915; approved by the Mayor April 6, 1915.

LEIGHTON CALKINS, Mayor.

IN CHANCERY OF NEW JERSEY.

To Edward W. Requa and Edna Requa:

By virtue of an order of the Court of Chancery made on the day of the date hereof, in a cause wherein Daniel H. Manning is complainant and William F. Cory, et ux. et als. (including yourselves), are defendants, you are required to appear, plead, answer or demur to the bill of said complainant on or before the Seventh day of June next, or the said bill will be taken as confessed against you.

The said bill is filed to foreclose a mortgage given by William S. Cory and Bella R. Cory, his wife, William F. Cory, unmarried, Bertha M. Requa and Edward W. Requa, her husband, heirs at law of Mary Jane Cory, deceased to Daniel H. Manning dated the First day of September, Eighteen hundred and ninety-nine, on lands in the Township of Fanwood, Union county, New Jersey and you Edward W. Requa, are made a defendant because you were the husband of Bertha M. Requa, who departed this life intestate, seized of an equal undivided one-half interest in the premises under consideration, and that you as her husband claim or might claim to have a right of courtesy or some other right in said mortgaged premises, and you Emma Requa are made a defendant because you are the child of, and one of the heirs at law of Bertha M. Requa, who departed this life intestate, seized of an undivided one-half interest in the premises under consideration and that you therefore claim or may claim to have an undivided one-half interest or other interest in said mortgaged premises.

CHAPTER XVI.

The Count and Herr Schwartzmuller.

OUR luncheon was not as gay nor as unconventional as others that had preceded it. The countess vainly tried to make it as sprightly as its predecessors, but gave over in despair in the face of my taciturnity. Her spirits drooped. She became strangely uneasy and, I thought, preoccupied.

"What is on your mind, countess?" I asked rather gruffly, after a painful silence of some duration.

She regarded me fixedly for a moment. She seemed to be searching my thoughts. "You," she said very decidedly. "Why are you so quiet, so funereal?" I observed a faint tinge of red in her cheeks and an ominous steadiness in her gaze. Was there anger also?

I apologized for my manners and assured her that my work was responsible. Would I come to see her the next day?

"But don't think of coming, Mr. Smart," she declared, "if you feel you cannot spare the time away from your work."

"My dear countess," I exclaimed, displaying a livelier interest than at any time before, "I shall be delighted to come. Permit me to add that my work may go hang."

Her face brightened. "But men must work," she objected.

"Not when women are willing to play," I said.

"Splendid!" she cried. "You are reviving. I feel better. If you are going to be nice I'll let you stay."

"Thanks. I'll do my best."

She seemed to be weighing something in her mind.

"If you don't mind what the servants are saying about us, Mr. Smart, I am quite sure I do not."

I caught my breath.

"Oh, I understand everything," she cried mischievously, before I could stammer anything in reply. "They are building a delightful romance around us. And why not? Why begrudge them the pleasure? No harm can come of it, you see."

"Certainly no harm," I floundered.

"The gossip is confined to the castle. It will not go any further. We can afford to laugh in our sleeves, can we?"

"Ha, ha!" I laughed in a strained effort, but not into my sleeve. "I rejoice to hear you say that you don't mind. No more do I. It's rather jolly."

"Fancy any one thinking we could possibly fall in love with each other," she scoffed. Her eyes were very bright. There was a suggestion of cold water in that remark.

"Yes, just fancy," I agreed.

"Absurd!"

"But of course, as you say, if they can get any pleasure out of it why should we object?"

"Well, we are bosom friends once more, are we not? I am so relieved."

"I suppose Poopendyke told you the gossip."

"Oh, no! I had it from my maid. She is perfectly terrible. All French maids are, Mr. Smart. Beware of French maids! She won't have it any other way than that I am desperately in love with you. Isn't she delicious?"

"Eh?" I gasped.

"And she confides the wonderful secret to every one in the castle, from Rosemary down to Jinko."

"'Pon my soul!" I murmured.

"And so now they all are saying that I am in love with you," she laughed. "Isn't it perfectly ludicrous?"

"Perfectly," I said without enthusiasm. My heart sank like lead. Ludicrous? Was that the way it appeared to her? I had a little spirit left. "Quite as ludicrous as the fancy Britton has about me. He is obsessed by the idea that I am in love with you. What do you think of that?"

She started. I thought her eyes narrowed for a second. "Ridiculous," she said very simply. Then she arose abruptly. "Please ring the bell for Hawkes."

I did so. Hawkes appeared. "Clear the table, Hawkes," she said. "I want you to read all these newspaper clippings, Mr. Smart," she went on, pointing to a bundle on a chair near the window. "We crossed the room. "Now that you know who I am, I insist on your reading all that the papers have been saying about me during the past five or six weeks."

I protested, but she was firm. "Every one else in the world has been reading about my affairs, so you must do likewise. No, it isn't necessary to read all of them. I will select the most lurid and the most glowing. You see there are two sides to the case. The papers that father can control are united in defending my action; the European press is just the other way. Sit down, please. I'll hand them to you."

For an hour I sat there in the window absorbing the astonishing history of the Tarnowsy abduction case. I felt rather than observed the intense scrutiny with which she favored me.

At last she tossed the remainder of the bundle unread into a corner. Her face was aglow with pleasure.

"You've read both sides, and I've watched you, oh, so closely. You don't believe what the papers ever here have to say. I saw the scowls when you read the translations that Mr. Poopendyke has typed for me. Now I know that you do not feel so bitterly toward me as you did at first."

I was resolved to make a last determined stand for my original convictions.

"But our own papers—the New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago journals—still voice in a way my principal contention in the matter, countess. They deplore the wretched custom among the idle but ambitious rich that made possible this whole lamentable state of affairs. I mean the custom of getting a title into the family at any cost."

"My dear Mr. Smart," she said seriously, "do you really contend that all of the conjugal unhappiness and unrest of the world is confined to the American girls who marry noblemen? Has it escaped your notice that there are thousands of unhappy marriages and equally happy divorces in America every year in which noblemen do not figure at all?"

Then suddenly she changed the subject.

"I have some pleasant news for you," she said. "My mother will be here on Thursday. You will not like her, of course, because you are already prejudiced, but I know she will like you."

"I hope she will like me," I added, feeling that it was necessary.

"She was a Colingraft, you know."

"Indeed?" The Colingraft family was one of the oldest and most exclusive in New York.

"You will like my father," she said. "He loves me more than any one else in the world—more than all the world. He would buy off the count tomorrow if I wou'd permit him to do so. Of late I have been thinking very seriously of suggesting it to him. A million is nothing to my father."

There came a sharp rapping on the door at this instant. "Goodness! You'd think Sherlock Holmes himself was at the door!" she cried.

I went to the door.

"Can you come down at once, Mr. Smart?" Poopendyke said in a voice not meant to reach the ears of the countess.

"What's up?" I questioned sharply.

"The jig, I'm afraid," he whispered.

"Good Lord! Detectives?"

"No. Count Tarnowsy and a stranger."

"Impossible!"

The countess, alarmed by our manner, quickly crossed the room.

"What is it?" she demanded.

"The count is downstairs," I said. "Don't be alarmed. Nothing can happen. You"—

She laughed. "Oh, is that all? My dear Mr. Smart, he has come to see you about the frescoes."

"But I have insulted him."

"Not permanently," she said. "I know him too well. He is like a leech. He has given you time to reflect and therefore regret your action of the other night. Go down and see him."

Poopendyke volunteered further information. "There is also a man down there, a cheap looking person, who says he must see the Countess Tarnowsy at once."

"A middle aged man with the upper button of his wastcoat off?" she asked sharply.

"I—I can't say as to the button."

"I am expecting one of my lawyers. It must be he. He was to have a button off."

"I'll look him over again," said Poopendyke.

"Do. And be careful not to let the count catch a glimpse of him. That would be fatal."

"No danger of that. He went at once to old Conrad's room."

"Good! I had a note from him this morning, Mr. Smart. He is Mr. Bangs of London."

"May I inquire, countess, how you manage to have letters delivered to you here? Isn't it extremely dangerous to have them go through the mails?"

"They are all directed to the Schmicks," she explained. "They are passed on to me. Now go and see the count. Don't lend him any money."

The count was waiting for me in the loggia.

"It is good to see you again, old fellow," he said, with an amiability that surprised me. "I was afraid you might hold a grievance against me. You Americans are queer chaps, you know."

Consummate assurance! I had not touched a drop of anything that night.

"I assure you, Count Tarnowsy, the little tilt, as you are pleased to call it, was of no consequence. I had quite forgotten that it occurred. Sorry you reminded me of it."

The irony was wasted. He beamed. "My dear fellow, shall we not shake hands?"

There was something irresistibly winning about him, as I've said before. We shook hands with what seemed to be genuine fervor.

"I suppose you are wondering what brings me here," he said as we started toward the entrance to the loggia, his arm through mine. "I do not forget a promise, Mr. Smart. You may remember that I agreed to fetch a man from Munchen to look over your fine old frescoes and to give you an estimate. Well, he is here, the very best man in Europe."

"I am sure I am greatly indebted to you, count," I said, "but after thinking it over I've"—

"Don't say that you have already engaged some one to do the work," he cried in horror. "My dear fellow, don't tell me that! You are certain to make a dreadful mistake if you listen to any one but Schwartzmuller. He is the last word in restorations. He is"—

I checked him. "I have virtually decided to let the whole matter go over until next spring. However, I shall be happy to have Mr. Schwartzmuller's opinion. We may be able to plan ahead."

A look of disappointment flitted across his face. The suggestion of hard old age crept into his features for a second and then disappeared.

"Delays are dangerous," he said. "My judgment is that those gorgeous paintings will disintegrate more during the coming winter than in all the years gone by. They are at the critical stage. If not preserved now—well, I cannot bear to think of the consequences. Ah, here is Herr Schwartzmuller."

Just inside the door, we came upon a pompous yet servile German who could not by any means have been mistaken for anything but the last word in restoration.

For ten minutes I allowed them to expatiate on the perils of procrastination in the treatment of rare old canvases and pigments, and then, having formulated my plans, blandly inquired what the cost would be.

"I should say not more than 150,000 marks, perhaps less," said the expert, rolling his calculative eye upward and running it along the vast dome of the hall as if to figure it out in yards and inches.

The count was watching me with an eager light in his eyes. He looked away as I shot a quick glance at his face. The whole matter became as clear as day to me. He was to receive a handsome commission if the contract was awarded.

"Nearly $40,000, in other words," said I reflectively.

"They are worth ten times that amount, sir," said the expert gravely.

I smiled skeptically.

"Hohendahl was once offered $250,000, Mr. Smart," he said.

"Why didn't he accept it?" I asked bluntly. "He sold the whole place to me, contents included, for less than half that amount."

"It was years ago, before he was in such dire straits," he explained quickly.

A terrible suspicion entered my head. I felt myself turn cold. If the frescoes were genuine they were worth all that Schwartzmuller declared; that being the case, why should Hohendahl have let them come to me for practically nothing when there were dozens of collectors who would have paid him the full price?

"As a matter of fact, Count Tarnowsy," I said, resorting to unworthy means, "I have every reason to believe that Hohendahl sold the originals some time ago and had them replaced on the ceilings by clever imitations. They are not worth the canvas they are painted on."

He started. "Impossible!" he cried sharply.

"By no means impossible," I said calmly, now sure of my ground. "To be perfectly frank with you, I've known from the beginning that they are fakes. Count Hohendahl confessed to me at the time our transaction took place that the frescoes were very recent productions. The originals, I think, are in London or New York."

I saw guilt in the face of Herr Schwartzmuller. I looked straight into the German's eyes and said, "Now that I come to think of it, I am sure he mentioned the name of Schwartzmuller in connection with the"—

"It is not true! It is not true!" roared the expert without waiting for me to finish. "He lied to you! We—the great firm of Zumpe & Schwartzmuller—we could not be tempted with millions to do such a thing."

I went a step farther in my deductions. Somehow I had grasped the truth—this pair deliberately hoped to swindle me out of $40,000. They knew the frescoes were imitations, and yet they were urging me to spend a huge sum of money in restoring canvases that had been purposely made to look old and flimsy in order to deceive a more cautious purchaser than I.

"Moreover, Count Tarnowsy, you are fully aware of all this."

"My dear fellow"—

"I'll not waste words. You are a scoundrel!"

He measured the distance with his eye and then sprang swiftly forward, striking blindly at my face.

I knocked him down.

Schwartzmuller was near the door, looking over his shoulder as he felt for the great brass knob.

"Mein Gott!" he bellowed.

"Stop!" I shouted. "Come back here and take this fellow away with you!"

Tarnowsy was sitting up, looking about him in a dazed, bewildered manner.

At that moment Poopendyke came running down the stairs, attracted by the loud voices. He was followed closely by three or four wide eyed glaziers who were working on the second floor.

"In the name of heaven, sir!"

"I've bruised my knuckles horribly," was all that I said. I seemed to be in a sort of a daze myself. I had never knocked a man down before in my life.

Tarnowsy struggled to his feet and faced me, quivering with rage. I was dumfounded to see that he was not covered with blood. But he was of a light, yellowish green. I could scarcely believe my eyes.

"You shall pay for this!" he cried. The tears rushed to his eyes. "Coward, beast, to strike a defenseless man!"

His hand went swiftly to his breast pocket, and an instant later a small revolver flashed into view. It was then that I did another strange and incomprehensible thing. With the utmost coolness I stepped forward and wrested it from his hand. I say strange and incomprehensible for the reason that he was pointing it directly at my breast and yet I had not the slightest sensation of fear. He could have shot me like a dog. I never even thought of that.

"None of that!" I cried sharply. "Now, will you be good enough to get out of this house and stay out?"

"My seconds will call on you"—

"And they will receive just what you have received. If you or any of your friends presume to trespass on the privacy of these grounds of mine I'll kick the whole lot of you into the Danube. Hawkes, either show or lead Count Tarnowsy to the gates. As for you, Mr. Schwartzmuller, I shall expose"—

But the last word in restorations had departed.

Of Interest to Women and the Home

A NEW COLOR.

A very attractive combination is shown in this frock of "dreadnaught" gray chiffon taffeta worn over a blouse of white chiffon. A girdle has been achieved by many close shirrings of the taffeta on cords about the waist and is headed by a line pleating of the same. It has been necessary to confine this extreme fullness about the hips by means of these same cords, from thence the skirt hangs straight to the ankles. Suspenders of the taffeta fasten with buttons at each side of the front and are crossed, to fall in flat ends and loops, at the back. Fine pleatings of cream taffeta trim neck and sleeves of the blouse.

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

Nell made a great effort to go over to Mrs. Brown's with Dick to express her sympathy on the evening Miss Rudolph received the news of her brother's death. The girl came down to the parlor utterly bereft of all airs and graces. Nell felt as if she were meeting a stranger. The girl was herself for the first time in their acquaintance. She had been crying, and Nell was drawn to her, perhaps because of her grief.

"What time do you leave?" asked Dick.

"At nine. I have telephoned for the bus to call for me," she replied. As it was nearly train time they decided to wait and see her off on the buss.

Finally, twenty minutes to nine, Dick said: "I'm afraid if you wait for the bus you'll be left; they are not very dependable. If you care to walk, I'll carry your suit case."

The girl looked inquiringly at Nell.

"You certainly can't afford to miss that train and you've no time to lose. I can go home alone; it's only a little way," replied Nell generously. "This was a case of necessity and no one will know about it, anyway," Nell reflected as she sat waiting on the porch for Dick's return. Imagine her surprise when Mrs. Brown ran in the next morning and laughingly told her that one of her boarders had heard that Mr. Morton had gone to Kansas City with Miss Rudolph.

"I hope you explained the situation to him," said Nell, much distressed. "I suppose he was seen entering the car with the suit case and the messenger fled with the news before he could turn around and come out," she continued scornfully.

"I thought it such a joke I ran over to laugh with you about it," said the good-natured woman, picking up her sunbonnet, "but you don't see the fun of it. I'm sorry I told you."

"It's terrible to be watched like that," Nell reflected after the neighbor had gone. "If this was the first coupling of their names I would not mind, but the fact that that report has spread shows what a state of watchfulness the gossips maintain. I suppose it is up to me to let Mrs. Ellson know my husband is still in town, if I don't want that report to spread," and she cudgeled her brains to think of an excuse to call her up.

"I wonder what Dick will say. I suppose he will laugh about it. I wish I could see the funny side," and Nell frowned.

She was right. Dick thought it the best joke of the season.

"You can see now, Nell, how utterly foolish it is to care for their stupid chatter, when there is no more truth to their gossip than that."

"I cannot gainsay that, but what you can't see is that there could never be such a story started about Mr. Parsons, for instance, for he has never given these gossips a hold on him," replied Nell.

Dick tossed his head contemptuously.

Household Hints

FISH DISHES

Deviled Smoked Halibut — One-fourth pound smoked halibut, two tablespoons butter, one-half teaspoon mustard, one tablespoon tomato catsup, one tablespoon chopped mustard pickles, one tablespoon vinegar, salt and cayenne. Serve on crackers or toast. Blend all seasoning ingredients and heat them thoroughly either in double boiler or in bowl set into saucepan of hot water. When hot spread crackers or toast with this mixture, lay a strip of halibut on each cracker and place in oven or in broiler of gas range for two or three minutes before serving. The strips of fish are cut into convenient size so that they almost cover crackers.

Steamed Salmon Loaf—Remove skin and bone from one can salmon and shred in small pieces; add three well-beaten eggs, four tablespoons milk, four tablespoons melted butter, half cup grated bread crumbs, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one-eighth teaspoon pepper and one teaspoon chopped parsley. Beat with fork until thoroughly mixed. Butter food pan of double boiler, place mixture in it, then fill water pan one-third full of boiling water. Put food pan in place, put on cover and steam forty-five minutes; turn from boiler and serve in slices. Sauce: Mix one beaten egg, one teaspoon butter, one-half cup milk, one-fourth cup juice from can of salmon, one-eighth teaspoon salt, speck of pepper. When salmon loaf is removed from double boiler, turn sauce into food pan and cook until it thickens. Pour sauce over loaf just as it is ready to serve. This method saves dish washing, as both loaf and sauce can be cooked in same dish.

FORCE MEAT RECIPES.

Force meat, to use as a dressing to other meats, can be made from any of the following recipes:

Force Meat Balls of Brain—Clean and soak brains in lukewarm water three hours, then boil. When cold, pound them in a mortar with a little flour, some chopped parsley, salt and pepper. Bind with raw egg and make into small balls. Fry a light brown and drop them into tureen. Time, ten minutes to boil.

Force Meat of Onion—An accompaniment for roast turkey or fowl. After peeling scoop out inside carefully and fill up with force meat. Bake onions in oven.

Curry Force Meat Balls—Pound together bread crumbs, hard boiled yolks of eggs, a small quantity of butter and seasoning of curry powder and salt. Make into small balls. Time to fry, two or three minutes.

Egg Force Meat Balls—Pound hard-boiled yolks of half dozen eggs with some chopped parsley, a teaspoon of flour, a little pepper, salt and cayenne. Moisten with egg and make the paste into small balls. Boil two minutes before using in soup or other dishes. Sufficient for one tureen soup.

Force Meat of Shrimp—Clear a pint of shrimps from their shells and chop them finely. Mix with equal quantity of bread crumbs. Season with salt, pepper and small quantity of mace. Pound into smooth paste with two or three ounces of butter. Bind with yolk of an egg. Use this force meat to stuff any fresh water fish. A pike, for example, if stuffed and baked, will be found excellent.

CELERY GREENS.

Wash the light leaves of a couple of bunches of celery—all but the rank, tough green leaves of the larger stalks—very thoroughly in a saucepan and add a little boiling water, slightly salted. When they are boiled tender, drain and chop and season with salt and pepper and butter. Serve very hot.

PEPPER PUREE.

Wash the peppers, boil them for fifteen minutes and then remove the skin. Cut, remove the seeds and chop fine. Boil again in salted water for five minutes and then simmer for thirty minutes. Drain and press through a wire sieve. Put a tablespoonful of butter in a saucepan and add the peppers. Then add salt to taste and four tablespoonfuls of cream. Mix thoroughly and serve with meat as a garnish.

Animal Jingles

FOR LITTLE FOLKS

BY ALICE CREW GALL

The Envious Colt.

One day a Colt was heard to say, "I don't think it is fair
That sheep should have nice fleecy wool and I should just have hair

"I would be so much handsomer with curly wool of white,
Instead of which I have straight hair, it really is not right."

He wouldn't listen to a word that anyone could say,
And though his mother scolded him, he stood and sulked all day.

Then as he stood there by himself he had a big surprise;
He saw a sight so strange that he could not believe his eyes.

Across the field from where he stood a flock of Sheep appeared,
And not one Sheep had any wool, they'd every one been sheared!

"Where is your nice white curly wool?" he asked in great alarm.
"The shearers cut it off," they said, "because it was so warm."

The Colt stood for a while in thought, then gave his head a shake;
"I don't see why I envied you, it was a big mistake.

"I really thought I wanted wool, but I was wrong I see;
I'd rather have my hair that's on than wool that's off," said he.

Don't let the seed of envy be planted in your heart,
For like most weeds it flourishes when once it gets a start.

ROBIN'S WISDOM.

By Harriet G. Brown.

There's a robin in the orchard,
A bluebird and a wren;
There's a sound of happy singing—
The birds are back again.
And the robin is so busy,
He's looking for the best;
He must have a leafy shelter
In which to build a nest.
Now I wonder how he does it?
I took some twigs one day,
Though I tried my best to weave them,
I could not make them stay!
But the robin has no trouble,
His nest is round and strong,
And the twigs hold fast together,
Though winds blow all day long.
He's not half so old as I am,
And so I can't see why
Such a tiny little fellow
Should know much more than I.

The preparations for the luncheon and bridge party to be given by the Mothers' Association on Saturday, April 17, at the High School building, are nearly completed, and the affair promises to be a decided success, as the tickets sent to each member are selling rapidly. It is to be desired that members who have not already reported the number of luncheon tickets retained should do so promptly, and send the money with the report to Mrs. G. S. Simons, 247 East Ninth street, as orders for the correct number of lunches must be placed on Monday, April 12, and the tables arranged for. The proceeds will be used to extend mid-day lunches in other schools throughout the city. The luncheon served will be the same as that served to High School pupils, and will be served in the same manner, with the exception that tablecloths, glasses and flowers will be supplied.

New York City.

A Federation of Public School Parents' Associations has been formed in New York city. This is the first city-wide movement of individuals who have no common personal advantage in hand, and the men who are starting this movement believe that every man and woman should take an active part in everything that concerns the boy and girl; they believe that the biggest thing a man has to do in this world is to make it a better place for his children. To the question, What is there in the city that is not for the good of the children? the Federation answers: Crowded streets to play in, crowded schools to yawn in, crowded tenements to mope and sicken in, and certain places of amusement that are deleterious to both young and old. Considering that there are 600 elementary schools in New York, that a school of pupils is small as schools go there, it will be seen that there must be a good many parents in New York.

If only one quarter of these parents are worthy they will be kept fairly busy if they accomplish what they have undertaken. The first definite reform started is in the use of the public schools as polling places during elections. It is claimed that such use of the schools will save the city thousands of dollars annually, and that the moral effect on the men voting in the same room where his children are taught good citizenship must be reflected in the character of the men elected.

From "The Child."

It makes a heaven-wide difference whether the soul of a child is regarded as a piece of blank paper to be written upon, or as a living power to be quickened by sympathy and educated by truth.

Vocational Training.

No thoughtful merchant who recognizes his own responsibility in the training of the young men in his employ asks or expects the public school to train boys for his business; he does not expect, or has a right to expect, that the boys who come to him shall be grounded in these fundamentals—character, alertness, analyticcal power, power of expression, thoroughness. What he wants next to moral character is a boy that has gumption.—S. F. Hubbard.

The problem of vocational training is more profound than preparing men and women to work. It is to educate the public mind to embody a working ideal that will gradually transform industrial practice, until labor, no longer cramping and brutalizing, is a beautiful realization of the noblest human possibilities; until the old words of the Benedictine rule take on their fullest meaning, and to work is verily to pray.—Ruth M. Weeks.

VAN ARSDALE SHOE QUALITY.

There never was a season when the quality of the shoes and the reputation of the house amounted to so much to the purchaser.

The European war has made shoe materials advance—a widespread substitution of "shoddy" leathers has been the unfortunate result.

We do not claim a monopoly of all the good shoes—but we do claim to be mighty particular about the quality of the materials used in our shoes, and we make the manufacturers live up to our high standards.

YOU get the benefit—and it's a mighty important benefit this season.

If you are not one of our regular patrons we invite you to visit our store and get acquainted.

Of Interest To Automobile Owners

MOST AUTOMOBILE OWNERS THINK THAT GARAGE OWNERS ARE HIGHWAY ROBBERS. MR. OWNER TAKES HIS CAR TO A GARAGE TO BE REPAIRED, AND AT THE END OF THE MONTH PERHAPS RECEIVES A BILL FOR $143.00. HE DOES NOT KNOW WHETHER THE WORK AND MATERIAL WERE PUT UPON HIS CAR; HE DOES NOT KNOW WHETHER THE WORK WAS WELL DONE OR NOT, OR WHETHER HE ORDERED IT DONE ANYWAY. HE TAKES HIS BILL TO THE GARAGE, REGISTERS A KICK AND GETS AN ALLOWANCE, AND GENERALLY MAKES UP HIS MIND NEVER TO TAKE HIS CAR INTO A GARAGE AGAIN.

WE SELL OUR AUTOMOBILE REPAIRS JUST AS WE SELL ANY OTHER MATERIAL. IN THE FIRST PLACE WE HAVE AN UNDERSTANDING WITH THE OWNER AS TO WHAT WE ARE TO DO TO HIS CAR, THEN WE PUT GOOD MECHANICS AT WORK AND SEND THE OWNER A BILL EVERY NIGHT FOR THE WORK AND MATERIAL PUT INTO HIS CAR ON THAT DAY. WE WANT HIM TO COME INTO THE GARAGE AS THE WORK PROGRESSES SO THAT HE KNOWS HE IS GETTING WHAT HE BUYS. WE NEVER MAKE ALLOWANCES. AN ALLOWANC IS AN ADMISSION OF OVERCHARGE, AND THE PRICE OF OUR WORK PER HOUR IS UNDERSTOOD WITH THE OWNER BEFORE WE START.

WE BELIEVE WE ARE BETTER EQUIPPED TO SELL REPAIRS, MATERIAL, SUPPLIES OR ACCESSORIES THAN ANY GARAGE IN NEW JERSEY, BECAUSE OUR EXPENSES ARE LESS. OUR RENT IS PROBABLY PROPORTIONATELY LOWER THAN ANY GARAGE IN PLAINFIELD, AND THE WRITER'S PERSONAL EXPENSES ARE PROBABLY LESS THAN THOSE OF ANY GARAGE OWNER. WE MAKE OUR OWN ELECTRICITY FOR POWER AND LIGHT, AND OUR OFFICE EXPENSE IS NOMINAL. WE HAVE GOOD WORKMEN IN EVERY DEPARTMENT AND PAY THEM GOOD WAGES. IN THE REPAIR DEPARTMENT EVERY MAN KNOWS THAT THE BILL FOR HIS TIME IS SENT TO THE AUTOMOBILE OWNER EACH DAY, AND FOR HIS OWN SELF PRESERVATION HE MUST DELIVER THE GOODS AS AGREED.

WE SOLICIT YOUR BUSINESS.

HORRORS OF THE WAR DESCRIBED

Miss Janet Richards Deplores Conditions Among Nations Engaged in Conflict.

LEGISLATIVE AFFAIRS

Speaker Tells of the Progress Being Made by Neutral Countries in Solving the Liquor and Child Labor Problems—Widow's Pensions.

"Why should it be a test of manhood to kill somebody?" was the question asked by Miss Janet Richards in her "Current Events" talk yesterday afternoon at the Hartridge Auditorium. The speaker deplored the conditions existing in the warring nations where men are thought effeminate if they do not go to war. She related several of the horrible scenes of the war, an instance, of which, was a wounded soldier whose trunk was torn by the explosion of a shell. The ghastly terror stricken face of the man, stumbling along and holding his coat in his two hands in an endeavor to keep the soul in his body until he reached medical aid, was a horror never to be forgotten.

"While the foreign powers are going on with their warfare, the neutral governments are progressing with their legislative affairs," said Miss Richards. "The great numbers of people are working for greater social improvement. The Mother's Pension bill and the Workmen's Compensation act in New York, are excellent examples. In Pennsylvania, a "machine ridden" State, the people have wakened up and are bombarding the legislature to fulfil promises made last election. They want local option and a child labor law. In Harrisburg a remarkable demonstration was recently presented for the regulation of the liquor traffic. In Russia twelve years ago the government monopolized the liquor interests. In England at the present day, the government is grappling with the liquor concerns. The people are beginning to realize that because of the vice, men cannot fight. In that country there are two elements that clash, the people employed by the concerns, those having an interest in the company, the wealthy classes and the poorer drunks and hoodlums. The gravest question that confronts them, however, is the fact that many thousands would be thrown out of employment. The two ways to stamp out the evil is to have absolute prohibition or local option. In the latter case the people have an option in the matter and decide whether or not they want saloons in their city.

"In Pennsylvania the population wants the right to decided this question. The corrupt politicians rise up and say 'no.'"

Miss Richards spoke of the growing tendency of democratic measures throughout the country and the demand that cities be free of legislative control. The city should govern itself according to the laws of the State just as the State governs itself according to the laws of the nation. In the city of Buffalo the people have for years been fighting the government politicians, who have ruled the city and reaped the fruits. Just as soon as some social uplift is agitated, the politicians form a lobby and try to kill it. In New York, the Widow's Pension bill was hotly contested by the politicians. The bill provides for dependent children. There was a growing conviction among the public that institutions could not take care of the child as a mother could, provided she was morally and physically fit to care for the child. Instead of taking the child and putting it away, the law provides that the mother should be paid the equivalent a year of what it costs to keep the child in an institution. Another good piece of legislation in many States is the establishment of juvenile courts, where children do not come in contact with hardened criminals.

Miss Richards told of the awakened womanhood of the world, and the remarkable work they are doing through clubs, church societies and uplift work and in demanding better hours and equality.

NOTABLE CASTS FOR BELGIANS' BENEFIT

Performers Have Won Their Spurs in Previous Successful Productions.

Most of those who hold parts in the two plays, "The Man of Destiny" and "The Twelve Pound Look," which are to be given at the Plainfield Theatre Thursday, April 15, have already made their names in Plainfield amateur theatricals. In fact, the only one who has never before appeared is Walter L. Righter, who takes the part of the Lieutenant in "The Man of Destiny." His great popularity, especially in the younger set, gives especial interest to that play.

Mrs. Lemuel Serrell has had perhaps the most notable career. She made a great hit some years ago in "His Excellency the Governor." Recently she took a leading part in "Trelawney of the Wells," which the Plainfield High School is to give this spring. She plays the principal part in "The Twelve Pound Look."

Mrs. Maxwell Perkins also had a leading part in the production of "Trelawney," which ran for two nights at the Plainfield Theatre four years ago. She played the leading feminine role two years ago in the Comedy Club success, "His Lord and Master." She has the only woman's part in "The Man of Destiny."

Miss Helen Joy, who takes one of the principal parts in "The Twelve Pound Look," is a graduate of Wellesley, and made a great name there as an actress in the college plays. Her success has been great in amateur plays presented at the Park Club, especially in the Pine Mountain benefit given there last year.

As for Charles H. Lyman, leading man in "The Twelve Pound Look," what Plainfielder has not seen him and delighted in him? for he usually plays more or less comic roles, as, for instance, in "Trelawney of the Wells" and "The Henrietta."

Brown Rolston has recently taken the leading man parts in the Comedy Club plays, although it was in his impersonation of an actress in "The Arrival of Kitty" last year that he made his greatest hit perhaps. He was the hero in "Her Lord and Master," and now takes the part of Napoleon in "The Man of Destiny."

Tiskets for the plays, which are to be given under the auspices of the Plainfield Belgian Relief Committee, are now on sale at the Plainfield Theatre. The most expensive seats, aside from the boxes, are $2, and the prices taper down to 25 cents.

"ELECTRIC WIRING" ORDINANCE PROPOSED

Councilmanic Committee's Attention Called to Need by Mayor Calkins.

Mayor Leighton Calkins has directed the attention of the Councilmanic building committee to the necessity of framing an "electric wiring ordinance" to be inserted in the building code. At the present time the city has no ordinance governing the wiring of houses, and the contractors are guided merely by the specifications of the architect. However, the wiring has to be passed upon by an inspector after it is installed, and this formerly has acted as a check on the work.

It is proposed to inquire into the matter and ascertain just what is needed along this line. The actual necessity has never been demonstrated, but Mayor Calkins is of the opinion that such a clause would prove a good thing.

LOCAL FIRE DEPARTMENT RESPONDS TO THREE ALARMS

The city fire department received three alarms between yesterday noon and last night, all of them being trivial. The call at 1:55 yesterday afternoon was for a grass fire at George street and Leland avenue, and at 4:05, No. 2 engine company was sent to 1080 Arlington avenue, where a chicken coop had caught fire, from a grass blaze. One tank of chemical was used in putting out the flame.

At 10:21 last night, box 63 was pulled for a fire among old railroad ties and brush in the yard of the Scott Press Works. It was extinguished in about 10 minutes. There was practically no damage.

PLAINFIELD TRUST ON "ROLL OF HONOR"

Has the Distinction of Ranking 38th in the United States.

The New York Financier, one of the leading financial papers, has prepared an interesting table which it calls the "Roll of Honor of the Trust Companies of the United States." To secure a place on this "Roll of Honor," a trust company must show surplus and profits equal to or larger than its capital, the percentage of surplus and profits to capital determining the company's numerical position.

Of the 398 trust companies appearing on the list, The Plainfield Trust Company has the distinction of ranking 38th in the United States, sixth in New Jersey and first in Plainfield. In view of the fact that only about twenty out of every hundred trust companies are eligible to a place on the "Roll of Honor," it would appear that the local institution, although only twelve years old, has gained an enviable position and one of which its many depositors may feel justly proud.

WANT CITY TO OPEN TWO THOROUGHFARES

Ask for Continuance of Edgewater Avenue to Watchung Ave. and a Juncture.

As the result of communications received by Mayor Calkins, the street committee of the Common Council, of which Francis J. Blatz is chairman, has taken under advisement the plausibility of opening Edgewood avenue, through to Watchung avenue and Third place through to Cedarbrook road. Third place, at the present time, terminates at a point east of East Ninth street and Edgewood avenue winds up at Prospect avenue.

If the extensions are authorized by the Council the two thoroughfares will form a juncture in back of the old Martine homestead, west of Watchung avenue. Chairman Blatz will probably bring the matter to the attention of the Council at the May meeting, when some dispositions will be made.

In commenting on the subject to a Daily Press reporter this morning Mayor Calkins said that the extension was one worthy of serious consideration, and he hoped, by giving it publicity, to excite public interest and ascertain the opinion of taxpayers.

The section in the immediate vicinity of the two streets has been built up considerably during the past year, and the agitation for the improvements has been brewing for some time.

GIRLS' BODY TURNED INTO HUMAN TORCH

Mother and Daughter in Hospital as Result of Infant's Play With Matches.

Playing with matches at her home at West Fourth street and Evona avenue this afternoon, Delia Humphries, aged four years, set fire to her clothing and is in Muhlenberg Hospital in a serious condition. Her mother, Mrs. Delia Humphries, in attempting to rescue the infant, was also badly burned and is a patient of the same institution.

The accident happened at 2 o'clock this afternoon. The child had been amusing herself for more than an hour when the mother heard frantic screams coming from the room in which the child had been. She rushed to that part of the house finding the little girl's clothing a mass of flames, making her resemble a human torch. The mother attempted to beat out the fire but succeeded only after the victim had been painfully burned. The flames set fire to the mother's clothing and before she could put them out they had burned her face and hands.

Neighbors hastened to the assistance of the fire victims and a hurry call was sent in for the ambulance. The girl was rushed immediately to the hospital and shortly after the ambulance returned to police headquarters it was deemed advisable to send the mother to Muhlenberg and a second trip was made.

At the hospital it was said that the infant is in a serious condition, her body having been horribly burned. The mother will recover.

BIG REALTY DEAL IN THE EAST END

Peter Neumann Purchases Remainder of T. J. Minford Property on Putnam Av.

WILL DEVELOPE SITES

Part of the Big Estate was Previously Bought by George M Holstein—John Gray Will Assume Charge of Land.

One of the largest realty deals that has ever been put through in the city of Plainfield has just been completed, after hanging fire for nearly a year. The tract of several acres which formerly belonged to T. J. Minford, and which is bounded by Putnam avenue, Woodland avenue, East Seventh street and Webster place, has been purchased by Peter Neumann, and will be developed by Mr. Neumann's son-in-law, John Gray. The property is the last big tract in a residential section of the city which has not been developed, and it will add several hundred building lots to the Netherwood section of the city.

Mr. Gray is now having the plans drawn for laying out the property, and they include the extension of Hillside avenue through to East Seventh street, and the addition of a new street running from Webster place to Woodland avenue.

The property is the remainder of the large estate owned at one time by Mr. Minford. The greater portion of it, including the Minford homestead at 1327 Watchung avenue, was purchased by George M. Holstein, who at the time of the sale lived at 502 Central avenue. The portion bought by Mr. Holstein included the large house and farm running through from Watchung to Putnam avenues, and including all property bounded by Watchung avenue, Hillside avenue and Putnam avenue to a point five hundred feet east, with the exception of the William F. Hobbie home at 1,303 Watchung avenue.

Since taking over the title Mr. Holstein has disposed of his Hillside avenue holdings and also a portion located on Putnam avenue, eight houses having been constructed on it.

The property purchased by Mr. Neumann is directly opposite the portion of the Holstein sale that extended to Putnam avenue, and a portion of it is well wooded. Although nothing authoritative has been given out by Mr. Gray concerning his plans, it is understood some very attractive homesites will be developed. It is in the midst of a section that has recently undergone a decided building boom, and has the added advantage of trolley facilities, the Netherwood line passing the frontage

BEGIN JAIL TERMS IN MODERN FINERY

Steigman Brothers Give Themselves up and Are Taken to State Prison.

Attired in nobby suits, flashy neckties and other wearing apparel of the latest and most approved style, Louis Steigman, of 131 East Fifth street, and his brother David, of New Brunswick, surrendered themselves to United States Marshal Bollschweiler in the United States District Court yesterday. It was the time limit for the men to yield to the law, following the imposition of sentence by Judge Relistab after they had been convicted of concealing bankruptcy assets, and they were transferred immediately to State Prison, the local man to serve one year and six months, and David to serve one year and five days. Yesterday the men gave themselves up to the same marshal who came to this city last April and arrested Louis at his home in East Fifth street.

The brothers conducted clothing stores, the local man owning the Surprise store on West Front street, and his relative being proprietor of a similar place of business in New Brunswick. They filed petitions in bankruptcy and it was charged that they had not made known the full extent of their possessions, and both were arrested. After conviction they appealed to the United States District Circuit Court, which tribunal affirmed the action of the lower court.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., of the firm of Reed and Hetfield, represented several of the creditors at the trial of the Steigmans and assisted the State in the prosecution.

REDUCTION OF THE FERRY RATE SOUGHT

Francis J. Blatz Instructed to Investigate New Jersey and Staten Island Company.

Elizabeth, April 9.—Francis J. Blatz, assistant county attorney, was instructed by the ferry committee of the Board of Freeholders, after a hearing yesterday afternoon, to secure data as to the properties, stockholders and operating expenses of the New Jersey and Staten Island Ferry Co. At the behest of the First Street Association a hearing was held with the object of securing a reduction of the ferry rate from five cents to three cents.

The company was not represented but sent a financial statement saying that its profits were small and that if the rate was lowered they would be wiped out altogether. Counsel for the association, John R. Connolly, disputed this. He has been unable to procure data as to the company's affairs and for that reason the Freeholders will endeavor to do so.

Freeholders Samuel Wilbur, Mr. Bourdon, D. F. Hennessy and William F. Walsh attended.

CHARMING MUSICALE ENJOYED BY MANY

Talented Artists Entertain at the Home of Mrs. W. A. Conner.

Mrs. William A. Conner, of Hillside avenue, gave a delightful musicale at her home yesterday, the affair being attended by more than 150 guests, chiefly from the city and borough, who thoroughly enjoyed the program as well as the hospitality of the hostess.

The artists were Mrs. Harry Johnston, of this city, pianist; Frederic Martin, bass, who is a soloist in Rev. Dr. Jowett's church, in New York, and Miss Edith Evans, of New York, accompanist. There were several groups of songs and piano selections on the program, and the audience was charmed with their rendition, the performers receiving an ovation. After the musicale refreshments were served. The program follows: Sonata, Op. 27, Beethoven, Mrs. Johnston; "I Am a Roamer" (from "Son and Stranger"), Felix Mendelssohn; "The Sea," Edward MacDowell; "I Am Thy Harp," R. Huntington Woodman; "Blow, Blow Thou Winter Wind," Roger Quilter, Mr. Martin; Toccato, William Mason; "Murmuring Breezes," Jensen-Niemann; "Fernerzauber," Brassin-Wagner, Mrs. Johnston; "Vision Fugitive" (from "Herodiade"), Jules Massenet, Mr. Martin; "Busslied" (Penitential Song), Beethoven; Berceuse, Chopin; "Etude de Concert," Liszt, Mrs. Johnston; "Longing," Frank LaForge; "The Pipes of Pan," Edward Elgar; "Allah," A. Walter Kramer, Mr. Martin.

HOTEL CLERK ENTERS PLEA OF NOT GUILTY

Frank D. Safford Arraigned Before Grand Jury and Held in $10,000.

(By Telegraph to the Press.

New York, April 9.—Frank . Safford, clerk of the Hotel Kensington, Plainfield, N. J., who identified James W. Osborne, the attorney, as the Oliver Osborne who spent one night at that hostelry with Rae Tanzer, the plaintiff in a $50,000 balm suit against James W. Osborne, was held in $10,000 bail this morning on an indictment charging perjury. Safford was arraigned before Judge Cushman in the Federal Court and pleaded not guilty to the charge. He was given until Tuesday next to change the plea should he so desire.

There are two specifications in the indictment. One is that Safford swore falsely at the hearing on the charge against Miss Tanzer for using the mails to defraud that James W. Osborne had been at Hotel Kensington on October 18 last. The second is that he swore falsely that James W. Osborne registered at the hotel on the same date with Miss Tanzer as O. Osborne and Mrs. Osborne. The grand jury did not consider any other indictments. The indictment of Safford was a routine matter, as he was arrested last Saturday on a Federal Commissioner's warrant, and has been since held in the Tombs.

THE DAILY PRESS IN DUNELLEN will be found on sale or delivered to any address every afternoon by Edward Pattock, druggist and newsdealer.

"REGIMENT OF TWO" A SCREAMING FARCE

Probasco Bible Class Will Present Play at High School Tomorrow Night.

Everything is ready—the finishing touches have been put on and the success of the annual play of the Probabasco Bible class is assured. The members of the cast have been working for months to make this play surpass the high standard already established.

The name of the play is "A Regiment of Two," and it is one of the funniest, most comical and genuinely enjoyable farces ever attempted by amateurs. Two gentlemen, for reasons best known to themselves, decide to join a regiment, but you can imagine their consternation when their "regiment" is suddenly called upon to go to Panama to quell a rebellion. The departure of of "the regiment" for the front causes such wild confusion, so mch family dismay, and gives such an unexpected picture of the unpreparedness of this "regiment," that it would be impossible, even for an English footman, to keep from laughing.

Just to keep the interest up, the long lost brother of the wife of one of the "soldiers" turns up when least expected, and such a character to be called a "parson!" It would be a delight to tell all about the return of the "conquering heroes," but that is one of the things that can be enjoyed best by seeing it. The play will be given tomorrow night at the Plainfield High School Auditorium, at 8:15 o'clock. The members of the class have tickets, or they may be obtained at Miller's drug store on Park avenue.

The cast is as follows: Arthur Sewall, Benjamin M. Harris; Ira Wilton, Robert P. Mitchell; Harry Brentworth, Carlton L. Smith; Reginald Dudley, Edward W. Cady; Jim Buckner, N. J. R. Chandler; Conrad Melzer, Earl B. Pierson; Eliza Wilton, Harold W. Downs; Grace Sewall, Fred E. Serrell; Laura Wilton, W. Herbert Hillman, and Lena, James W. Dunwell.

All of the boys are well adapted to the parts they take, and an evening of laughter is promised to all that attend. All those who are not provided with reserved seats are cautioned to come early.

YOUNGER SET ENJOYS DANCE IN PARK CLUB

Program a Thoroughly Enjoyable One for All Who Attended the Function.

One of the delightful social events of the season was conducted in the Park Club last night, a large gathering of amusement seekers enjoying a program of dancing until 2 o'clock this morning. Music furnished by VanEps' orchestra added greatly to the success of the occaasion, and the dance intermissions were taken up with a number of informal entertainment features.

The auditorium was appropriately decorated for the festivities with a profusion of tulips, ferns and cut flowers. The merrymakers were largely of the younger set, and a general good time was derived by all.

The committee in charge included Mrs. Hugh Jarvis, Mrs. J. J. O'Donohue, Mrs. Alexander Milne, Mrs. A. M. Abbott and Mrs. W. J. Roome, Jr.

VARIETY "SHOWER" GIVEN FOR MISS HELEN SMITH

Miss Helen Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Smith, of Central avenue, whose marriage to Leslie Bond, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Bond, of East Front street, will take place in the near future, was given a variety "shower" yesterday afternoon. The affair was arranged by Miss Emeline Manning, and was held at the home of her aunts, the Misses Sarah and Harriet Manning, in The Bristol, on West Front street.

Miss Smith was the recipient of many handsome and useful gifts. The decorative scheme was carried out in yellow and white, and was very attractive. The guests included the intimate friends of Miss Smith. There were many pleasing features, and during the afternoon refreshments were served.

—The "The Dansant," given by the Pine Mountain Association Saturday afternoon at the Park Club, promises to be most attractive. Tickets are 75 cents and may be obtained at the door.—Adv. ***

REPORT GERMANY READY FOR PEACE

Washington Hears That It Will Be Concluded by Them Without Concessions.

FRENCH MAKE ADVANCE

Gain Two Miles of Ground Along Twelve and a Half Mile Front—Austrians Renew Bombardment of Belgrade.

Washington, April 9.—Germany is ready to conclude peace, according to an authority close to Ambassador Von Bernstorff, but it must come without concession on the part of the German Empire or its people. The peace must be favorable to Germany or at least one that will not give her present enemies any advantage of the German people.

London, April 9.—The terrific French offensive against the German wedge at St. Mihiel has evidently made some gain. The cost in lives has been heavy on both sides and will increase as appears from the rival official accounts, each telling of great loss by the enemy.

Last night's French communique announced gains along twelve and one-half miles of trenches east of Verdun, two villages captured, and near Le Petre forest the French line advanced two miles on a four-mile front.

This is the greatest allied gain in months, and the only important one since the British advanced three-quarters of a mile along nearly a mile front and captured Neuve Chapelle in Flanders, on March 10.

In a resume of the fighting between the Meuse and the Moselle since April 4 the French War Office announces gains on two fronts which amount to a total gain of forty square miles on the ground held by the enemy in the St. Mihiel wedge.

Paris, April 9.—The French War office gave out the following statement this afternoon:

"We left unoccupied German trenches at Eparges because they were completely choked with corpses, and we repelled at the close of the day two counter attacks made by the enemy. In the woods of Ailly we captured new trenches and repelled two counter attacks as already reported. We also secured six machine guns and two trench mortars. The enemy ceased his counter attacks after midday. British troops repelled during night of April 7 and April 8, a German attack."

Amsterdam, April 9.—A new bombardment of Belgrade by monitors yesterday is announced in a despatch from Vienna.

A despatch from Breslau states that the daily ration of bread has been doubled owing to the fear of the authorities of renewed rioting.

Berlin, April 9 (by wireless)—The following statement was given out at German headquarters today:

"The Belgians have again been ejected from Drei Grachten in West Flanders. The place has been completely destroyed. We captured two Belgian officers, 100 men and two machine guns.

"In reply to French bombardment of places behind the German lines, Rheims, where a strong force of French artillery has been assembled, was shelled with incendiary bombs. The enemy's position around around Rheims were bombarded.

"Fighting between the Meuse and Moselle rivers continues with increasing violence. The French have suffered the heaviest losses, while their charges have achieved absolutely no progress.

"Eastern Theatre—Fighting, the result of which cannot be determined is in progress east of Kalvaria. There is nothing else to report."

LADIES' AUXILIARY DANCE.

The Ladies' Auxiliary, A. O. H., No. 1, of St. Joseph's church parish dance, which will take place tonight in Saengerbund Hall, promises to be one of the most successful in a social way ever held in this city. Arrangements have been made by the committee to give every attendant a good time. On the first floor the Irish dancers will have an opportunity to indulge in the native dances to the strains of a violin and bagpipe while the modern dances will be staged on the second floor.

BACK TO THE FARM.

Lottie Burnett and Emma Backer, the two girls arrested by Patrolman Roy E. Martin for loitering about the streets and who told a startling story to Chief Kiely yesterday morning, were released in the custody of the Burnett girl's mother last night. She promised to take them back to the family home at Stirling and provide a home for them.

INTERESTING RESUME OF BORO SCHOOL ATTENDANCE

Percentage of attendance of the borough schools during the month: Whittier School, 90 per cent.; Lincoln School, 90 per cent. Summary of days lost—Sickness, 677½; quarantine, 25½; religious holiday, 21½; bad weather and bad roads, 1½; at work, 157½; unfit clothing 25½; truancy, 1½; suspended, 4; pleasure or result of pleasure, 23; other reasons, 62; total 998½.

This is a decrease over the preceding month, when the measles were prevalent, of 735½ days.

Enrollment—Girls, 263; boys, 197; pupils attending Plainfield High School, 51; total 511.

Principal Guy H. Rentschler is rapidly adding to the supply of new books for supplementary reading. Practically all of the grades have been supplied now and the schools are better prepared than ever to handle this important subject.

In conformity with the wave of economy which is sweeping over the borough as the result of the vast expenditure for civic improvements, Principal Rentschler has recommended to the Board that the school books as they wear out be rebound and disinfected, instead of being discarded. This can be done for 40% of the net cost of the books or a saving of 60%.

ANNUAL SUPPER OF THE P. O. OF A. A SUCCESS

The annual supper of the P. O. of A. was held in W. G. Holton Hall last evening. The supper, which was an excellent one, was prepared by Mrs. T. F. Voorhees, Mrs. Edgar Shively, Mrs. Melvin Fritts, Mrs. William Shively, Mrs. William Lant and Mrs. James Teeling. The waitresses were Miss Eva Kuntz, Miss Blanche Teeling, Miss Helen Shively, Miss Edith Voorhees and Miss Hazel Van Alstyne. The suppers were served in the lower room of the hall.

The upper room of the hall, where dancing was held later in the evening to music by Naylor's orchestra, was artistically decorated with American flags. Prior to the dancing the Criterion Quartet—N. Willis Newman, C. G. Hunt, Peter Benson and Clarence Hunt, of Brooklyn, formerly a member of the "Rose of Panama Company, furnished a musical program. The quartet made a big hit in imitating a street organ and bag pipes. Clarence Hunt and N. Willis Newman sang several solos with pleasing effect and received the unanimous approval of the audience.

The committee in charge. Edgar Shively, Emil Vogel, Cornelius Ryno, Herbert Dayton, James Teeling and C. T. Voorhees, deserve credit for the success of the affair.

BASEBALL TOMORROW.

In order to prevent residents who may have read an article in the Fanwood columns of another Plainfield paper that has a local circulation, which was published in the issue of Friday, April 2, criticising the work of the borough street department, from obtaining a false impression of the work done by that committee, of which Augustus Sheelen is chairman, the members have requested publication of the following letter:

"Attention is called to the way in which the ruts in the road are filled up and also to the material used. It is the custom every year to fill the ruts with crushed stone, with dirt as a binder, in preparation for the annual application of oil. It is the same thing as done by larger municipalities, and is always satisfactory, but is taken exception to by the writer of the article. Mention is also made of the way in which the streets in the varous sections of the borough receive attention. All of the streets are kept in as near perfect condition as possible, and not those on the north side of the Jersey Central tracks at the expense of those on the south side, as the correspondent implies. The greater portion of the streets are on the north side of the tracks, as most of the population is on that side. Outside of South avenue, which is under county supervision, LeGrande and Martine avenues are the only thoroughfares on the opposite side of the tracks. The former is a new street and is in excellent condition, while Martine avenue, on which the author of the article resides, is in as good condition on one side of the track as on the other. On the whole the thoroughfares in the borough compare favorably with those in many large towns.

"This is not the first time that the street or other borough departments have been criticized through the same means, and it seems to be a departure from what is generally written in suburban columns and takes on the appearance of an editorial column."

At the Borough Council meeting last week Collector Charles Sheelen made the announcement that there are only thirty dogs in the borough limits that can be licensed under the new ordinance. From the noise about midnight at various times it would seem that there were several times that number, but it may be due to the extraordinary lung power of the different canines. When it comes to $2 some of the dogs are sure to disappear.

Another profitable afternoon was spent by nearly thirty women yesterday at the home of the Misses Kyte, on Martine avenue, in working for the relief of the Belgians, and another case of goods is about ready for shipment.

The usual Friday night social willl occupy the attention of the majority of the young people of the 'Plains tonight in the lecture room of the Baptist church.

The recently completed tax maps for the borough have been bound, and are now ready for use by the officials. There are three sets—the original to be in the custody of the borough clerk, the second to be used by the assessor and the other for the collector.

Mr. and Mrs. George Estelle have removed from Jersey City to Montague avenue. Mrs. Estelle was formerly Miss Nettie Ford, of this place.

In an effort to remedy the drainage conditions at the intersection of North and Martine avenues and Tilliston road, the street committee of the Borough Council has approached Freeholder Hall, and, while he has not made known as yet how the matter was received when brought up at a meeting of the Board of Freeholders, indications point to the matter receiving attention at the county expense. The streets which form the junction are all down grade to corner, and when there is a heavy rainstorm all of the water gathers at that that point, causing the flooding of sidewalk and road, to the detriment of pedestrians.

The Fanwood Station of the C. R. R. of N. J. was the scene of considerable activity yesterday afternoon, when a special train arrived, bringing a large company of moving picture players to the borough. A number of scenes were taken to be used in the production of a two-reel picture, "What Happened to Mary," featuring Donald Hall. It was the first time a company used this place to stage any of their pictures, and the players expressed themselves as pleased with the town.

A suffrage meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. William H. Hoar, on Martine avenue, on Monday afternoon at 3:45, when it is expected that Mrs. M. J. Reynolds, executive secretary of the Women's Political Union, will speak.

William Beeken, of North avenue, has returned to his studies at the Vermont Academy, Brattleboro, Vt., after spending the Easter vacation with his parents.

The Rev. Robert E. Marshall will be in charge of the prayer meeting in the Methodist church tonight.

Mrs. K. C. Felt, of Westfield, announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Katherine Gwyer Felt, to John Thompson, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Hudson Thompson, of Martine avenue. Miss Felt is a popular member of the Westfield younger set, and is also well known here. Mr. Thompson has been a resident of the borough many years, and is a graduate of the local schools, and also attended Plainfield High School, where he was elected captain of the football team the year he left school. He was also on the baseball and basketball squads.

Mayor William H. Hoard, of the borough, left this morning for California, to see the Panama-Pacific Exposition. Mrs. Hoar and daughters will not make the trip.

Mrs. Richard Tull and son, Richard, Jr., are visiting relatives at Germantown, Pa.

South Plainfield.

Mrs. John Cruickshank and daughter, Angeline and Jessie, have returned home after spending a few days with Mrs. Cruickshank's brother, Harry Herb, of Easton.

Miss Frances Manning, of Newark, is spending her Easter vacation with her grandmother, Mrs. William Manning.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Manning, of Newark, spent yesterday with his brother, Albert Manning.

Miss Anna E. Hamilton, of Fords, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. William Hamilton for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Horn attended the funeral of Mrs. Horn's brother, John Mahoney, of Brooklyn, today.

Raymond Pace, a former resident of this place, and who is now residing with his sister, Mrs. Walton Smith, has accepted a position at Spicer's.

Miss Dorothy Phillips has returned home after a visit with out-of-town friends.

William Schomp, formerly of this place, but now of Rayville, was the guest of friends here yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Smith left last evening for their home in Stanton.

Mr. and Mrs. William Hamilton have returned after a visit with friends in Plainfield.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

The change in vaudeville at Proctor's yesterday brought an act that is very much out of the ordinary. It was presented by Louise and Ferrera, Italian character musicians, playing on novel steel guitars. The music produced is the essence of sweetness, and held the audiences spellbound. The repertoire of the performance included ragtime medley as well as classical numbers from the familiar operas. An act of this kind has probably never been seen in Plainfield before.

One of those funny schoolroom acts was also on the bill for the last half of the week, being presented by the Seven Mischief Makers, a company of juvenile actors and actresses. The comedy was of a clean, wholesome nature, and the singing, especially the choruses, is excellent. The bill was rounded out by Lloyd and Adams, singing and talking comedians; Billy Wayne and the Warren Girls, in songs, dances and chatter, and Broomstick Elliott, novelty musician, who sings, talks, dances and produces music from a broomstick.

In addition to the vaudeville tomorrow, there will be a Chaplin picture and several dramatic productions. On Monday and Tuesday next Miss Vivian Martin, who made a lasting impression by her work in the photoplay production, "Old Dutch" and "The Wishing Rig," will again be seen as a camera artist in the five-part photoplay, "The Arrival of Perpetua."

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

The offerings for the present week at the Plainfield Theatre will be finished today and tomorrow with a presentation of Mrs. Leslie Carter in the photoplay production of "Du Barry," one of the latest Paramount releases. This is the first time that it has been shown in Plainfield, and it will undoubtedly draw capacity houses at all performances.

The management of the theatre takes great pleasure in announcing for next Monday and Tuesday, Jesse L. Lasky's production of "Cameo Kirby," the story of life in the South before the war. If a man had been especially created to play the title role of "Cameo Kirby," that man would have been Dustin Farnum, the star of this photodrama. The part is said to "fit him like a glove," for it is thoroughly romantic from start to finish, and calls for just those qualities which have so endeared Farnum to American audiences and audiences all over the world.

Every Tuesday at the Plainfield Theatre is the scheduled day of showing the thrilling detective story, "The Black Box," now approaching the third episode. This will be seen next week, and if you have missed the first two installments, begin following it now before it is too late.

SMALL FREEHOLDER BOARDS.

That the people of Union county want the present large and cumbersome Board of Freeholders done away with was proven several years ago, when a referendum on the question showed that a large majority were in favor of a small board. A subsequent court decision upset the will of the people, and the big board was continued. In order to correct the matter the Senate has passed the Rathbun bill, in which the only thing lacking is the fact that it does not make the establishment of small boards mandatory in all counties.

At present twelve out of twenty-one counties, having more than three fourths of the population of the State have decided in favor of small boards, although the aforementioned court decision has prevented the enforcement of the law in Morris, Mercer, Burlington, Bergen and Union counties.

One criticism of the old law was that it did not provide for the election of Freeholders by districts, and there was therefore no assurance that the townships and boroughs would be represented. That criticism is met by the Rathbun bill. Districts are to be created by commissioners appointed by a Supreme Court Justice.

The passage of the act will make it possible for the people of Union county to again settle this question for themselves.

Charles O'Conner Hennessy, Senator from Bergen county, and Edmund B. Osborne, one time candidate for the gubernatorial nomination on the Progressive ticket, have both written letters to Governor Fielder, opposing the reappointment of Chief Justice Gummere of the Supreme Court. Both give what they consider are good reasons why the appointment should not be made, and both show a woeful ignorance of the true facts in the case. The Newark Evening News has editorially shown that both the communications to the Governor, which of course were given to the newspapers by the two patriots, have contained inaccuracies of a glaring character. Chief Justice Gummere has proven his ability throughout his many years of service to the State, and to turn him down because of the mutterings of a few politicians would be manifestly unfair.

Plainfield has gone through the winter, caring for the city's unemployed, in a manner which makes us all proud of being citizens. The solution of the problem by a volunteer committee of public spirited men has been gratifying, and at the same time it has not taken on the appearance of charity in any way. Every person aided had to work for what was done for them, so that only the truly worthy received help. Various activities have been started since the spring weather came along and scores of men are now earning regular wages.

When a lot of the men now in the Legislature were seeking votes they were loud in their protestations that there was entirely too much legislation. Now that they have landed the jobs they were after, they have forgotten all about the campaign talk. About 1,100 bills have been introduced in the two houses at Trenton, which is 1,000 too many. One home rule bill with teeth in it would do away with ninety per cent of the State laws, for nearly all of them are passed to affect certain municipalities.

It is to be regretted that political exigencies forced the retirement of Job H. Lippincott as Commissioner of Motor Vehicles. He has been a capable and faithful official, and his past record should have been taken into consideration by Governor Fielder when he ordered Secretary of State Martin to dispense with his services.

It is suggested by the Trenton Times that some of the things which the Legislature has attempted to do lead to the belief that the next thing they will tackle will be the abolition of the ten commandments, some of the members individually have done that already.

Wonder how long it will be before the jitney 'bus craze reaches Plainfield. A line running out Park avenue to the Hospital, and out Somerset street to Watchung should do fine business.

The editorial tomorrow, on "Trees and Their Care," has been prepared by Ralph P. Gay, a graduate of the Massachusett's Agricultural College who gives some interesting advice on the subject.

Hurrah! Real, honest-to-goodness, genuine Delaware river shad are in the market.

LOCAL Y. W. C. A. WARDROBE CHOSEN

Only One Out of Northeastern Field to Be Sent to the Exposition.

Word received today by the local Y. W. C. A. association that the wardrobe which was recently sent to the National headquarters in New York was sent to San Francisco to compete for the national prize. The local association was the only one out of the northeastern field which is composed of New York, New Jersey and the New England States, to send a wardrobe.

The Plainfield girls have worked diligently on the outfit, having put their best thoughts with regard to appropriateness, attractiveness and economy into the work. The wardrobe was planned for an average business girl with reference to her income, work, daily life, environment, social life and recreation. It covered all the garments necessary for one season (summer and winter). Miss Helen Hummel was the model for the local association.

The basis of judging the entries in the national competition will be attractiveness and suitability, economy, workmanship and an itemized statement showing the additional list of clothes needed with a complete list of cost of each and total cost. The first prize will be a trip to the Panama-Pacific Exposition or a trip to Washington, D. C. The Plainfield Association has an excellent chance for this prize.

ANOTHER "SHOWER" GIVEN TO MISS JUSTINA SMITH

Another delightful affair was given to Miss Justina Smith last night at the home of Mrs. Alfred Seidel, 80 Jackson avenue, the borough, the affair being in the form of a linen shower. The articles were tied with yellow ribbons to a yellow and white umbrella, and suspended in a corner of the parlor. Daffodils predominated throughout the dining room and parlor. The gathering was a complete surprise to the bride-to-be, who received numerous articles of linen.

About thirty intimate friends of Miss Smith's were present last evening, and the time was passed in playing games, singing and dancing. Solos were rendered by Miss Justina Smith, Mrs. Alfred Seidel and Mrs. James Bailey. At a late hour refreshments were served. Miss Smith will shortly be married to Thomas Derick, of this city.

ANOTHER DEPARTMENT STORE IS BANKRUPT

J. B. Greenhut Company Was Placed in Hands of Receiver This Morning.

New York, April 9.—Walter C. Noyes and William A. Marble were appointed receivers for the J. B. Greenhut Company this morning by Judge Hand, in the United States District Court, on a bill of complaint brought by the Monmouth Securities Company. The company consented to the appointment of the receivers. A joint bond of $100,000 was fixed for them.

In its complaint the Monmouth Securities Company states that it is a creditor to the amount of over $200,000. Rose & Paskus, attorneys for the Greenhut Company, filed the consent of the company to the receivership. Benjamin Paskus said that unquestionably the business of the company would be reorganized and the concern would keep in business.

The bill of complaint sets forth that the assets of the J. B. Greenhut Company are approximately $7,466,629, and the liabilities, $3,513,000, exclusive of underlying mortgages. There are two mortgages on the company's buildings, one for $1,750,000, and the other for $1,200,000.

Following the suit in equity an involuntary petition in bankruptcy against the J. B. Greenhut Company was filed by three creditors, Fred Butterfield & Co., Wolf Erskine and Golden Brothers & Co.

Cadwallader, Wickersham & Taft, solicitors for the Monmouth Securities Company, gave out a statement saying that the proceedings, which have resulted in the appointment of receivers for the J. B. Greenhut Company, were instituted for the purpose of conserving the situation and bringing about a reorganization of the affairs of the company. The fundamental condition of the business is apparently sound, and the assets, other than real estate, encumbrances and the bonds secured thereby, seem to be largely in excess of the liabilities. C. W. Wickersham said that in his opinion the matter of reorganization would not present any important difficulties.

It was learned that the statement of assets made in the complaint did not include any real estate assets. The liabilities' statement was also exclusive of the liabilities on this real estate, which consists of a $6,000,000 bond issue secured in part by underlying mortgages totalling $2,950,000.

Nearly all the banks and trust companies in Wall street have loaned money to the J. B. Greenhut Company, but the amounts have been comparatively small and well distributed. From what could be learned today they range from $15,000 to $50,000, and in the main are well secured.

MRS. LOUIS HUMMER DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS

Mrs. Susan Boss Hummer, wife of Louis M. Hummer, died at 5:30 this morning at her home on St. Mark's place, following a long illness. Mrs. Hummer was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Boss, and was born at Lebanon forty-two years ago. She had made her home in Plainfield for the past twenty years. Mrs. Hummer was a member of the First Presbyterian church, and attended as long as her health permitted. Her illness was borne with a fortitude that endeared her all the more to the hosts of friends she had in all parts of the city and borough. Beside her husband, Mrs. Hummer is survived by one son, Norman Hummer; one sister, Miss Sarah Boss; also a nephew and a niece. The nephew is LeRoy Kirch, son of the late J. Philip Kirch, who died last week. The niece is Miss Ida Ramsay. All the relatives mentioned have made their home with Mrs. Hummer.

The funeral will be held at the late residence on St. Mark's place Sunday afternoon, at 2:30, and will be in charge of Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring. Burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

MRS. C. V. N. MANNING.

Mrs. Catherine V. N. Manning, widow of Alexander Manning, died this morning, at the home of her son, John Manning, who resides on the Albert Drake Farm below New Market. She has been ill since Sunday with pneumonia. Mrs. Manning was seventy-six years old and had resided in Piscataway township all her life. She and her husband occupied a farm on the Stelton road for many years and at the death of the latter, in June, 1909, she disposed of the property and afterward lived with her son. She leaves a brother, Richard Brokaw, of Bound Brook. Arrangements for the funeral have not yet been made.

TO INVESTIGATE CHARGES.

Assemblyman William N. Runyon, of this city, was yesterday named as chairman of a House committee to investigate charges in connection with the passage in the Assembly last Tuesday of Senate bill 183, admitting certain osteopathic physicians to practice in this State.

HIGHWAYMAN GAVE COP A HARD FIGHT

McGinley Had the Time of His Life Landing Desperado in Cell.

Patrolman Arthur McGinley had a busy time on North avenue this morning with a "highwayman" who had held up and robbed another at that point. The two were talking together on the avenue when one suddenly turned on the other and while holding his arms in a helpless condition searched his pockets. A getaway was attempted but McGinley hove in sight and tripped up the fleeing "desperado."

Questioned by Sergeant Higgins at headquarters the prisoner gave his name as Stanley Beggs, of North avenue, and his age as six years. He had noted a quarter in the possession of a young companion and decided to become a real Jesse James and steal the coin. He had successfully gained possession of the "two bits" when the cop appeared.

After giving the youngster a heart-to-heart talk, accompanied by a vivid description of the dark and rat-scourged cell reserved for bad boys, Higgins turned him loose. McGinley had to carry the youth to headquarters and little Stanley was later seen in the center of a group of admirers gleefully relating his experience with the bluecoat.

LOCAL TEACHERS ATTEND MANUAL TRAINING UNION

A large number of Plainfield instructors attended a meeting of the Union County Manual Training Teachers' Association held in the office of County Superintendent Johnson, at Elizabeth, this morning. There was a general discussion of the methods of teaching manual training and domestic science, and a resolution was passed calling for the individual effort of each member to bring about a uniform method of imparting these studies. The matter will be taken up further at a conference to be held in Elizabeth in June, at which time the annual competition of manual training pupils will take place.

The following Plainfielders were appointed to committees: Charles R. Bostwick, program committee; Lillian Jackson, co-operation committee; Alice M. Lindsley, sewing committee and Helen Decker, chairman of arts and crafts committee.

MANGLED HIS HAND.

James Goodman, of 1103 West Fifth street, received a badly mangled hand in an accident at the Pond Tool Works, yesterday afternoon. Dr. P. B. Cregar attended Mr. Goodman. Seven stitches were required to close the wound.

HIS MASTER'S VOICE

NEED LIVING MODELS FOR THESE CARTOONS

Suffragettes Are Looking for Material to "Try Out" for Parts in Production.

In order to aid them in the promotion of their Monday evening's entertainment the members of the Men's League for Women Suffrage have sent out scouts to look for a Suffragist who is willing to pose as an "anti," a voter willing to be harrassed by five formidable female suffragettes, men and short men, thin men and stout men.

The Suffragists have succeeded in casting the parts for the playlet, "His Master's Voice." D. Fred Aungst, C. C. Wheeler and Mrs. F. O. Ball will be among those taking the various roles.

The affair will have as a feature the presentation of "living cartoons," the parts being representative of various well known types of suffrage and anti-suffrage workers. Following a forty-minute presentation of the cartoons, Senator Moses E. Clapp will speak.

THE DAILY PRESS IN SOMERVILLE will be found on sale or delivered to any address every afternoon after 4:30 by Jacob Gernert, the Main street newsdealer.

PLAINFIELD COUNCIL, R. A., HAS ANNUAL "LADIES' NIGHT"

Plainfield Council, No. 711, entertained 150 members and friends at the annual "Ladies' Night" gathering in Arcanum Hall, last nigat. An excellent musical and literary program was provided by professional talent, with Orator L. Coles Smith acting as master of ceremonies. A big hit was made by Miss Justine Roberts, of Brooklyn, with her inimitable dialect stories and character recitations. Miss Roberts is a former Plainfield girl and is the granddaughter of the late Dan. S. Roberts. During the evening, an excellent address on the good of the order was given by Supreme Representative Kister, of Bayonne. There was also an informal social period following the conclusion of the program.

The affair was arranged by Orator L. Coles Smith in behalf of the entertainment committee of the Council and Regent R. A. Pruden.

AUCTION SALE.

VIBRATIONLESS ENGINE IS EXPLAINED BY INVENTOR

James W. Tygard, the inventor of this city, addressed a special meeting of the Abraham Lincoln Chapter, I. S. C. Fraternity, held in the First National Bank building last night, explaining the different parts of his vibrationless engine. Mr. Tygard was accompanied by L. M. Randolph, his manufacturer; William Henning, superintendent of construction, and F. S. Moore, of Manning, Maxwell & Moore, of New York.

Mr. Tygard stated that it was about 1895 in Pittsburg that he began work on rotary engines and as a result of his twenty odd years of struggles he had at last achieved success. The speaker explained that his engine will instantaneously reverse going at a speed of 5,000 revolutions per minute and is controlled by a single lever. Mr. Tygard said that had his type of engine been in use such disasters as the sinking of the Titanic and the U. S. Submarine F-4 would not have happened.

It was further explained that no foundation is required for the Tygard rotary engine and it is possible to suspend it on a flag-pole on the Singer Building in full motion without jar or vibration. At the conclusion of the talk, Mr. Tygard was elected an honorary member of the fraternity and L. M. Randolph expressed willingness to address the chapter on electrical insulation work at some future date.

SOLOISTS FOR "ELIJAH."

"Elijah," the well known oratorio by Mendelssohn, will be given at the Plainfield High School, April 22, by the Choral Society and orchestra, and the following soloists have been engaged: Miss Margaret Harrison, soprano, of New York; Miss Grace Carroll contralto, of Plainfield; Alfred D. Shaw, tenor, of New York, recently singing with Dr. Damrosch, and A. E. Betteridge, of New York, formerly of Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church. These soloists are all prominent in oratorio, and among the best of new York city. Members of the chorus are requested to attend the remaining two rehearsals.

HELD INITIAL DRILL.

The initial drill of Uniform Rank, Knights of the Golden Eagle, was held in Company K Armory last night. First Sergeant Dr. C. H. Pratt had charge of the drill in the absence of the captain and the members were given instruction by Sergeant George L. Apgar, of Company K. Meetings are scheduled to be held on the second and fourth Thursdays of each month, and the next meeting will be on April 29. The drill last night lasted about one hour and a half.

HANGED BY A GHOST.

Curious Story of a Murder and the Discovery of the Crime.

An old volume of the Quarterly Review mentions a crime discovered in a most extraordinary way in Australia in the year 1830, of which a public record is preserved and which figures with full details in the journals of that period.

The confidential steward of a wealthy settler near Sydney stated that his master had suddenly been called to England on important business and that during his absence the whole of his immense property would be in his exclusive care.

Some weeks after an acquaintance of the absentee settler riding through his grounds was astonished to perceive him sitting upon a stile. He strode forward to speak when the figure turned from him, with a look of intense sorrow, and walked to the edge of a pond, where it mysteriously disappeared.

On the morrow he brought a number of men to the water to drag it, and the body of the man supposed to be on his way to England was brought up. The steward was arrested, brought to trial and, frightened at the story of his master's ghost, confessed the crime, stating that he did the murder at the very stile on which his master's ghost had appeared. He was duly executed.—Case and Comment.

RUNNING UPSTAIRS.

Physical Energy It Expends Quoted In Horsepower.

To lift 550 pounds one foot in one second requires what is known as one horsepower. Similarly a horsepower is able to raise twice that weight one foot in twice the time, or one-half foot in just that time. Moreover, it can raise half 550 pounds one foot in half a second, or two feet in a second, and so on. Therefore when we lift one-fourth of that weight, 137½ pounds, four feet in one second, we are exerting a horsepower.

Accordingly, when a person who weighs 137½ pounds runs upstairs at the rate of four feet a second, he is exerting the equivalent of a horsepower. For a man weighing twice that much, 275 pounds, it would be necessary to climb at the rate of only two feet a second to exert a horsepower. It is possible to do much more.

As a matter of fact, a horse often exerts many times a horsepower. The average horse can draw a wagon up a hill where a ten horsepower engine with the same load would fail. A horse power does not represent the greatest momentary strength of the average horse, but is a measure of the power which he can exert continuously.—New York World.

DON O. GATES TELLS OF "COMMUNITY WORK"

The annual tea of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. was held at the home of Mrs. Philip Suffern, of Kensington avenue, yesterday afternoon. There were over fifty members present who enjoyed an excellent program. Mrs. Thomas Hylan, president of the auxiliary, presided. Secretary Alfred Estes, of the local association, was present and made a short address.

Mr. Estes was followed by Don O. Gates, secretary of community work in Newark, who talked interestingly on the subject of community work. Charles R. Scott, State secretary of Bay's Work, spoke about the annual summer camp at Wawayanda Lake and told of the plans of this year. A social hour followed the program.

MOTORCYCLIST HURT IN COLLISION WITH AUTOMOBILE

Albert Zeisel, of West Sixth street, was badly hurt this morning, when the motorcycle he was driving collided with an automobile owned and driven by Dr. E. B. Alcut at Seventh street and Monroe avenue. He was thrown many feet away and was picked up in an unconscious condition by Dr. Alcut who took him to his home. He is now confined to his bed under the care of Dr. Clawson, the full extent of his injuries not being known at this time.

Zeisel was riding west on Seventh street when the automobile which was directly ahead of him turned south at the Monroe avenue corner. The motorcycle was barely touched by the larger vehicle, but it was of sufficient force to cause Zeisel to lose his control. The motorcycle was a new one just out of the shop, and was badly damaged.

CHARLES B. ROGERS.

Charles Benjamin Rogers, a former resident of Plainfield, died Wednesday in the Tennessee State Soldiers' Home. He was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Clark Rogers, who lived many years ago on Madison avenue, near Eighth street, the family having removed here from Brooklyn. He leaves one brother, T. Albert Rogers, of West Second street, who is night clerk in the Queen City Hotel. Arrangements for the funeral have not yet been completed, but it is probable that the body will be brought to Plainfield for interment.

To Edward W. Requa and Edna Requa:

By virtue of an order of the Court of Chancery made on the day of the date hereof, in a cause wherein Daniel H. Manning is complainant and William F. Cory, et ux, et als. (including yourselves), are defendants, you are required to appear, plead, answer or demur to the bill of said complainant on or before the Seventh day of June next, or the said bill will be taken as confessed against you.

The said bill is filed to foreclose a mortgage given by William S. Cory and Bella R. Cory, his wife, William F. Cory, unmarried, Bertha M. Requa and Edward W. Requa, her husband, heirs at law of Mary Jane Cory, deceased, to Daniel H. Manning dated the First day of September, Eighteen hundred and ninety-nine, on lands in the Township of Fanwood, Union county, New Jersey, and you Edward W. Requa, are made a defendant because you were the husband of Bertha M. Requa, who departed this life intestate, seized of an equal undivided one-half interest in the premises under consideration, and that you as her husband claim or might claim to have a right of curtesy or some other right in said mortgaged premises; and you Edna Requa are made a defendant because you are the child of, and one of the heirs at law of Bertha M. Requa, who departed this life intestate, seized of an undivided one-half interest in the premises under consideration and that you therefore claim or may claim to have an undivided one-half interest or other interest in said mortgaged premises.

LEAL BALLISTS TO OPEN AT ROSELLE

Local Aggregation Will Play Its Initial Game at That Place Tomorrow.

Coach C. D. Wardlaw, of the Leal School baseball team, will take his charges to Roselle tomorrow afternoon to play the High School team of that place. The private school boys have not been practicing much this week but were out this morning on Crescent Oval for a long workout. Several of the players are out of town because of the spring vacation and substitutes may have to be used in the opener tomorrow.

Leal's veteran port-sider, Voorhees, will enter upon his work tomorrow on the mound and should give a good account of himself this season. He has a good amount of speed and better control than last year, with a larger assortment of curves. Seven of last year's players will get positions and there will be several shifts. Fred Dickerson will occupy the initial sack and Wilson, a second string man last season, will play around the difficult corner. The batting order for tomorrow's game is announced as follows, but is subject to change: Parmly, lf; Stewart, ss; Dickerson, 1b, Schneider, c; Voorhees, p; Lyon, 2b; Garrigues, rf; Dale, cf; Wilson, 3b. Subs.—Miller, Blake and Stevenson.

RUTGERS NINE IN TIE.

New Brunswick, April 9.—Colgate and Rutgers College baseball teams played a tie game here yesterday. The score stood 6 to 6 when the game was called in the eighth inning on account of darkness.

N. P. H. S. TEAM IS READY FOR THEIR INITIAL GAME

Provided that six inches of snow does not fall between now and 3:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, the North Plainfield High School baseball team will play its initial game of the season on Hyde Oval. The boroughites opponents will be Rutgers Prep. and the New Brunswick lads are coming with their strongest. They defeated the North Plainfield team twice last season, the only games they won, and the boys from across the brook are still sore at the poor showing made, and are determined to get back at their rivals from Middlesex.

The local team has been practicing hard for the last two days and the finishing touches will be put on this afternoon by Coach Mullin. Those who will probably get into the game are Hebert, lf; Van Deventer, cf; Van Mater, rf; Townley, 3b; Dilts, ss; Conroy or Seidel, 2b; Meade, 1b; Stahl, p; Smalley and Day, c. The new suits, which were recently purchased, will be worn tomorrow.

COLLEGE BASEBALL RESULTS

At New York—Columbia, 5; Holy Cross, 12.

At New Brunswick—Colgate, 6; Rutgers, 6 (called in eighth; darkness).

At Washington—Georgetown, 3; Fordham, 1.

At Charlottesville, Va.—Virginia, 9; Williams, 1.

At Annapolis—Navy, 3; Cornell, 2.

FIRST CONTEST FOR P. H. S. AGGREGATION

Schoolboys and Graduates Will Fight it Out in Annual Go at Parker Field.

The Plainfield High School baseball team will open the season tomorrow on Parker Field, when it will meet the Camp Bowser aggregation, a team composed of graduates of the Ninth street institution. The candidates for the city school team have been practicing hard under the coaching of Ralph S. Patch, and are in fine condition to play the first game. Many of last year's players, who took part in the greatest interscholastic series ever held in this city, have again earned places, and there are also several changes in the positions.

The team is fortunate in having two good pitchers on the squad. Brick, who did some of the heavy work last season, and Tone Denny, who played ball all last summer. Both have lost of speed and snappy curves. Bill Peacock has been pulled from the outfield, and will probably be the main catcher. Apgar is also in line for this position. "Bill" Victorsen, first baseman last year, has been switched across the diamond and will stop the hot liners that go down the third base line this year. The initial sack will be in charge of Aaron Hirch. O'Leary will again cover second base, and Captain Beny Rosenson will play the shortfield. In the outfield will be McDowell in right, Mills in center and Art Kyle in left.

The team has been practicing on Crescent Oval because Parker Field has not been in condition, but the game tomorrow will probably be staged on the latter field. It will start at 3:30 o'clock.

BOB FITZ AND HIS FINANCE GO SOUTH TO BE MARRIED

"We will stay in Washington maybe a week," said Mrs. Semonin, "but whenever we do come back you may be sure we will be married. I am positive about that. There has been too much printed in the newspapers about our marriage already."

"Have you made arrangements as to whom will perform the ceremony and where the honeymoon will be spent?"

"I can't tell you who will marry us," answered the prospective bride, "but it won't be any big ceremony or display. For my part I would prefer to have a justice of the peace marry us. I do not believe in church weddings, lots of flowers and elaborate decorations. We migat take a short honeymoon trip."

"OPEN SHOOT" WILL BE HELD HERE TOMORROW

The postponed open shoot, which was to have taken place last Saturday, under the auspices of the Climax Gun Club, will be run off tomorrow afternoon on the club's grounds, on Plainfield avenue. There will be the ten events as announced and a large number of entries have been received which will undoubtedly make the contests close.

Luncheon will be served at the grounds and a schedule for buses has been arranged to carry passengers.

TAUGHT ELK COLTS AN ALLEY LESSON

Seniors Spanked Youngsters in Three Games Last Night.

The Elks' Senior bowling team had an easy time disposing of the Juniors on the Watchung avenue alleys last night, taking all three games by wide margins. The "Kids" were never in it at any time, although Waldorf hit for a 206 in the second game, which went for high score of the match. The Juniors had a large gallery with them, while their opponents were apparently friendless. All of the cheering was in favor of the Juniors.

The Seniors hit for 908 in the first game against their opponents' 824, and in the second game went their team score one pin better, getting a 909. The pinning of Frank Blatz, of the Senior five, was the feature of the match, he counting for scores of 201, 203 and 204, respectively. Campbell went as high as 200.

For the Juniors, Causbrook scored a 204, and Waldorf a 206. The scores follow:

ELK "KIDS."

Interscholastic League on the Courts Promises Much Interest.

Paul Collier, the local merchant, has offered a silver loving cup to the winner of the interscholastic tennis tournament between Leal's, Plainfield and North Plainfield High Schools, which will be played this spring.

In offering the cup, Collier, who has also put up a cup for the baseball championship, between these schools, said that he wished to promote the interest in tennis which has sprung up in the local High Schools this year so that it may become a regular thing just the same as baseball or basketball and that tournaments between the schools may be held every year.

The first match of the series will be played between Plainfield High School and Leal's on the Park Club courts May 7, and Plainfield and North Plainfield will meet for the first time May 18 on Plainfield's courts.

BATTIN BEAT CRANFORD.

Battin High School's baseball team defeated the Cranford High School nine in the opening game of the season, at Cranford, yesterday afternoon, by a score of 9 to 7. The following is the score by innings:

Battin	0 0 2 2 0 0 0 3 2	9	11	3
Cranford	2 0 0 0 0 0 0 2 3	7	12	4

Batteries—Motley, Woodruff, Tomlinson and Donahue; Morris and Sinclair.

RANDOLPH WILL PLAY.

Cliff Randolph's name appears in the list announced by the manager of the Perth Amboy baseball club. The local player will probably pitch the first game which takes place on April 17. The Pacers will practice Sunday at Perth Amboy instead of playing in New York as was scheduled.

VOORHEES BEAT SNYDER.

Pat Snyder and Art. Voorhees rolled three games in the borough tourney last night, the latter taking the first and last games. The results follow:

P. Snyder	136	202	116

SIOUX TEAM HOST.

The members of the Sioux team of the Y. M. C. A. Indian League, entertained the members of the Wawayanda team at lunch at the association building this noon. Harold Wilson, captain of the Sioux, was toastmaster.

NATIONAL OFFICERS WILL VISIT P. O. OF A. CAMP

The regular meeting of Camp 1, P. O. of A., will be held tomorrow evening in the rooms in the Babcock building, at 7:30. During the session, six candidates will be initiated by the national vice-president and staff of Camp 8, of Jersey City.

Among those who will be present will be the following: Miss Hannah Meyer, national vice-president; Geo. Smith, national secretary, of Phillipsburg, and Jacob Baker, vice-president of the national association, of Camden. Following the business program, a social time will be enjoyed by the members.

Paris Gowns at Wanamaker's

Even Paris in her days of trial never rested, but continued to create.

This year she speaks to the world through America. Her great inspiration has been the Panama Pacific Exposition, celebrating the completion of the work begun by one of her own countrymen, De Lesseps. The Paris Exhibit at San Francisco is the supremest fashion effort of the world, and discloses the very soul of the French creative art.

Exact replicas of the gowns and hats shown by Paris in the San Francisco Exhibition by the great dressmakers and milliners of the French capital have been made and they are now on exhibition in the Wanamaker Auditorium.

Fresh from their sea boxes, a panorama of unfolding beauty, like flowers from an exquisite garden, the latest Paris forethought of summer expressed eloquently in each model.

Doeuillet, Lanvin, Doucet, Callot, and many others — hundreds of styles — charming summer frocks in the new waist silhouette. Laces in golds, creams and appliques. One piece dresses, tailored suits and evening frocks. The morning of life transplanted into shimmering taffetas and chiffons — serges, voiles — wonderful effects.

You must see the Wanamaker fashion show, for it is the authoritative exhibit of the season, not only in charming French apparel but in lovely costumes made in America. Eleven specialized sections within one specialized large store of fashions, each seeking to do a little better than has ever been done in the direction of all past efforts.

The Wanamaker salons of fashion help women to express their womanliness and personality graciously, inexpensively, and in accord with the mode, and added to this riot of choice is the Wanamaker service which includes expert fitting and alterations, so that one need not forego particular choice on account of size.

These are busy days at the great Wanamaker Store and Suburban residents should see all there is to be seen, which is very much indeed.

CANDIDATES HUSTLING FOR VOTES TO WIN TRIP TO SAN FRANCISCO

Tours to Be Great Educational Treat for Four Young Women—One who Polls Biggest Vote to Select Chaperone.

All through this section of the country the Press contest has aroused the greatest interest, and there are any number of subscribers and prospective subscribers who are only waiting to be approached by some candidate in order to lend their aid. There are many who are not personally acquainted with a candidate who will willingly aid the first candidate who applies to them. And many of the candidates have already discovered this fact, and, encouraged by it, are working with renewed energy. There is no luck about winning the contest—the candidates who put forth the most endeavor are the ones who are going on the transcontinental tour.

Travel an Education.

"No one's education is quite complete until he or she has seen something of the world."

How many people there are who have tasted the joys of travel and are daily making personal sacrifices to take some long-looked-for trip?

So many opportunities for travel present themselves to a man and so few to woman. A man starts on a journey and rough-works his way while knocking about. But with a woman it is different. Unless she travels well she is likely to be subjected to many annoyances and embarrassments. It is a daring woman who will start on a journey without plenty of money in her purse to see her through.

Therefore, when an opportunity arises to go on such a tour as the Press offers, it seems as though anyone who has the good fortune to be nominated as an eligible candidate should be wideawake enough to do her utmost to take advantage of it. Here you are offered a tour across the American continent absolutely free of the petty annoyances and little burdens of travel—all expenses paid by the Press. And to win this trip entirely by one's efforts will add a great charm to it and increase a hundredfold the enjoyment.

Must Hustle to Win.

Those who will win will do so on popularity and hustle; and on that alone The Press will send three trip-winers and a companion to the highest vote-getter across the American continent and to San Francisco; the woman receiving the greatest number of votes of the whole contest to win the honor and the privilege of choosing her traveling companion. This will be done, no matter what number of votes is polled. But this is an assured fact—that the women selected by the people of Plainfield and vicinity to take these grand trips will be selected because they are popular and deserve the honor. All expenses on these trips will be paid by the Press, and not one detail has been overlooked in connection with any of the trips that could be of any possible pleasure or convenience to the successful ones.

Itinerary Most Attractive.

Experienced travelers express themselves in the most unstinted terms upon the trips offered by the Press, claiming that the itinerary is as attractive a one as could possibly be conceived.

Each day the hustle for ballots becomes more vigorous as the candidates realize how easy is is to accumulate them. The indications are that a number of those who were among the unknowns at the last vote anouncement will come in for their share of the applause, having stepped from obscurity into the limelight.

The tour can be just as easily won by one candidate as by another if there is only enough energy put into the campaign. Perhaps you have enrolled your name and are hesitating about taking the first step. Your own judgment should show you that the chances of winning are still splendid in any district. What others have done you can do.

Votes Are Waiting.

The votes are waiting to be garnered if you but have the ambition to ask your friends to ballot them for you.

Get started!

Make an effort!

Remember the old saying: "You never can tell till you try."

Those at the head of the list should not allow a moment to slip by in which they may gain a vote, as all such will be needed when the real struggle comes. All at the bottom of the list should move heaven and earth until they get on top. It can be done, anything can be done if you only think it can and think hard enough about it. Nothing is impossible to the one who really does make a serious effort; things are only impossible to the half hearted.

Who will lead in their districts and hold it, is becoming an interesting problem. At present those who hold this distinction are enjoying many advantages as a result of their diplomacy. In all of the districts there are aspirants who easily have a chance, but are not divulging any secrets as to what they intend doing.

MEAT INJURIOUS TO THE KIDNEYS

Take a Tablespoonful of Salts if Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers.

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid, says a well-know authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from the overwork; they get sluggish, the eliminative tissues clog and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys ache and feel like lumps of lead, and you have stinging pains in the back or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night; when you have severe headaches, nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, acid stomach or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending urinary and bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.—Adv.

Li-Chi The Mandarin Chang

Announce Their Annual

Sale of Canton China

at ¼ off regular prices

IN accordance with our annual custom, we shall allow a discount of 25% on all purchases of Canton China made during the month of April.

Everybody knows Canton China—the always popular blue and white "willow" pattern—with its pagodas, bridges, streams, boats, little figures of men and women, and the love birds. A quaint legend has it that the story depicted on the china tells how a mandarin had an only daughter, Li-Chi, who fell in love with her father's secretary, Chang.

The mandarin forbade the match, so the lovers eloped, hiding for a time in a gardener's cottage, until at last they attempted to make their escape to an island which was Chang's home. The mandarin pursued them, whip in hand and would have killed them had not the gods come to the rescue and changed the two into a pair of turtle doves. At the time of the elopement the willow was shedding its leaves, hence the name of the design.

For over half a century Vantine's has been the headquarters in this country for Canton China, and in no other establishment in the United States may be found such a complete assortment as we always carry in stock.

TAYLOR PIONEER EFFICIENCY MAN

Was First to Make System an Applied Science.

MADE IT WORK OF LIFETIME

Put Into Execution His Ideas Regarding Organization In Shop, Factory, Counting Room and Sales Department—Held More Than One Hundred Patents For Various Inventions.

Frederick Winslow Taylor, who died in Philadelphia recently, was the first man to make efficiency an applied science. His life work, as his friend and colleague, Morris L. Cooke, director of public works of Philadelphia, puts it, was "studying peoples' desires for high wages, short hours and an industrial democracy on an economic basis. He did this by increasing their efficiency."

Mr. Taylor was the son of Franklin and Emily Winslow Taylor. He prepared for Harvard at Phillips Exeter academy in 1874, but was forced to leave college through impaired eyesight. However, he entered Stevens Institute of Technology in Hoboken later and was graduated with the degree of mechanical engineer. One year after his graduation he and Miss Louise Spooner of Philadelphia were married. Upon leaving Harvard he had entered the employ of the Midvale Steel company, and in connection with his technical study had continued his work with that corporation.

Taylor started at the bottom. Successively he was gang boss, assistant foreman, foreman of the machine shops, master mechanic, chief draftsman and finally chief engineer. In 1889 he began the study of efficiency engineering. He liked to puzzle over problems to make greater production from a given amount and how to increase the wages of the workman by showing him a better and more efficient manner in which to labor. So wrapped in this subject did he become that Mr. Taylor made it his life work.

His Work In Great Industries.

In 1889 he decided to leave the employ of the Midvale company and put into execution his own ideas regarding scientific management. This meant organization in shop, factory, counting room and sales departments. His success as the pioneer in his chosen field was instantaneous. He was given the problem of organizing great corporations along his own individualistic lines. These included the Bethlehem Steel company, Cramps' and the Midvale Steel company.

He turned his trained mind toward efficiency in cutting metals. Hitherto there was a great deviation in the work of the tools. To rectify this Mr. Taylor began experiments that finally resulted in the Taylor-White process for treating modern high speed tools. So successful was he in this field that he produced tools whose cutting efficiency varies less than 1 per cent. With Maunsel White he also invented a process of treating steel that required wonderful scientific investigation.

In addition, Mr. Taylor received more than a hundred patents for various inventions connected with high speed tools and was awarded the gold medal at the Paris exposition in 1900 and the Elliott Cresson medal of the Franklin institute.

Honors thick and fast were also conferred on the distinguished engineer. He was given the degree of doctor of science by the University of Pennsylvania in 1906 and doctor of laws by Hobart college in 1912. He was also elected president of the American Association of Mechanical Engineers, serving from 1905 to 1906.

REDFIELD HITS "STUCK UP."

Rebukes Man Who Objects to Work Beneath His Position.

Secretary Redfield of the department of commerce has rebuked an employee of his department who is said to have complained recently that he was required to do work beneath his position.

"I do not know what the kind of work can be which is beneath any man's position," the secretary wrote the employee in passing on his case. "I think there is no work of which I know or have heard that is beneath my dignity to do, and I am glad to say that I have done the plainest and hardest and, what is sometimes mistakenly called the most menial work and am ready to do it again if there is occasion for it."

BIG GUN CRUMPLES CAR.

Fourteen Inch Giant Causes Smash on Way to Sandy Hook.

So heavy is a great fourteen inch gun just completed to guard New York city from hostile attack that it broke down one of the two flat cars conveying it along the West Shore railroad, near Cornwall, N. Y., on its way to Sandy Hook to be mounted.

It is said to be the most powerful fourteen inch gun ever made. It was on its way from Watervliet arsenal when the journal of one of the cars, overtaxed by its excessive weight, wore out and had to be replaced. The gun extended almost the length of the two cars, the breech resting on the rear one.

PROPOSALS FOR COAL.

Proposals will be received by the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital, through their Executive Committee, at a meeting to be held on April 30th, 1915, for furnishing 650 tons, more or less, of the best Anthracite Coal for steaming purposes in the different sizes as follows.

Buckwheat Coal . . . . . 600 tons
Egg and Stove Coal . . . . . 30 tons
Nut Coal . . . . . 10 tons

Parties bidding will be required to specify in their bids the name of coal and shippers of the same.

All coal to be non-clinking, thoroughly screened over a sieve fine enough to take out all dust and small particles of coal, and to be of a quality acceptable to the Board of Governors or their agent.

All coal to be placed in the coal bins within the Hospital without extra expense to the Hospital for handling or trimming the coal in the bins, and to be delivered at such time as the Hospital may direct.

Bids to specify whether long or short tons are to be delivered.

All Proposals to be sealed and endorsed, "Proposals for Coal," addressed to the Superintendent of the Hospital and delivered to him before noon, April 30, 1915.

The Board of Governors reserve the right to reject any or all bids.

GRANT AND LEE AT APPOMATOX

Historic Scene Half Century Ago When Great Conflict Ended.

Fifty years ago today two great Americans met at Appomattox Courthouse, in Virginia, and recorded one of the final chapters in the great struggle between the North and the South. In American fashion, General Robert E. Lee and General Ulysses S. Grant shook hands, discussed the important business of the occasion, and wrote the important documents which established the terms of surrender of the famished forces of the Sothern leader.

In every city, town and hamlet in America today the half-century anniversary of this truly great event is being observed. The fifty long years have removed the principals in the negotiations, both beloved in the North and South, and have assuaged the bitterness of defeat and the pride of victory into a united feeling that the ending of the terrible conflict was magnificent.

The 9th of April, 1865, fell on a Sunday. General Lee went to the conference, accompanied by but one officer, Colonel Charles Marshall, his military secretary. Early on that morning he had received the report of General Gordon, in command of the advancing wing, that the situation was hopeless. "There is nothing left for me but to go and see Grant, and I would rather die a thousand deaths," General Lee is reported to have said. Correspondence looking to surrender had been exchanged since the evening of the seventh between the two generals, and Lee had proposed a point of meeting on the old Richmond stage road, between the two picket lines.

General Lee's note reached Grant as he was riding along the wagon road, near Appomattox Courthouse. The Northern general at once replied that he would push on to the point of meeting. The message reached Lee while the latter was sitting by the roadside, near Appomattox Courthouse. Issuing orders to observe a truce, he hastened to a little brick house to await Grant. He was offered more commodious quarters in the McLean house, and it was there that the historic meeting took place.

When Grant entered, the two great generals shook hands cordially for several minutes. Their first conversation was of their meeting in Mexico, when both were in the same service. The staff of General Grant then entered and formed a background for the picture.

Grant and Lee were different in appearance. Grant was the younger man by sixteen years, and looked stooped ad less imposing than Lee, stooped and less imposing than Lee, beard silver white, gave him a martial appearance.

The two generals discussed the terms of surrender, which were, in short, that the men were to be paroled and all arms to be delivered up as captured property. Lee nodded as Grant explained his terms and spoke of the benefit of peace. At the request of General Lee the terms were then written. As Grant wrote rapidly, he glanced at General Lee's handsome sword, and he added the words to his terms, "This will not embrace sidearms of officers." General Lee was deeply touched when he read this addition. He finished reading, and stated that the cavalrymen and artillerymen of his command owned their own horses, and requested that they be allowed to retain them. Grant replied that he had not known this, and that he would instruct his officers "to let all the men who claim to own a horse or a mule to take the animals home with them to work their farms."

While the terms and the letter of acceptance were being copied, General Grant introduced Lee to the officers present. The conference ended about 4 in the afternoon. General Lee, shaking hands with Grant, left the room with his aide. As his horse was being brought, Lee stood on the step and smote the palm of his left hand with his fight fist, as he gazed toward the encampment of his suffering army. He had the sympathy of everyone present, and as he rode away General Grant stepped down the porch, saluted him by raising his hat, and all of the Union officers did likewise. Lee raised his hat respectfully, and rode off to break the news to the brave fellows he had so long commanded.

A FOOL AND HIS MONEY

By GEORGE BARR M'CUTCHEON,

Author of "Graustark," "Truxton King," Etc.

Copyright, 1915, by George Barr McCutcheon.

CHAPTER XVII.

I Am Forced Into Being a Hero.

SITTING alone in my study late in the afternoon smoking a solitary pipe of peace, I remembered Mr. Bangs, the lawyer, the man with the top button off. What had become of him? His presence or, more accurately, his absence suddenly loomed up before me as the forerunner of an unwelcome invasion of my preserves. He was no doubt a sort of advance agent for the Titus family and its immediate ramifications.

Just as I was on the point of starting out to make inquiries concerning him there came to my ears the sound of tapping on the back of Red Ludwig's portrait.

I rushed over and rapped resoundingly upon Ludwig's pudgy knee. The next instant there was a click, and then the secret door swung open, revealing the eager, concerned face of my neighbor.

"What has happened?" she cried.

I lifted her out of the frame. Her gaze fell upon the bandaged fist.

"Mr. Bangs spoke of a pistol. Don't tell me that he—he shot you!"

I held up my swollen hand rather proudly. It smelled vilely of arnica.

"This wound was self inflicted, my dear countess," I said, thrilled by her expression of concern. "I had the exquisite pleasure—and pain—of knocking your former husband down."

"Oh, splendid!" she cried, her eyes gleaming with excitement. "Mr. Bangs was rather hazy about it, and he would not let me risk telephoning. You knocked Maris down?"

"Emphatically," said I.

She mused. "I think it is the first time it has ever happened to him. How—how did he like it?"

"It appeared to prostrate him."

She smiled understandingly. "I am glad you did it, Mr. Smart."

"If I remember correctly, you once said that he had struck you, countess."

Her face flushed. "Yes, on three separate occasions he struck me in the face with his open hand. I—I testified to that effect at the trial. Every one seemed to look upon it as a joke. He swore that they were—were love pats."

"I hope his lack of discrimination will not lead him to believe that I was delivering a love pat," said I grimly.

"Now tell me everything that happened," she said, seating herself in my big armchair. Her feet failed to touch the floor.

When I came to that part of the story where I accused Tarnowsy of duplicity in connection with the frescoes she betrayed intense excitement.

"Of course it was all a bluff on my part," I explained.

"But you were nearer the truth than you thought," she said, compressing her lips. After a moment she went on: "Count Hohendahl sold the originals over three years ago. I was here with Maris at the time of the transaction and when the paintings were removed. Maris acted as an intermediary in the deal. Hohendahl received $200,000 for the paintings, but they were worth it. I have reason to believe that Maris had a fourth of the amount for his commission. So, you see, you were right in your surmise.

"The infernal rascal! Where are the originals, countess?"

"They are in my father's villa at Newport," she said. "I intended speaking of this to you before, but I was afraid your pride would be hurt. Of course I should have spoken if it came to the point where you really considered having those forgeries restored."

"He will challenge you," she went on nervously. "He has fought three duels. He is not a physical coward." Her dark eyes were full of dread.

I hesitated. "Would you be vitally interested in the outcome of such an affair?" I asked. "I mean on Rosemary's account. He—he is her father, you see. It would mean"—

A slow flush mounted to her brow. "That is precisely what I was thinking, Mr. Smart. It would be—unspeakably dreadful."

I stood over her. My heart was pounding heavily. She must have seen the peril that lay in my eyes, for she suddenly slipped out of the chair and faced me, the flush dying in her cheek, leaving it as pale as ivory.

"You must not say anything more, Mr. Smart," she said gently.

A bitter smile came to my lips, and I drew back with a sickening sense of realization. There was nothing more to be said. But I now thoroughly understood one thing—I was in love with her!

I was something of a philosopher. I submit that my attitude at the time of my defeat at the hands of the jeweler's clerk proves the point conclusively. Quite before I knew it I was myself again, a steady, self reliant person who could make the best of a situation, who could take his medicine like a man.

She was speaking of the buttonless lawyer, Mr. Bangs. "He is waiting to see you this evening, Mr. Smart, to discuss ways and means of getting my mother and brothers into the castle without discovery by the spies who are undoubtedly watching their every move."

I drew in another long, deep breath. "It seems to me that the thing cannot be done. The risk is tremendous. Why not head her off?"

"Head her off? You do not know my mother, Mr. Smart. She has made up her mind that her place is here with me, and there isn't anything in the world that can—head her off, as you say."

"But surely you see the danger?"

"I do. I have tried to stop her. Mr. Bangs has tried to stop her. So has father. But she is coming. We must arrange something."

I was pacing the floor in front of her. She had resumed her place in the chair.

"My deepest regret, countess, lies in the fact that our little visits will be—well, at an end. Our delightful little suppers and"—

"Oh, but think of the comfort it will be to you—not having me on your mind all of the time! I shall not be lonesome; I shall not be afraid; I shall not be forever annoying you with selfish demands upon your good nature. You will have time to write without interruption. It will be for the best."

"No," said I positively. "They were jolly parties, and I shall miss them."

She looked away quickly. "And if all goes well I shall soon be safely on my way to America. Then you will be rid of me completely."

I was startled. "You mean that there is a plan afoot to—to smuggle you out of the country?"

"Yes. And I fear I shall have to trouble you again when it comes to that. You must help me, Mr. Smart."

I nodded slowly. Help her to get away? I hadn't thought of that lately. The prospect left me rather cold and sick.

"I'll do all that I can, countess."

She smiled faintly, but I was certain that I detected a challenge—a rather unkind challenge—in her eyes. "You will come to see me in New York, of course."

I shook my head. "I am afraid we are counting our chickens before they're hatched. One or the other of us may be in jail for the next few years."

"Heavens!"

"But I'll come to see you in New York if you'll let me," I cried, trying to repair the damage I had done. "I was jesting when I spoke of jail."

Her brow was puckered in thought. "It has just occurred to me, my dear friend, that even if I do get safely away you will be left here to face the consequences. When it becomes known that you sheltered me the authorities may make it extremely uncomfortable for you."

"I'm not worrying about that."

"Just the same, it is something to worry about," she said seriously. "Now, here is what I have had in mind for a long time. Why don't you come with me when I leave? That will be the safest plan."

"You are not in earnest!"

"Assuredly. The plan is something like this: I am to be taken by slow stages overland to a small Mediterranean port. One of a half dozen American yachts now cruising the sea will be ready to pick me up. Doesn't it seem simple?"

"It seems simple enough," said I. "But there are a lot of 'ifs' between here and the little port you hope to reach. It will not be an easy matter to manage the successful flight of a party as large as yours will be."

"Oh," she cried. "I shall be quite alone, except for Rosemary and Blake—and Mr. Bangs."

"But your mother? You can't leave her here."

"You will have to smuggle her out of the castle a day or two in advance. It is all thought out, Mr. Smart."

"By Jove!" I exclaimed, with more irascibility than I intended to show. "If I succeed in doing all that is expected of me, I certainly will be entitled to more than an invitation to come and see you in New York."

She arose and laid her fingers upon my bandaged hand. The reckless light had died out of her eyes.

"I have thought that out, too, Mr. Smart," she said quietly. "And now, goodby. You will come up to see Mr. Bangs tonight?"

Considerably mystified by her remark, I said I would come, and then assisted her through the opening in the wall. She smiled back at me as the portrait swung into place.

* * * * * * *

Bangs was a shrewd little Englishman. As I shook hands with him—using my left hand with a superfluous apology—I glanced at the top of his waistcoat. There was no button missing.

"The countess sewed it on for me," he said drily, reading my thoughts.

I stayed late with them, discussing plans. Mrs. Titus and her sons were to enter the castle under cover of night, and I was to meet them in an automobile at a town some fifteen kilometers away, where they would leave the train while their watchers were asleep, and bring them overland to Schloss Rothhoefen. They would be accompanied by a single lady's maid and no luggage. A chartered motorboat would meet us up the river a few miles, and—well, it looked very simple! All that was required of me was a willingness to address her as "mother" and her sons as "brothers" in case there were any questions asked.

This was Tuesday. They were coming on Thursday, and the train reached the station mentioned at half past 12 at night. So you will see it was a jolly arrangement.

As we said good night to the countess on the little landing at the top of the stairs she took my bandaged paw between her two little hands and said: "You will soon be rid of me forever, Mr. Smart. Will you bear with me patiently for a little while longer?" She seemed strangely subdued.

"I can bear with you much easier than I can bear the thought of being rid of you," I said in a very low voice. She pressed my clumsy hand fiercely, and I felt no pain.

"You have been too good to me," she said in a very small voice. "Some day, when I am out of all this trouble, I may be able to tell you how much I appreciate all you have done for me."

An almost irresistible—I was about to say ungovernable—impulse to seize her in my arms came over me, but I conquered it and rushed after Mr. Bangs as blind as a bat and reeling for a dozen steps or more. It was a most extraordinary feeling.

Bangs was chattering in his glib English fashion as we descended to my study, but I did not hear half that he said.

One remark of his brought me rather sharply to my senses.

"If all goes well," he was saying, "she should be safely away from here on the 14th. That leaves less than ten days more, sir, under your hospitable roof."

"Less than ten days," I repeated. This was the 5th of the month. "If all goes well. Less than ten days."

Again I passed a sleepless night.

She came to visit me at 12 o'clock the next day. I was alone in the study. Poopendyke was showing Mr. Bangs over the castle.

"I came to dress your hand for you," she said as I helped her down from Red Ludwig's frame.

Now, I have neglected to mention that the back of my hand was swollen to enormous proportions, an unlovely thing.

"Thank you," I said, shaking my head, "but it is quite all right. Britton attended to it this morning. It is good of you to think about it, countess."

"You will never let me do anything for you," she said. Her eyes were velvety. "It isn't fair. I have exacted so much from you, and"—

"And I have been most brutal and unfeeling in many of the things I have said to you," said I despairingly. "I am

"I want to be happy! I want to be loved!"

ashamed of the nasty wounds I have given you. My state of repentance allows you to exact whatsoever you will of me, and when all is said and done I shall still be your debtor. Can you, will you pardon the coarse opinions of a conceited ass? I assure you I am not the man I was when you first encountered me."

She smiled. "For that matter, I am not the same woman I was, Mr. Smart. You have taught me three things, one of which I may mention—the subjection of self. That, with the other two, has made a new Aline Titus of me. I hope you may be pleased with the transfiguration."

"I wish you were Aline Titus," I said, struck by the idea.

"You may at least be sure that I shall not remain the Countess Tarnowsy long, Mr. Smart," she said, with a very puzzling expression in her eyes.

My heart sank. "But I remember hearing you say not so very long ago that you would never marry again," I railed.

She regarded me rather oddly for a moment. "I am very, very glad that you are such a steady, sensible, practical man. A vapid, impressionable youth, during this season of propinquity, might have been so foolish as to fall in love with me, and that would have been too bad."

I think I glared at her. "Then—then, you are going to marry some one?"

She waited a moment, looking straight into my eyes. "Yes," she said, and a delicate pink stole into her cheek, "I am going to marry some one."

I muttered something about congratulating a lucky dog, but it was all very hazy to me.

"Don't congratulate him yet," she cried, the flush deepening. "I may be a very, very great disappointment to him and a never ending nuisance."

"I'm sure you will—will be all right," I floundered. Then I resorted to gaiety. "You see, I've spent a lot of time trying to—to make another woman of you, and so I'm confident he'll find you quite satisfactory."

She laughed gaily. "What a goose you are!" she cried.

I flushed painfully, for, I give you my word, it hurt to have her laugh at me. She sobered at once.

"Forgive me," she said very prettily, and I forgave her. "Do you know we've never given the buried treasure another thought?" she went on, abruptly changing the subject. "Are we not to go searching for it?"

"But it isn't there," said I, steeling my heart against the longing that tried to creep into it. "It's all balderdash."

She pouted her warm red lips. "Have you lost interest in it so soon?"

"Of course, I'll go any time you say," said I, lifelessly. "It will be a lark, at all events."

"Then we will go this very afternoon," she said, with enthusiasm.

My ridiculous heart gave a great leap. "This very afternoon," I said, managing my voice very well.

She arose. "Now I must scurry away. It would not do for Mr. Bangs to find me here with you. He would be shocked."

I walked beside her to the chair that stood below the portrait of Ludwig the Red and took her hand to assist her in stepping upon it.

"I sincerely hope this chap you're going to marry, countess, may be the best fellow in the world," said I, still clasping her hand.

She had one foot on the chair as she half turned to face me.

"He is the best fellow in the world," she said.

I gulped. "I can't tell you how happy I shall be if you—if you find real happiness. You deserve happiness—and love."

She gripped my hand fiercely. "I want to be happy! I want to be loved! Oh, I want to be loved!" she cried, so passionately that I turned away, unwilling to be a witness to this outburst of feeling on her part. She slipped her hand out of mine and a second later was through the frame. I had a fleeting glimpse of a slim, adorable ankle. "Goodby!" she called back in a voice that seemed strangely choked. The spring in the gold mirror clicked. A draft of air struck me in the face. She was gone.

"What an infernal fool you've been," I said to myself as I stood there staring at the black hole in the wall. Then I gently, even caressingly, swung old Ludwig the Red into place. There was another click. The incident was closed.

A very few words are sufficient to cover the expedition in quest of the legendary treasures of the long dead barons. Mr. Bangs accompanied us. Britton carried a lantern, and the three Schmicks went along as guides. We found nothing but cobwebs.

"Conrad," said I as we emerged from the last of the underground chambers, "tell me the truth. Was there ever such a thing as buried treasure in this abominable hole?"

"Yes, mein herr," he replied, with an apologetic grin, "but I think it was discovered three years ago by Count Hohendahl and Count Tarnowsy."

We stared at him. "The deuce you say!" cried I, with a quick glance at the countess. She appeared to be as much surprised as I.

"They searched for a month," explained the old man guiltily. "They found something in the walls of the second tier. I cannot say what it was, but they were very, very happy, my lady." He now addressed her. "It was at the time they went away and did not return for three weeks, if you remember the time."

"Remember it!" she cried bitterly. "Too well, Conrad."

She afterward invited Mr. Bangs and me to dine with her that evening. She also asked Mr. Poopendyke later on.

* * * * * * *

Poopendyke! An amazing, improbable idea entered my head. Poopendyke!

(To be continued.)

An exaggerated brim, faced underneath with straw, turns up at the back of this new spring hat, forming a background for the taffeta crown and trimming of berries and tiny roses. Streamers of black velvet are caught against the straw underbrim at the back and fall to the waist.

STOP CATARRH! OPEN NOSTRILS AND HEAD

Says Cream Applied in Nostrils Relieves Head-Colds at Once.

If your nostrils are clogged and your head is stuffed and you can't breathe freely because of a cold or catarrh, just get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm at any drug store. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream into your nostrils and let it penetrate through every air passage of your head, soothing and healing the inflamed, swollen mucous membrane and you get instant relief.

Ah! How good it feels. Your nostrils are open, your head is clear, no more hawking, snuffling, blowing; no more headache, dryness or struggling for breath. Ely's Cream Balm is just what sufferers from head colds and catarrh need. It's a delight.—Adv.

Of Interest to Women and the Home

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

Relations between Dick and his mother were noticeably strained at supper that evening and the old lady went early to bed.

"What's the matter, Dick?" said Nell in a low voice as soon as they were alone.

"Oh, she took it upon herself to meddle with my affairs, and I told her where to get off; that's all. She may as well understand first as last that I am grown."

"What did she say?" asked Nell.

"What she said does not matter. It's the fact that she interfered that I resented," and Nell knew that her quest for knowledge was fruitless for that time.

After Dick went to work the next morning the women did up the breakfast work, and then took their sewing chairs out on the lawn under a fine old apple tree. The air was hot and still, but an occasional meadow lark could be heard piping his clear sweet notes in the nearby field.

"Did Richard say anything about my going over to the office," asked Madam Morton finally, peering over her glasses at Nell.

"No," was the brief response. Nell paused in her sewing and looked inquiringly at her mother-in-law.

"I hoped you need not know anything of the matter, but Richard got on one of his obstinate streaks, and when he does he's like a bulky horse. He wouldn't stir if you built a fire under him." Nell was listening intently.

"Yesterday that doctor's wife called while you were away and had a choice morsel of gossip she was rolling under her tongue, about Richard and that feather-headed stenographer. I guess she thought she had chosen the wrong one to confide in," she was smiling grimly. "She concluded she had landed in a bed of nettles and went away rubbing her wounds."

A sharp spasm of pain crossed Nell's face, and was noted by the keen eyes back of the spectacles.

"What did she say?" asked Nell faintly.

"Oh, that there was talk about them because they were so much together. My private opinion is that if there is talk she started it and keeps it going, but that's neither here nor there. I decided to tell Richard, hoping he'd be sensible enough to stop the buzzing and so save trouble all around, but he chose to be a fool, and he knows how to do it to perfection when he sets out."

Nell was too busy winking back the tears to champion the cause of the absent.

"I warned the putty faced girl as honestly as if she had brains to take in what I said, but I might better have saved my breath to blow my porridge."

Nell wiped her eyes while stooping to pick up the shears from the ground, but found no voice to reply.

"You seem to know how to manage Richard pretty well. I thought you ought to know. Perhaps you do already. I remember that hornet said she had told you and you pretended not to understand."

"Oh, Dick means no harm; he resents being talked about and——"

"Not liking the gossip, he does everything to increase the amount," said Madam Morton with scorn. "He'll get his fill of the smarting dose. It's like cutting off his nose to spite his face. I thought maybe if you knew which way the wind blew you could trim your sails and tow him into port. Most men have to be managed. Thank the Lord, I married a sane man. I don't have to beat about the bush and pretend I am going north to get him headed south. I never could have done it."

Nell was openly wiping her eyes by this time.

"There, Nell, don't you care. Richard may be a fool, but he's no knave. He don't care for Miss Feathertop."

Nell laughed in spite of her distress, at the changes the old lady rung on Miss Rudolph's name.

"Thank you, mother dear, for telling me," she said, rising and kissing her. "I'll try and manage him."

Household Hints

WORTH KNOWING

Spots on Polished Furniture—Take fine table salt, sprinkle thick enough to cover spot nicely, then saturate well with olive oil; let stand fifteen to twenty minutes, then rub with soft cloth. If it does not remove all at the first application, try again. It will not injure furniture, but the salt must be as fine as possible.

When cooking one is apt to add too much salt. If a piece of bread is thrown in it will take up the salt and can be removed.

Saving School Shoes—Try a good varnish for children's school shoes. Apply to soles of shoes three or four coats of varnish, letting each dry before the next is applied, and see how much longer the shoes will last without half-soling.

Paste on each bottle or box of poisonous drugs a strip of sandpaper. This can be easily distinguished in the dark.

CANDIES

Delicious Cracker Jack which can be made at home at very little expense—Get five cents' worth popping corn and five cents worth peanuts. Pop corn, shell peanuts and put all together in large kettle. Then put in a sauce pan one cup molasses, one cup sugar, one tablespoon vinegar; boil till a little will harden in cold water, then pour mixture over corn and peanuts; mix thoroughly. This forms a candy coating; can be formed into balls or left in chunks.

Walnut Creams (a never-fail candy)—Two cups brown sugar, one cup water, one pinch cream of tartar (to prevent from going into sugar). Put all ingredients in sauce pan on fire. Stir until it boils, then leave boil until it forms soft ball in cold water. Remove from fire and beat until it hardens. Have large flat plate ready with piece of waxed paper on and another piece of paper to drop your ingredients on. Then take small portion of it in your hands. Rub a little butter in and roll in a ball. Place a walnut on and proceed.

UP-TO-DATE RECIPES

Hominy Points—Two cups hominy cooked till well done, three tablespoons sugar, two teaspoons salt add two beaten eggs, one-fourth tea spoon nutmeg, one-half teaspoon vanilla. Pour in pan to cool. Shape dip in egg, roll in fine cracker crumbs, fry golden brown in deep hot fat.

Brancla (substitute for coffee)—Six cups wheat bran, three cups corn meal, one cup molasses, two or three eggs. Rub all well together with the hands and brown in oven. Inexpensive and fine.

Cheese Fondue—One cup scalded milk, one cup moist stale bread crumbs, one-fourth pound mild cheese grated, one tablespoon butter, one-half teaspoon salt, three eggs. Mix first five ingredients, add egg yolks beaten until they are lemon colored; lastly cut and fold in whites of eggs which have been beaten stiff. Pour into buttered dish. Bake in moderate oven twenty minutes.

Sausage Dumplings With Tomatoes—Put into double boiler one quart tomatoes seasoned with two tablespoons butter; salt and pepper to taste. Sift together two cups flour and two level teaspoons baking powder, add one cup sausage meat partly cooked and enough cold water (or milk) to make soft dough to drop from a spoon. Drop batter from spoon on boiling hot tomatoes, cover and steam half hour.

Apple Bumosse—After removing skins and cores from six apples, steam apples. Make a soft custard—use three egg yolks only in custard. Whip whites stiff, add a little lemon juice and pour over apples. Then pour yellow custard over all and serve at once. This dish may be served either hot or cold; delicious when the custard is allowed to cool before it is poured over cooked apples and dish placed in cold place until ready to serve. An excellent dish and a favorite with the children.

Animal Jingles

FOR LITTLE FOLKS

BY ALICE CREW GALL

The Envious Kitten.

A little Kitten sat one day and mewed most mournfully;
Said she, "I think a Kitten is a stupid thing to be.

"If I could be a fine Peacock and strut around," she cried,
"And spread my tail for folks to see, I would be satisfied.

"Then I would have a lot of friends, I'm very sure of that,
And people would admire me," cried the envious little Cat.

Then as she sat there in the sulks some children passed that way,
And to the Kitten's great surprise she heard one of them say:

"Of all the creatures in the world, I love the Kitten best,
Because it's more contented and much sweeter than the rest."

And when the Kitten heard these words she hung her little head
Said she, "I'm glad that little girl did not hear what I said.

"Perhaps it may be just as well to be a kitten small;
I guess I'm glad that I am not a Peacock after all."

I'm sure that little Cat was wise because it seems to me
That if you try you can have friends wherever you may be.

"Every GIMBEL Hat Has Chic and Individuality!"

Every One Is Different!

Exquisite Colors—Perfect Harmonies

300 New Hats at $5, $8.75 and $10

At our own request, a well known millinery authority inspected all the representative millinery collections in New York during the past week. Then we asked her what hats rivaled our $10 Millinery. "The Hats that are $18 to $22 in the well-known millinery shops along Fifth Avenue. In making this statement I refer not only to style, but to the quality of materials and workmanship. And in some instances the hats are not as well made as are the GIMBEL $10 modes."

Good colors are rare in the usual moderate-price hats.

In this particular alone GIMBEL Millinery excels. There is not a hat made in our workrooms which does not receive the approval of our Millinery chief, who is considered one of the greatest color artists in the world.

Dress Hats! Semi-dress Hats! Trotteur Hats! Also the new Garden Hats of Neapolitan, trimmed with lovely nosegays—one model at $10 is illustrated.

Library Notes.

Furnished by the Directors of Plainfield Public Library and Reading Room.

Published Every Friday.

A feature of the library which deserves more attention perhaps than it has received, is its collection of stereographs. These are particularly fine photographs taken by a camera with a double lens, so that each picture is presented from two slightly different view points. The effect is the same as it is when an object is viewed by the natural eye, and scenes and persons stand out with startling reality. A "body" is thus given to scenes and persons which flat pictures entirely lack.

There are sets of stereographs for many different countries, each set including usually about one hundred views. Accompanying these and adding vastly to their value are detailed maps showing the position from which each picture is taken and the direction in which the observer is looking. With most of the sets there is also a well written book descriptive of the scenes. The result is that as one uses these views and follows the positions upon the map, and particularly if he reads the descriptive book, he comes as close to having the feeling of actually traveling through the country described, as it is possible to get without actually visiting the scenes in person, and in addition avoids the innumerable annoyances which accompany foreign travel.

It is the testimony of nearly every one who has used the stereographs that after looking at the pictures and following the positions upon the maps, he has had a fuller and infinitely more complete idea of the country described, than he has ever before received.

Illustrating the difference between looking at ordinary flat pictures of a scene, no matter how good they may be, and viewing a stereograph through the stereoscope, there might be cited one picture of the Yosemite. As one looks at the stereograph before putting it in the stereoscope, he is standing on what appears to be an ordinary road with innumerable mountain peaks in the distance and slight valleys in the foreground, but when the picture is put in the stereoscope and one looks at it with the assistance of that instrument, he is almost inclined to leap backwards to safety, for he finds he is standing on the edge of a precipice which descends hundreds of feet to a valley whose depth can only be imagined.

The library has about a dozen stereoscopes with which to view the pictures, for the use of borrowers; and a set of stereographs, the maps and descriptive booklet and the stereoscope itself can all be taken out of the library on the ordinary card. There are sets of stereographs picturing the following countries and scenes and with most of them, but not all, there are also the descriptive booklets:

Yosemite, Yellowstone, Grand Canon, Washington, Greece, Russia, Italy, Switzerland, Norway, Ireland, Egypt, United States, Japan, England, France, Scotland, Holland, Panama, Mexico, Belgium, Real Children in Many Lands, Old Testament History, New Testament History, Industries—Spinning and Weaving, Sheep Raising, The Story of Cotton from Field to Market, The Story of Flax and Linen, Mining, Lumbering.

Westfield.

A public reception is to be tendered April 15 to Rev. J. F. Shaw, new pastor of the Methodist church, at the chapel.

The Board of Education is advertising for bids for the year's supply of coal for the local schools.

The Common Council will receive bids, April 16, for laying 580 lineal feet of sewer in Scotch Plains avenue.

The differences between Fanwood and Westfield have been settled, and the chief of the Westfield Fire Department has been authorized to answer calls to fires in Fanwood in the built-up portions of the township adjoining the Westfield line.

The engagement of Miss Katherine G. Felt, of this town, and Linn Thompson, of Fanwood, has been announced by Mrs. K. G. Felt, mother of the bride-to-be.

Flemington.

A brooder house on the farm of Freeholder Joseph Alvater, in Raritan township, was destroyed by fire Tuesday. About 350 chickens were burned.

Rev. J. H. E. Schultz and family moved to Jersey City Wednesday. He will occupy the parsonage of the Browne Memorial church, Carteret avenue.

Hunterdon County Pomona Grange will hold its spring meeting in the hall of Stanton Grange today.

Broadway at Ninth, New York

Informal Late Spring Opening in Little Gray Salons

(For Girls and Young Women)

Walk by the pretty show windows, what do you see? Spring! Light suits, silk dresses, coats for the street or country everything new, bright and fresh.

Even cotton dresses are here; linens, voiles, crepes and nets.

We hope these new fashions will give you as much pleasure as the assembling of them has given us.

Special Suits at $18.75, $20

Twelve interesting youthful new styles in navy blue serge, poplin, putty color and black-and-white checks and Belgian blue.

Suits to make a girl feel happy, young and well dressed. Nicely tailored, prettily lined and the last word in smartness. Other suits $15.50 upward. Sizes 14 to 20 years.

Coats—All Good Kinds

Specially smart corduroy, stockinet, waterfall and chinchilla coats for outing-wear in white and gay shades and some stunning striped blazers.

Other coats for street, motoring and steamer wear, $11.75 upward. Silk, covert, gabardine, serge and poplin. Sizes 14 to 20 years.

Girls "Custom Made" Coats

We call them "custom made" for they are tailored in our own establishments and are simple and beautiful like a made to order coat. Lined with plain or polka dot silk. Navy blue or checks, $12.50. Sizes 6 to 14 years.

Girls' Thin White Dresses

Never such a pretty collection of them.

Wide ribbon sashes, some hand-embroidered, high Empire or low French waists and dainty laces distinguish all of them.

Prices start at $3.75.

Sizes 6 to 14 years.

Second floor, Old Building.

Ho, for the Boys!

The three to eighteen year-old boy has a store all to himself — complete in every respect and moderately priced.

Here are a few examples from a great storeful of boys' things:

First-long trouser suits—blue, gray and fancy mixtures—$10.50 to $20.

Norfolk suits (some with two pairs of knickers), in blue, gray and fancy mixtures—$6.75 to $15.

Top coats—$6.75 to $15; reefers, $5 to $10.50.

Wash suits—two new models, the Meadowbrook, $2.25, $3.50, and Tommy Tucker, $1.95, $2.25, $3.50.

Also all the other models—$1.95 to $6; Norfolk models, $2.25 and $5.

Blouse waists—50c to $1.50.

Also cloth, straw and Panama hats, caps, etc.

Even if what you want for your boy is not mentioned here, it is in the Boys' Store just the same.

Second floor, Old Building.

Children's Coat Special, $5

One coat is the copy of a higher-priced model and is navy blue serge with becoming rather high belt and fresh white pique collar and cuffs, $5.

The other is black-and-white checked and hand-scalloped and hand-embroidered collar and cuffs of white pique, $5. Sizes 2 to 6 years.

Hats at Their Prettiest

Copenhagen blue, navy, or sand color, with velvet streamers and colorful clusters of fruit or flowers, $3.50 and $5. For children up to 6 years.

Children from 2 to 4 years will look sweet in certain little white Milan hats with wavy brims and tiniest flower garlands, $2.50.

SCOOP, THE CUB REPORTER — AN APRIL STORY WITHOUT WORDS (THAT CAN BE PRINTED) — BY "HOP"

DEDICATES COMPOSITION TO MISS HARRIET HIGGINS

"I Should Worry" is the title of a new composition for piano just published. The author of this musical novelty is Ludwig Thoms, the blind composer, who composed this piece after being taken by total blindness. This original inspiration is in the style of a refined parlor composition. In the opinion of competent musicians and critics it is a masterpiece of its kind. The melodies, when once heard, will not easily be forgotten. Mr. Thoms has not lost hope and courage, although he has been afflicted in many ways for several years. Partial blindness for ten years standing was succeeded by total blindness about one year ago. Besides this he was seriously sick for several years. He has now fully recovered his health. Dr. Hubbard succeeded by a very skillful operation, to restore some vision to one eye although the case seemed to be hopeless. The other eye will remain permanently blind. Mr. Thoms has been teaching music for several years.

One of his pupils is Miss Harriet Elizabeth Higgins to whom his composition is dedicated. In a very short time she developed into a very fine pianist. Mr. Thoms has several other compositions in preparation, which will soon be published.

TEMPERATURE REPORT.

E. & W. SCHLOSS
SUCCESSORS TO S. SCHEUER & CO.

THERE ARE TWO KINDS OF ASSUREDS.

The kind that take out insurance when the spirit moves them, without considering their policy, the company its in, or the agent. And the other kind that realize the necessity and importance of insurance, who read over their policy and make sure it covers them properly, satisfy themselves that the company is sound and represented by a reliable agent.

The first kind is a hit-or-miss affair, while the other one is bound to obtain a satisfactory settlement when a loss occurs.

CHURCHMEN FORM A BROTHERHOOD

Organization Perfected at a Banquet at the Park Ave. Baptist Church.

OFFICERS ARE CHOSEN

Excellent Addresses by Rev. Dr. Hudson and Rev. Frank Smith, of Elizabeth—Vocal and Instrumental Music a Feature.

The men of the Park Avenue Baptist church at a banquet given in the church last night organized a Brotherhood which promises to be a strong factor in the life of the church. Former Mayor G. W. V. Moy was chosen president, and also acted as toastmaster of the evening. During the evening there were two excellent addresses, one by Rev. Frank Smith, pastor of the First Baptist church, Elizabeth, and the other by Rev. Dr. Birney S. Hudson, pastor of the local church.

The banquet which preceded the speech-making and organization, was served by the Ladies' Aid Society of the church. The gathering was also entertained with piano selections by Miss Madeline Moy, which was a pleasing feature of the affair.

After Mr. Moy briefly stated the purpose of the gathering, he introduced Dr. Hudson, who gave his ideas as to what a men's organization should be and heartily endorsed the movement. He congratulated the members of his congregation, both men and women, for their help and co-operation. He said that nearly every church has a thriving women's society, but it is quite as important to have a live men's organization. He then explained how such an organization could be of help not only in the church, but to the city as well.

Rev. Frank Smith gave an inspiring address in which he brought much encouragement to the men present. He spoke of the different ages, including the missionary, followed by the cathedral building times, which was succeeded by the Crusade, the Reformation and then today which he characterized as the modern passion for social service. Mr. Smith emphasized the fact that Christian work is man's work, but that it had gradually been left to women. By way of illustration he read the following from a Philadelphia newspaper: "The Episcopalians and their husbands will hold a social tonight." In the opinion of the speaker people today take their religion too lightly and leave most of the work for the minister. He thought that the world was on the eve of a change, adding that men need religion and religion needs men.

After the speeches it was decided to organize a Brotherhood, Mr. Moy, who was later chosen president, acting as chairman. The other officers elected were: First vice-president, Martin B. Stutsman; second vice-president, John B. Groendyke; secretary, J. C. Evans; treasurer, Van Dorn Van Fleet. Dr. Hudson requested the members of the Brotherhood to start off right by attending service at the church tomorrow night in a body. The men will meet at the church at 7:45 o'clock.

Other features of the evening included vocal solos by Mrs. Grace Robinson and piano duets by Miss Madeline Moy and Mrs. C. S. Schuyler. A vote of thanks was given to the Ladies' Aid Society for the excellent banquet served. The committees in charge were as follows:

General committee, G. W. V. Moy, George Place, Mr. Thomas, Harry C. Runyon and George E. Hall; Ladies' Aid committee, Mrs. Ira E. Van Arsdale chairman, Mrs. Birney S. Hudson, Mrs. George Place, Mrs. Walter Freeman, Mrs. Charles Van Winkle, Mrs. Daniel Van Winkle, Mrs. William Wright, Mrs. R. F. Hadley, Mrs. V. D. Van Fleet, Mrs. Harry C. Runyon, Mrs. T. H. Wood, Mrs. Willard Maxim, Mrs. G. W. V. Moy, Mrs. Alfred Spangenberg, Mrs. Chester Gasdell, Mrs. James Mauger, Mrs. Arthur Mosher, Mrs. John Doane, Mrs. A. Hellyer and Mrs. John Abbott.

"A JANUARY NIGHT."

The play, "A January Night," and the dance to be given at Saengerbund Hall tonight by the Polish people of Plainfield, promises to be one of the most elaborate entertainments of the kind of this season. Reproductions of the peasant and noble life in Poland, and dances of every sort known to the Poles, with choruses of Polish music, will be seen and heard in glittering tableaux. The proceeds of the affair will be sent to the suffering in the war zone.

CIVIC ASSOCIATION WILL INCORPORATE

Necessary Papers Are Being Prepared to Be Filed With the County Clerk.

At the April meeting of the West End Civic Association in the Washington School last night, the members decided to have the organization incorporated. To that end the following trustees were elected for one year: John J. Carroll, William J. Boyd, T. C. Gill, Frank S. Power and Charles A. Rice. The necessary papers are now being prepared and will be filed with the county clerk within the next few days.

Only routine matters were taken up, after the incorporation proposition had been arranged for, as the evening was given over to two addresses. The first was by Edgar F. Sheppard, who is connected with a large cement concern and who gave an instructive talk on the manufacture of cement. The second was by Rev. Edward S. Ralston, of the Netherwood Reformed church on "The Improvement of Civic Property and Conditions." Mr. Sheppard described the process cement goes through from the time it is quarried until it is ready for use. There were many in the audience who are engaged in the building trades and the details of manufacture were a revelation to most of them. The speaker exhibited samples of cement in various stages to illustrate his talk.

The address by Mr. Ralston was illustrated by many slides which showed how a piece of property could be made attractive by very little effort. Unsightly fences were pictured and afterward an original network of vines which took their place. He showed photographs taken in many cities where sanitation had been wonderfully improved by the use of the little filling and the desire on the part of the owner to expend a little "elbow grease.' Mr. Ralston spoke particularly on the fact that there is room for improvement in many districts in Plainfield by giving attention to back yards and fences. The talks were fully enjoyed by the large audience and the members who did not respond to invitations missed a rare treat.

The next meeting of the executive committee of the association will be held at the home of John J. Carroll on West Fifth street, Friday evening, April 23.

STREET COMMITTEE CONSIDERS PETITION

Improvement Along East Second Street and Work on Grove Street Discussed.

Consideration of the petition offered by the East End Residents' Association for the improvement of East Second street, east of Netherwood avenue, occupied the time of the Councilmanic street committe at the meeting in the Common Council committee rooms last night. The proposition was presented to the body by Chairman Francis J. Blatz, and Corporation Counsel Charles A. Reed was asked for an opinion concerning the rights of the Public Service Railway Corporation in the matter.

It has been stated at previous meetings of the committee that the trolley company holds a right-of-way through the street where the improvements are asked for, and the right to infringe on the corporation's franchise has been questioned. The civic association had a search of the title made in the Union county surrogate's office, and this data was compiled for the benefit of the councilmen. No action was taken in the matter.

The petition of the Union and Somerset County Boards of Freeholders, received by the Common Council at its April meeting, requesting that provision be made for the proper work on Grove street, preparatory to the construction of a new bridge ver Green brook, was also offered for discussion.

The county Boards have agreed to make the improvement provided that North Plainfield will bring the street level on Grove street up two feet higher for a space of seventy feet north of the bridge, and if Plainfield would do similar leveling south of the bridge. Street Commissioner Gavett was instructed to ascertain what the cost of the work would be, and action will be taken on the matter at a future meeing.

GUILD WILL MEET.

The Westminster Guild will meet in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue church on Monday, April 12, at 2:30 o'clock.

MAY NAME BORO MAN AS TEACHER

Julian C. Pla de Villars Being Considered by Board to Fill Vacancy.

DEPARTMENT. COMBINE

Latin and French Courses to Be Brought Under One Department Head With New Instructor in Charge.

When the North Plainfield Board of Education meets in its April session Monday night, April 26, it is expected that Julian C. Pla de Villars, of Grove street, will be named by the teachers' committee to fill a vacancy that has occurred through the resignation of Miss Robley, an instructor in the modern language department of the North Plainfield High School. Last year's teachers' committee, which included F. I. Sill, whose term expired, was unanamous in its choice of Mr. Pla de Villars as the new teacher, but another vote will have to be taken, when his successor is named by President Justus H. Cooley. However, it is expected that the nomination will be ratified and turned over to the Board for affirmation.

Through the resignation of Miss Robley, who resigned to be married, Miss Bernard automatically assumes a position in the German department, a subject she was promised when engaged by the Board, but which, up to this time, she has not held. Miss Bernard formerly taught in the Latin department, and it is now proposed to combine the Latin and French departments and place them under the supervision of Mr. Pla de Villars, in the event of his appointment.

It is understood that several other candidates were considered, but that the Board felt itself particularly fortunate in being able to secure Mr. Pla de Villars' services, and that the members are eager to have him sign a contract. It was at first suggested that he take charge of the German and French classes, but owing to the fact that he has made a speciality of Latin and does not consider himself qualified to accept the German charge the new arrangement was tentatively decided upon. His name came up for consideration at a meeting of the former teachers' committee, following his recommendation. However, it was one of the matters that was laid over for the new committee, whose names will be announced today by President Cooley, to decide. The endorsement of Mr. Sill's successor on that committee will be needed before the candidate's name is brought before the Board.

Mr. Pla de Villars' qualifications for the position are well known. For a number of years he has conducted an unusually successful private school for the teaching of modern languages on Grove street, and his name was referred to the teachers' committee with the highest of recommendations. He has made a thorough study of modern languages and is conversant in a number.

When interviewed by a Daily Press reporter yesterday the candidate gave his questioner to understand that he would accept the position, granting that Latin and French were specified in the contract as subjects in which he would instruct. It is understood that in the event of his appointment he will assume charge at once.

The borough High School's modern language department is rapidly becoming one of the highest standard, and in selecting a successor to the outgoing instructor the Board intends to carefully investigate the qualifications of the candidate in order to maintain the established level.

ANNOUNCE ENGAGEMENT.

Mr. and Mrs. Stephen G. Van Hoesen, of Fanwood, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Margaret O. Van Hoesen, to Claude R. Borden, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Borden, of Plainfield.

"Do You Save Anything."

If not, begin now by taking out some shares in the new series opened by the Union Building & Loan Association, Monday night. The office is 146 Park avenue. $5.00 a month saved will net you $1,000.00 in a little over 11 years. The 37th series will be paid off at this meeting, members receiving checks for their matured shares—$100.00 for every $67.50 paid in. The Association is over 16 years old and has paid back to its members thousands of dollars in matured shares, and also enabled many of its members to buy or build homes of their own. The directors will gladly talk the matter over with you on Monday night or you can see M. C. Van Arsdale, treasurer or J. V. E. Vanderhoef, secretary, at any time.—Adv. ***

CITY MERCHANTS FAVOR THIS BILL

Measure to Check "Fly-by-Night" Schemes a Solution to Local Troubles.

CONSIDER ORDINANCE

Common Council Has Several Times Been Confronted With the Problem—Senate Bill Has Been Offered to Givernor for Signature.

In the event of the Pilgrim bill becoming a law solution will be offered for a problem that has been troubling the minds of the local Councilmen for a number of years. It will shut out unscrupulous dealers who conduct so-called "fly-by-night" business enterprises, a phase of unfair trade competition that has been brought to the attention of the Common Council by local merchants on a number of different occasions.

The bill, introduced by an Essex county Senator, has gone to Governor Fielder for his signature and at the present time indications are that it will go through as a law. In numerous instances the ire of local business men has been aroused by invaders who hire stores for the display of alleged fire-sales of bankrupt stocks, and who in a majority of cases get away with the proceeds of grossly misrepresented goods after swindling the public and interfering with the trade of permanent and legitimate merchants. The tradesmen who pay their taxes and depend upon the support from the city shoppers feel that they are entitled to some protection against unscrupulous outsiders who stay only long enough to unload their fraudulent wares upon a deluded public.

Several local Councilmen have taken the proposition under personal advisement but each time they have met with the prospects of possible complications and the matter has been dropped. Only recently several "fly-by-night" merchants operated in West Front street and North avenue and serious objection was raised in different quarters at that time. There was an agitation on foot for the licensing of such merchants but with the "flight" of the invaders the sentiment died down. In a majority of cases the men who brought the schemes to Plainfield have been foreigners and when the Councilmen considered the proposition they found it extremely difficult to decide between the legitimate and the unlegitimate merchant.

These "fly-by-night" managers have found good patronage in Plainfield and invariably make their scheme pay during their visit here. Large quantities of jewelry and clothing, the latter of the second-hand variety, were sold to local shoppers only recently and no one appears to known just where the sellers are located now.

MAYOR SMALLEY GIVES COUNTY TALK

Tells Building Trades Council of Advantages Resulting From His Proposition.

Former Mayor Newton B. Smalley, of the borough, addressed the weekly meeting of the Building Trades Council last night, giving an exhaustive outline of his proposition to form a new county with Plainfield as the center. An invitation had been extended Mr. Smalley by the officers for the purpose of having him enlighten the members on the merits of the proposition. The Mayor went into the plan at all angles, telling why the proposed "Washington" county would be a benefit to Plainfield and North Plainfield, and answered all questions put to him. The talk was thoroughly enjoyed, and at its conclusion the members gave the former Mayor a rising vote of thanks.

Howard Woolston, who was a member of the original Trades Council in this city, was present last night and gave a general talk on the advantages of an organization of this kind, and discussed the local building situation in general. When Mr. Woolston was active in the work the Council represented only three trades, while now the number is eight. The two addresses took up the entire evening, and all other matters pertaining to the Council were laid over until next week.

FIELD SECRETARY TO SPEAK.

At the First Baptist church tomorrow morning the pulpit will be occupied by Rev. R. M. West, the recently chosen field secretary of the New Jersey Baptist Convention, his topic being, "(Making Men Perfect."

'VETS' CELEBRATE A NOTABLE EVENT

Twenty-eight Old Soldiers Present at Appomattox Anniversary Meeting.

INSPIRING EXERCISES

Assemblyman William N. Runyon and Somerset County Superintendent H. C. Krebs Eulogize Those Who Fought in the War.

Twenty-eight gray-haired veterans, ranging in age from sixty-five to one hundred and one years, occupied seats on the Reform Hall rostrum last night to take part in impressive ceremonies commemorative of the last notable event of the Civil War they will probably live to celebrate, the surrender of General Robert E. Lee at Appomattox Court House. Veterans of the battles of '61, some scarred and others crippled, but all bearing vivid memories of the rain of bullets in a little village in Virginia, twenty-three miles east of Lynchburg, heard their moments of fifty years ago reviewed by H. C. Krebs, Somerset county superintendent of schools. The semi-centennial anniversary of a fight, the result of which meant the restoration of the Union, was fittingly celebrated by these veterans, members of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R. The exercises, simple though inspiring, proved a revelation to the aged wariors, bringing back to their minds scores of one of the greatest conflicts this nation has ever known.

In charge of the affair was Fire Chief T. O. Doane, who as Post Commander, acted as chairman; the speakers of the evening were Assemblyman William N. Runon and Dr. Krebs; and vocal selections were rendered by William G. Smith and Mrs. John Manley. Patriotism was the keynote of the festivities, many graphic reminiscent anecdotes being related.

Adding to the impressiveness of the occasion was the representative gathering of citizens, men in every walk of life, who attended the affair, and the elaborate decorating scheme that had been adoted under the personal supervision of the "vets.' These men who were carrying muskets when General Lee surrendered to General U. S. Grant, April 9, 1865, thus virtually concluding the American Civil War, have since assumed places of responsibility in the community and the twenty-eight veterans present last night represented many professions, denominations and races.

Introduced by Chairman Doane as the "Noah Webster of Plainfield and of the United Sattes," Assemblyman Runyon eulogized the service the soldiers had rendered to the nation in an eloquent address, speaking touchingly of the outstanding events of the great conflict. He held aloft the characters of the veterans as ideals for the youth of the country to follow. The speaker gave a realistic description of the sacrifices and results of the war, that brought moisture to the eyes of his listeners and held them spellbound for forty-five minutes.

Mr. Krebs' talk dealt with the later events of the war, being of a historic nature and outlining the itinerary followed by the troops.

MANY ENJOYED DANCE FOR THE BENEFIT OF HOSPITAL

Two hundred and fifty people attended the dance given in the Plainfield High School auditorium last night for the benefit of Muhlenberg Hospital, the evening being a thoroughly enjoyable one for all present. The affair was an entire success from every point of view as the committee in charge had prepared an excellent entertainment program for the function.

Terpischorean music was furnished by Franz's orchestra and this added greatly to the occasion. Dancing, as usual, was the predominant feature, but many informal side numbers were also presented.

The auditorium was appropriately decorated with palms and cut-flowers and refreshment tables intermingled with the decorations lent a pleasing aspect. The Ritz company had charge of the serving of dainty refreshments Dancing was indulged in until 1 o'clock this morning.

The committee in charge included: Mrs. Charles L. Hyde, chairman; Mrs. Frederick Goddard, Mrs. Allen Cowperthwaite, Mrs. Boardman Tyler and Mrs. Sherman B. Joost. This was the last of a series given for the benefit of the hospital.

PROF HOCK TO SPEAK.

The German Reformed church at Duer street and Craig place will have its twelfth special evening service at 8 o'clock tomorrow night, when Prof. T. W. Hoch, of Newark, will speak.

"GOVERNMENT BY THE PEOPLE" HIS SUBJECT

Senator Clapp Will Conclude His Campaign Here on Monday Night.

Senator Moses E. Clapp, who will give his lecture "Government by the People" in the High School Auditorium on Monday evening, is to be entertained by David C. Smalley, a friend of several years' standing.

"Whether you agree with the Senator's views or not," says Mr. Smalley, "you are bound to admit that no man puts them more fairly before the people. He is a man of wide experience and one of America's leading statesmen."

Senator Clapp has given a dozen speeches to the New Jersey campaign, and Monday is the last occasion on which he speaks in the campaign in this State.

Excellent progress is being made with the cartoons. Albert Zerega has gallantly come forward to face the five redoubtable female relatives who each want him to use the vote her way.

One of the most remarkable cartoons, "Is This a Square American Deal," is being represented by Miss Eunice Watson, C. C. Wheeler and Tom Ball. While C. C. Wheeler, as election clerk, beams upon Tom Ball, who holds the label, "I am twenty-one," Miss Eunice Watson is bowed down under a list of the promises extracted from women before their right to the vote is admitted.

Volunteers are being organized into ushers and scene shifters for the evening's entertainment.

A demonstration is arranged to take place in Front street this afternoon and in the evening. Open air meetings are to be held at the pricipal points of vantage in the main thoroughfare.

One of the speakers is to be Miss Eva Ward, of Cambridge, England. Miss Ward has been in the United States for eighteen months studying industrial conditions, and she is to give much of her time to the suffrage campaign in New Jersey.

The meeting on Monday evening is to be opened at 8 p. m. by a speech from Mayor Leighton Calkins. The dramatic part of the entertainment is to consume forty minutes, and the rest of the evening is to be given to an address by Senator Moses E. Clapp.

PLANT, FLOWER AND FRUIT GUILD ELECT

Annual Meeting Held at the Friends' Meeting House Last Night.

Officers were elected and other interesting exercises held at the annual meeting of the Plant, Flower and Fruit Guild at the Friends' meeting-house on Watchung avenue last night. Joseph M. Harper, president, was in charge of the meeting which was opened with the singing of "Work for the Night is Coming," Miss Seader accompanying on the cornet.

Robert Love read the Scripture lesson, and in the absence of the secretary, Miss Grace Brown, C. R. Banks took her place. Mr. Love then took the chair, conducting the business meeting. These officers were elected for the coming year:

President, Joseph M. Harper; first vice-president, W. D. Williams; second vice-president, Robert Love; third vice-president, C. R. Banks; fourth vice-president, Mrs. L. M. Case; fifth vice-president, Mrs. C. R. Banks; secretary-treasurer, Miss Grace Brown; chairman distributing committee, Mrs. L. M. Case; chairman music committee, Mrs. J. C. Evans.

Mr. Love was authorized to organize an auxiliary to the guild and it was decided to hold flower market on April 28 at the Friends' meeting house. The next meting will be Friday, May 14.

The secretary was requested to send a vote of thanks to the W. C. T. U. Friends' meeting, trustees of the First First Baptist church, the Daily Press, Courier-News, Mrs. J. C. Evans, the high school orchestra and Miss Seader for assistance in promoting the interest of the guild.

FEAR UPRISING BY HUNGARIANS

Russians Say Austro-German Troops Are Being Massed to Prevent Insurrection.

CZERNOWITZ IN RUINS

Three Masted French Vessel is Torpedoed and Crew Are Left to Drift—Brilliant French Gains at Les Eparges.

Petrograd, April 10.—Military circles here believe that the immense concentration of Austrian and German troops in the defense of the Carpathians is due to a fear of an insurrection in Hungary. Important events of both a military and political nature are expected to follow a further advance along the north side of the railroad from Iszok and Berenza.

The following official statement was given out by the war office today:

"On the right bank of the Vistula a German aeroplane was shot to earth and two aviators captured. A German troop train carrying the staff of a German army corps was derailed in Poland and several superior officers killed and other injured. Czernowitz, the chief city of Bukovina, has been almost completely destroyed by the fire of the Austro-German artillery. The city was swept by fire. A military hospital burned and about 20 wounded soldiers perished."

Paris, April 10.—The French War Office gave out the following statement this afternoon:

"There is nothing to add to the communique of last night, supplementary reports made during the night relate that the two attacks which made us masters yesterday of the last German positions at Eparges were made with the bayonet and resulted in hand to hand fighting."

Le Treport, France, April 10.—The French three-masted ship Chateaubriand, from London for New York with a cargo of chalk, was sunk by a German submarine off the Isle of Wight on Thursday. The crew was saved.

Captain Gronin and the twenty-four men aboard the vessel were given ten minutes by the German commander to launch their two boats. The Chateaubriand then was torpedoed.

After drifting about all the rest of the day and all that night in bitter cold weather and without food the crew sighted the French coasts yesterday morning, landing here safely.

Cadiz, via Paris, April 10.—The steamer Legazpi, which arrived here yesterday, reported having sighted on March 11 the British schooner Robert, abandoned off the American coast. One mast was shattered and the vessel had a heavy list to starboard. The captain of the Legazpi believes the crew was taken off by a German warship, after which the schooner was shelled. The Robert carried a cargo of textiles.

London, April 10.—Fighting of the most severe character continues on the heights of the Meuse and along the St. Mihiel-Pont-a-Mousson front. The desperation with which the conflict is proceeding is emphasized in bothe the Paris and Berlin reports.

The latest French War Office bulletin chronicles the complete occupation of Les Eparges, southeast by east of Verdun, and adds that "we have thus attained one of the principal objectives of the last few days."

At the same time Paris admits that the Germans gained ground in Champagne, where the Kaiser's forces are pressing hard, apparently to force Gen. Joffre to let up in his offensive to the eastward. The French say that the lost ground was afterward recovered.

The French artillery is incessantly bombarding St. Mihiel, the point of the wedge which they are trying to break, and are also attacking the two sides of the wedge with infantry and artillery in an endeavor to reach the roads which lead from St. Mihiel to Metz.

If the progress already made is as great as the French say, these roads should now be almost within range of the French guns.

ILLUSTRATED LECTURE.

The civic section of the Monday Afternoon Club will meet in the parish house of the Congregational church, Monday afternoon, at 3 o'clock. After the business meeting at 3:45 o'clock, S. T. Carter, Jr., will give an illustrated lecture on "The Berkshire Industrial Farm," of which he is president. The public is invited to attend on the payment of a nominal fee.

ROTHBERG NOW AT 206.

There's nothing to touch the solid comfort of Rothberg clothes.

If a man wants style at the expense of comfort, that's his business. But if a man wants to combine comfort with style, that's ours!

Rothberg Clothes strike the happy medium with a maximum of both comfort and style.

They sit lightly on the figure, easing their lines over the human form with the honey of persuasion rather than the vinegar of a wrinkled result.

A Rothberg garment will fit you, favor you, and follow you line for line, giving you all the style in the world without interfering with your personal comfort.

Spring Suits that you can buy today, wear tomorrow, praise ever after, $12 to $30

CHAUNCEY H. BURT DIES IN 37TH YEAR

Succumbs to Two Days' Illness With Acute Bright's Disease.

Chauncey Howard Burt, for many years prominent in local athletics, principally as a baseball pitcher, died at his home on West Seventh street at 11.30 last night, following an illness of two days with acute bright's disease. He was a native of this city, having been born here thirty-seven years ago and was the son of the late William C. and Sarah M. Burt. The Chauncey Shaffer, one of Plainfield's best known residents at the time of his death, was his grandfather.

Mr. Burt was educated in the Plainfield schools and while in the High School took an active interest in athletics. He became an expert pitcher and during the city league series in 1902, twirled for the Y. M. C. A. team. He was also the mainstay for several years of the Clinton avenue nine. Mr. Burt frequently received offers to enter the professional ranks but always declined. He had been engaged in business in New York until a short time ago.

Mr. Burt is survived by his wife, and three children and the following sisters and brothers: Miss Clara Burt and Mrs. Amy Smith, of New York; Mrs. Edith Reiter, of South Bethlehem, Pa.; Mrs. Jessie Boldly, of East Orange, and Florence Burt, of Plainfield; Warren and Charles Burt, of New York. The funeral will be held at the late home and the service will be private.

A. O. H. AUXILIARY DANCE.

The Ladies' Auxiliary, No. 1, A. O. H., of St. Joseph's parish, gave a successful dance in Saengerbund Hall last night. The affair was largely attended and dancing was enjoyed on two floors. Paroubek's orchestra provided music for the modern dances on the main floor while Irish jigs and reels were given in the basement to the accompaniment of strains from "Pat" Buckley's violin. The proceeds from the affair will be added to the auxiliary treasury. Mrs. Bimble was chairman of the committee which made the arrangements.

DEATH OF LITTLE CHILD.

As the result of burns received yesterday afternoon when she set her clothes afire while playing with matches in her parents' home, Delia Humphries, aged four years, died in Muhlenberg Hospital at 7:20 last night. The infant's body had been seered from head to foot and it was predicted from the time the patient was received at the institution that she would die.

DR. ZELIE'S SUBJECT.

Rev. Dr. John S. Zelie, of the Crescent Avenue church, will continue his series of talks on the "Beatitudes" tomorrow afternoon at 5 o'clock. His subject tomorrow afternoon will be "Blessed Are the Pure in Heart." At 4:45 there will be an organ recital.

MAKE YOURS A PUBLIC SERVICE STORE

This is the age of service. The rewards of today go to the men who give the most in return.

Translated for you, Mr. Merchant, this means that the customers are certain to patronize the store that will give them what they want when they want it.

Low prices may bring some trade, but better service will bring more.

This is the age when people are reading the advertising in their daily newspapers because they are finding it a distinct part of the service they expect their newspapers to give.

When a nationally distributed article of merit is advertised in the newspapers a demand for it sets in right away.

People want to see it and, if satisfied, want to buy it.

They are going to turn to the store that lets them know it has the article. That store will be giving them the service they want at that particular moment.

If it is a good article they are going to remember the store where they got it and will come back to that store again.

Co-operate with the manufacturers who come into the newspapers of your town to exploit their goods and you will be building business for yourself.

If the man who says, "I can't afford to advertise" will look over the list of big concerns that were LITTLE concerns before they started to advertise, he will be more likely to say:

"I can't afford NOT to advertise."

The Press is Plainfield's best advertising medium because its circulation is among the people who make and spend the most money.

Plainfield Daily Press,

WORDS IN THE MAKING.

Our Language Grows by Terms Created to Fit the Occasion.

Language can be made in the library, no doubt, and in the laboratory also, but it is most often and most effectively created in the workshop and in the market place, where the imaginative energy of our race expresses itself spontaneously in swift creating the lacking term in response to the unexpected demand. Nothing could be better, each in its own day, than picturesque vocables like scare head and loan shark, windjammer and hen minded, all of them American contributions to the English language and all of them examples of the purest English. Hen minded is an adjective devised by Mr. Howells to describe those women who are so common in all walks of life and who are made up of only one aim at a time and of manifold anxieties at all times. Scare head and loan shark are the products of the newspaper office, while windjammer was put together by some downeast sailor man, inheritor of the word forming gift of his island ancestors who helped to harry the armada. "Windjammer," remarked Professor Gildersleeve, trained by his intimate knowledge of Greek to appreciate verbal vigor as well as verbal delicacy—"windjammer is a fine word, I grant, and so is every Anglo-Saxon compound that grows and is not made."

But all new words are not of necessity good words. Ben Jonson, who was himself a frequent maker of new words, displayed his shrewdness when he declared that "custom is the most certain mistress of language as the publicke stampe makes the current money," adding as a caution, "But wee must not be too frequent with the mint, every day coyning."—Brander Matthews in Harper's Magazine.

RUSSIA'S MIGHTY RIVER.

The Sluggish Volga Is Three Times as Long as the Rhine.

In Russia the rivers are large and sluggish, owing to their great length and slight fall. The Volga is the longest river in Europe. It is 2,300 miles in length—that is, three times as long as the Rhine—yet its total fall is only a little over 800 feet.

The peat bogs in the Valdai hills, where it takes its rise, are only 750 feet above sea level, while Astrakhan, at the mouth, is sixty-five feet below the level of the sea.

The Russian fondly speaks and sings of it as "Matushka Volga," or "Little Mother Volga," in gratitude, no doubt, for the bounteous supply of fish, caviar and game, as well as comforts and pleasures afforded by this historic stream, which plays so important a part in the economic life of the nation.

The products of Asia and Europe are carried on its waters; the two thousand odd river steamers are always busy, and the huge rafts, consisting often of thousands of logs, being floated or pulled down the stream, represent a small portion of the riches of Russia's inexhaustible forest lands.—New York Telegram.

Where Women Swim Best.

"The Korean women are the best swimmers in the world," said a life guard. "The Korean pearl diving is in their hands. They swim—they don't boat—they swim out to the pearl fisheries of Quelpart, lugging baskets with them. After this swim of half an hour they dive down fifty feet and fetch up queer one shelled pearl oysters as big as babies. They dive till their baskets are full—the baskets are corked to keep them afloat—and after three or four hours' work they swim back home with their catch. The big one shelled oysters are valuable as pearl mines and as food too. A half dozen Koreans will sit down to an oyster as gayly as you or I sit down to a broiled lobster."

Looked Bad For Papa.

William's uncle was a very tall, fine looking man, while his father was very small. William admired his uncle and wished to grow up like him. One day he said to his mother:

"Mama, how did uncle grow so big and tall?"

His mother said, "Well, when uncle was a small boy he was always a very good boy and tried to do what was right at all times, so God let him grow up big and tall."

William thought this over seriously for a few minutes, then said, "Mama, what kind of a boy was papa?"—Pittsburgh Post.

There's Room at the Top.

He entered the barber shop, sat himself down, resigned to his fate.

The barber shaved him.

"Shampoo, sir?" asked the tensorialist.

"No," replied the man, gazing at his bald dome in the reflective mirror; "shine."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Ever Experience It?

Hokus—I feel like the oldest person in the world. Pokus—What are you talking about? You're not a day over thirty-five. Hokus—Yes, but I've just been listening to a sixteen-year-old boy tell about the things he used to do when he was a kid.—Life.

Strikes a Snag.

"Do you subscribe to the old theory that the criminal always returns to the scene of the crime?"

"Not always," replied the sure enough detective. "Sometimes the extradition papers won't hold."—Kansas City Journal.

Revenge is the abject pleasure of an abject mind.—Juvenal.

You Will Find Set Out in the

Cherry-Blossom Garden

(Sixth Gallery, New Building, East end)

The garden is simply the setting. It will help you better to select the furniture for your making over of home, indoors and out-of-doors. And you may be glad to know that the beauty and variety of the new summer furniture we have assembled, are beyond that of any previous showing.

For Indoors

There are reed chairs and willow chairs in a great variety of styles and many finishes; in the natural reed or willow, in green or brown, or even the dull finish black; and as a counterpose to the black is the antique ivory, soft, delicate, rich in tone.

Fabrics for cushion seats and backs are made to harmonize with the finish of the pieces.

Little comfortable things like stools, tea wagons, book rests, stands, lamps, etc., are gathered about to complete the assemblage.

Then there are the floor-rush pieces in brown and green; and the Crex grass pieces in similar colors; and some exquisitely made distinctive pieces of wide sized reed, spaced widely apart, copied from some originally made by the Swiss.

These latter may be had in several colorings.

For the Porch

Settees, tables, chairs and swings, in a great variety of kinds of materials; for instance, the good strong old-fashioned maple frame porch rocker, with the closely woven reed seat and back, is just as popular as ever, just as durable as ever, and just as low priced as ever.

Willow may be used in any form for the porch, it is there in great easy reclining chairs with a place on the side for your magazine or glass of refreshment.

For the Lawn

great pieces in rustic cedar; cedar from the cedar trees that have withstood the shocks of many years of the winds that sweep over the stormy coast of Jersey. From this cedar furniture has been manufactured for us for many years—always good in style and everlasting durability; and for no one else.

Then comes the rustic hickory furniture, fashioned from second growth hickory; tough as iron almost, and with a durability that knows no wear-out.

In this collection of out-door furniture, will be found arbors and tea houses, play houses, tables, chairs, swings, settees, flower boxes, and fence panels 10-foot long with artistic gateways.

We are prepared to supply this fence paneling and the gateways in any quantity desired. We will undertake the erection of such fences and gateways, and guarantee an artistic and satisfactory job.

A Japanese Garden

with its soft tones of grays and pinks and blues, with stronger black to offset the light colors; painted scenery taken from actual photographs of Japanese scenes; real vines and flowers; a charming scene.

Prices were never so low, nor ever was there a time when one can get so much for one's money in summer furniture, as today at Wanamaker's.

FEW FOLKS HAVE GRAY HAIR NOW

Druggist Says Ladies Are Using Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Hair that loses its color and lustre, or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmothers made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even color, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old-time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture by asking at any drug store for a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. Besides, it takes off dandruff, stops scalp itching and falling hair. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.—Adv.

Corporation Notice

WIDENING OF EAST SECOND ST.

Notice is hereby given that the Common Council has fixed the Twenty-sixth day of April, A. D. 1915, at eight o'clock p. m., at the Council Chamber, No. 149 North Avenue, in the City of Plainfield, N. J., as the time and place for Charles C. Randolph, Elias H. Bird and John Abbott, the commissioners appointed by the Common Council pursuant to the ordinance entitled, "An Ordinance to widen East Second Street from the northeasterly side line of Watchung Avenue to the southwesterly side line of Church Street," approved December 7th, 1914, and the resolution of the Common Council in the premises, adopted April 5th, 1915, to meet and proceed with the discharge of their duties and hear all persons interested in the premises, and make their estimates and assessments under said ordinance and said resolution and the statutes in such case made and provided.

The street to be widened to extend from the northeasterly side line of Watchung Avenue to the southwesterly side line of Church Street, the center and side lines of which street, as well as the width thereof, being particularly described in said ordinance, and shown on map therein referred to, and on file in the office of the City Clerk, entitled, "Map showing proposed laying out and widening of East Second Street from Watchung Avenue to a point 225 feet northeasterly of the center of Washington Street, June, 1914."

The land to be taken for the widening of said East Second Street on the northwesterly side of the same from the northeasterly side line of Watchung Avenue to the southwesterly side line of Church Street, includes all that part of the property now or formerly of The Home Real Estate Company, William A. Woodruff, Charles M. Raybert and John H. Borman, which lies between the present northwesterly side line of said street as now laid out and opened, and a line parallel with the center line of said street as established by this ordinance and distant therefrom twenty-five (25) feet in a northwesterly direction.

The land to be taken for the widening of said East Second Street on the southeasterly side of the same from the northeasterly side line of Watchung Avenue to the southwesterly side line of Church Street, includes all that part of the property now or formerly of the United States of America, the Plainfield Milk and Cream Company, The Trustees of the Rahway and Plainfield Monthly Meeting of Friends and Joseph C. Allen, which lies between the present southeasterly side line of said street as now laid out and opened and a line parallel with the center line of said street as established by this ordinance, and distant therefrom twenty-five (25) feet in a southeasterly direction, as shown on said map and said ordinance, to which reference is hereby made for a more detailed description.

ACID IN STOMACH SOURS THE FOOD

Says Excess of Hydrochloric Acid is Cause of Indigestion.

A well-known authority states that stomach trouble and indigestion is nearly always due to acidity—acid stomach—and not, as most folks believe, from a lack of digestive juices. He states that an excess of hyrdochloric acid in the stomach retards digestion and starts food fermentation, then our meals sour like garbage in a can, forming acrid fluids and gases which inflate the stomach like a toy balloon. We then get that heavy, lumpy feeling in the chest, we eructate sour food, belch gas, or have heartburn, flatulence, waterbrash or nausea.

He tells us to lay aside all digestive aids and instead, get from any pharmacy four ounces of Jad Salts and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast while it is effervescing, and furthermore, to continue this for one week. While relief follows the first dose, it is important to neutralize the acidity, remove the gas-making mass, start the liver, stimulate the kidneys and thus promote a free flow of pure digestive juices.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and sodium phosphate. This harmless salts is used by thousands of people for stomach trouble with excellent results.

TREES AND THEIR CARE.

Plainfield is indeed fortunate in possessing so many beautiful specimens of shade trees, more especially the elm, oak, and hard maples. On the other hand she has the misfortune to have a majority of soft or silver maples. However they are here and we will have to make the best of them.

The principal objection to them as a street tree is their brittle wood, caused by rapid growth, which breaks in every wind and sleet storm, and their roots which sap all the surface food around them. Tall silver maples should be topped to a height of 25 or 30 feet, making a bunchy, low headed tree, practically free from breakage. The bad feature of topping is the appearance in winter of the ungainly stubs sticking up in the air, but after all, do they look any worse than the great branches broken and split off in wind storms?

A word about trimming. All dead wood must of course be removed, branches which chafe one another, and suckers or sap wood on the inside of the head, allowing a circulation of air and sunlight, lessening the danger of fungus diseases and breakage.

Maple trees can be trimmed only when they are in full leaf. In this locality if they are cut during the winter months, November to April, the sap will run. Although I have never seen any harm come from bleeding, the appearance isn't pleasing to a lover of trees. Large limbs should be removed in two operations, the first two feet away from the body of the tree to prevent tearing the bark, and the final cut as close to the trunk as possible. All wounds should be waterproofed with a good paint or tar preparation. A great many of our street trees have been planted too closely, not allowing proper development of the head. For street work hard maples should be at least 35 feet apart and elms and oaks 50 or 60 feet.

A tree should be waterproof, that is, no water should be allowed to remain in or on any part of the tree. Pockets between branches should be either filled with cement high enough to allow water to run off, or a drain pipe put in at the bottom of the pocket.

Cavities caused by broken limbs or rotten stubs are treated much as a dentist would fill a tooth. All the decayed wood is first cleaned out, the wood is undercut to make the cement stay in, then it is treated antiseptically to guard against fungus diseases, and finally filled with concrete, one part sand and one part Portland cement. Care must be taken to cut the bark along the edges of the cavity and to get the cement under the bark. If the concrete is plastered over the bark, when growth starts, it soon pushes the cement loose making an entrance for water.

There are two kinds of crotches in trees, the V shaped and the U shaped. The V shaped one is generally an imperfect union and very weak, splitting when a heavy strain comes against it. These must be strengthened by bolts through the tree or chains in the top, never by bands around the limbs. A band around a tree chokes it, the pressure killing the bark as the tree grows, whereas a bolt through only kills about two inches of bark on either side and is healed over in a few years. The life of the tree is in the sap wood situated just under the outer bark. The heart wood has no life being used for support, so that boring a hole through a tree does not injure it in the least.

The feeding of trees is a very important part of their care. For this locality a mixture of two parts of ground bone, two parts of acid phosphate and one part of muriate of potash applied in the fall at the rate of 3 pounds per square rod, and in the spring as the trees are leafing out 2 pounds of nitrate of soda is a great benefit. This may be applied broadcast and worked into the soil, or if digging in is objectionable, holes may be driven with a bar three feet apart and about eight inches deep and fertilizer used in the same proportion as in broadcasting.

Your fruit trees—trim them during the winter months. Taking out the weak twigs and suckers gives you bigger and better fruit.

The greatest enemy of fruit trees and many varieties of shrubs is the San Jose scale. It is a minute insect, seen only under a magnifying glass, which saps the life of your trees. It is controlled by thoroughly spraying during the winter months with lime sulphur solution or an oil solution which mixes with water. None the less important is the spraying of apple trees just after the blossoms fall for the coddling moth. The moth lays the egg in the blossom end of the fruit and on hatching the grub eats its way to the center. A drop of arsenate of lead sprayed in the blossom before the egg hatches does away with the coddling moth.

The foregoing statements are only a few of the more important suggestions as to the care of trees, for as times goes on, our community is becoming more aware of the fact that our trees are a big asset and a mighty valuable one.

RALPH G. STRATTON WEDS MISS MINNIE L. TRAUDT

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Minnie L. Traudt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Traudt, of Pok, N. Y., and Ralph G. Strathern, formerly of Pok, but now of Plainfield. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, pastor of the First M. E. church, at the parsonage, on Central avenue, Saturday, April 3. The couple was unattended.

Mr. and Mrs. Strathern are residing in Plainfield, the bridegroom being employed at the Saurer plant of the International Motor Company. Both Mr. and Mrs. Strathern are natives of Pok.

GAVE A COSTUME PARTY.

Edith Shotwell, daughter of Mr and Mrs. Freeman Shotwell, of Fairview avenue, entertained a number of friends at her home yesterday in honor of her twelfth birthday anniversary. The affair was known as a costume party the guests being dressed as old folks.

PUBLIC APPEAL TO MEN OF PLAINFIELD

Donations Sought to Fill Comfort Bags for Soldiers and Sailors.

Mrs. E. Pendleton Rogers, who is chairman of the hospital committee of New Jersey Branch of the Prince of Wales Relief for Soldiers and Sailors, has issued the following open letter to the men of Plainfield in an effort to secure their help in providing comfort bags for the convalescent men in the army and navy hospitals of Europe. The amount of contribution asked for is so small and yet will do so much for the sufferers that it is believed there will be a hearty response. The New Jersey branch has been doing a great work since its organization, and in this new departure it is holding out a helping hand to the men who have fallen while fighting, and are now in no condition to take care of themselves. The government provides to them shelter, but all the little comforts that a man enjoys have to come from private sources, consequently the women of Plainfield are doing their best to provide the necessary articles. Mrs. Rogers' letter is as follows:

"To the Men of Plainfield—Through this paper I wish to appeal to the men of Plainfield for help to fill "comfort bags" for the suffering sailors and soldiers in the hospitals of France and England. The cost of each kit bag is slight, from 65 cents to $1, and contains comforts dear to every man's heart—a pipe, tobacco, cigarette papers, etc.

"This is a work which I feel sure will appeal to the men of our city. I shall be very glad to receive contributions of money or things for this purpose. If the donors will enclose their personal cards or any little message or good wish it will be safely packed in the bag and most gratefully acknowledged by the hospital committee of the Prince of Wales Relief for Sailors and Soldiers, New Jersey branch.

MRS. N. PENDLETON ROGERS,
Chairman Hospital Committee.
518 East Front street.

The New Jersey branch has previously forwarded numerous kit bags through the St. George Society, and the fact that they have been highly appreciated is attested to by the following excerpt from a letter received a few days ago from Queen Mary's secretary, which is as follows:

"Queen Mary's Needlework Guild,, Friary Court, St. James Palace,
London, S. W., March 24, 1915.

"Her Majesty was particularly pleased with the kit bags, and the men in the hospitals are simply delighted with them.

(Signed) ANNIE LAWLEY,
Hon. Secretary."

SUDDEN DEATH OF MRS. JOS. DUNHAM

Former Well Known Resident Passes Away at Her Home in New York.

Mrs. Edna H. Dunham, wife of Joseph S. Dunham, and a former well known resident of Plainfield, died yesterday afternon at her home, 82 Seamon avenue, New York. Her demise came as a great shock to her many friends, as she had been ill only since last Sunday with appendicitis and complications.

Mrs. Dunham was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Harris, of Madison avenue, and had always resided in Plainfield until five years ago. She was educated in the Plainfield schools and was a member of the First M. E. church. She sang in the choir of the latter and was a member of the chorus choir that was active in the city several years ago. Her husband is the son of the late Marvin Dunham, and the sympathy of all who know him is extended in his hour of bereavement.

Beside her parents and husband, Mrs. Dunham is survived by an infant son, Edwin, one year and two weeks old, also one sister, Mrs. Benjamin Evans, of Madison avenue; her grandmother, Mrs. Abigail Briant, of Sandford avenue, and an aunt, Mrs. Elwin R. Leland, of Sandford avenue. Mrs. Dunham's last visit to Plainfield was about two weeks ago, when her grandmother observed her birthday.

The body will be brought to the city and the funeral will be held at Mrs. Leland's home at 65 Sandford avenue, Monday afternoon, at 2:30 and burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

J. E. BARONDESS TO SPEAK IN THIS CITY

Will Discuss "the War and the Jewish People" at K. of P. Hall.

Arrangements have been completed by Jehuda Hulevi Camp, No. 57, of the International Zionist Organization, for the reception to be given tomorrow afternoon at Knights of Pythias Hall to Joseph E. Barondess, Commissioner of Education of New York, and the president of the Order Sons of Zion. He will speak on "The War and the Jewish People."

The camp considers itself fortunate in being able to secure Mr. Barondess to speak here. He is a dominant factor in the activities of the American Jewish Committee, comprising twenty-five representative men in this country. There is hardly an organization of public good in New York that does not have the commissioner on its honorary list, and he has unselfishly devoted his life to building up various institutions. The members of the local camp will meet Mr. Barondess at the station. The meeting will be held at 3 o'clock, to be followed by a reception and banquet to Mr. Barondess at the home of Henry Rosenbaum, on Madison avenue.

UNUSED BUILDINGS ARE DESTROYED BY FLAME

An unused barn and several outbuildings, located on Cushing road, east of Leland avenue, were completely destroyed by fire shortly before 1 o'clock this morning. The origin of the blaze is unknown, as no one had been about the premises a long time. Chief Doane estimates the loss at $500.

The property belongs to a Brooklyn man, and was at one time used by E. L. McKenzie as a dog kennel. The fire spread a vivid glare in the sky, and someone in the Netherwood section turned in an alarm from box 68 at 12:40. There was practically nothing left of the building when the department arrived. The blaze was out of their jurisdiction, as the city line is in the middle of Cushing road.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Hellyer, of East Seventh street, are the proud parents of a seven and a half pound baby girl born to thim this morning.

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

"Cameo Kirby," which is to be presented at the Plainfield Theatre, Monday and Tuesday, is a drama of the South in the days before the war. The main incidents of the story take place in New Orlans or on the Mississippi river, near that point Dustin Farnum stars in the photodrama, which is presented by the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, through an arrangement with the Liebler Company.

"Cameo Kirby," so called because of his fondness for cameos, is the son of a planter who dies insolvent. After the sale of the parental property, Kirby starts north on one of the Mississippi steamboats. During this trip he meets with many exciting adventures, as the period of time in which the story is written is just before the war of the rebellion, when steamboat racing and poker playing on board the big river queens was a topic of national discussion. He meets with Adele Randall, to whom he becomes betrothed after a series of trials and tribulations that make up one of the most realistic photoplay productions ever shown. When it is all over, Kirby marries the girl of his choice and stands revealed before the world, in spite of the machinations of enemies, as a chivalrous Southern of undeniable honor and integrity.

"Cameo Kirby" will be followed on Wednesday at the Plainfield Theatre by the picture version of the recent great dramatic success, "The Conspiracy," with John Emerson playing the role which he created in New York city. The theatre will be given over Thursday night to the Belgian Relief Committee, and on Friday and Saturday the management will offer Mary Pickford in "Cinderella." The serial picture, "The Black Box," is shown every Tuesday.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

The change of vaudeville at Proctor's Theatre for the first half of next week, commencing Monday, will include the following numbers: A singing novelty entitled, "A Tenement Flirtation," carrying a special scenic setting, showing the exterior of a tenement house; the two Carlos, in a novelty acrobatic act, "The Artistic Dream," during which hand balancing and head balancing are featured; Brown and Barrows, presenting the comedy skit, "The Girl and the Pearl," bright dialogue, songs and dancing; Hogue and Hardy in a variety skit entitled "Just Account," during which talking and music enliven the action.

The picture portion of the program next Monday and Tuesday will have for its headliner the World Film Corporation five-part photoplay, "The Arrival of Perpetua." Miss Vivian Martin, who made a lasting impression by her clever work in "The Wishing Ring" and "Old Dutch," has posed the leading role. Additional pictures will be shown Monday and Tuesday, and on Wednesday the patrons of the house have another five-act treat coming to them in the presentation of "Marta of the Lowlands."

U. S. ASTOR THEATRE

Out of a program of notable photoplays booked for next week at the U. S. Astor Theatre, Betty Nansen, star of the Royal Theatre, in Copenhagen, an actress who has been decorated by kings and emperors, and who is the close friend of Ibsen, of dramatic fame, is undoubtedly the stellar attraction in the play "The Celebrated Scandal," written by Jose Echegary, the noted Spanish playwright.

Mae Marsh, in "The Outcast," a drama of vital interest, telling the story of a little outcast of the slums, who grows up in a sordid atmosphere to reap all of the dire results of her environment in the charge of murder when she is a young woman, will be the feature for Manday and Tuesday. Miss Marsh leaped to fame through her creation of the pathetic role of the "Little Sister" in "The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffiths' magnificent film production, and in "The Outcast" she has a part that is even better suited to her marvelous powers of character delineation.

Supplying the lighter atmosphere for the first two days of the week will be Sidney Chaplin, brother of the celebrated "Charles of the big feet." He will be presented in a two-reel comedy, "Gussie's Day of Rest," which gives him ample opportunity, of which he makes the most, to prove that "Charles" has no monopoly over "Sid" when it comes to the matter of inheritance of the family talent as "laugh-getters." "Comparisons being odious here as elsewhere, the only thing to do is to see the two of them and decide for oneself if one is any funnier than the other.

"The Celebrated Scandal" has been booked for Wednesday and Thursday, and it will be followed on Friday and Saturday by Robert Edeson in "The Night Stage," a Mutual Master production that abounds in sensational developments leading up to one of the most dramatic climaxes ever conceived in the fertile brain of a playwright.

TO SECURE MORE VOTES FOR TOUR

Contest Manager Gives Hints to Press Contestants.

ALL URGED TO PLAY FAIR IN RACE

Here is a little information for the contestants and those who will spend a few minutes to read it will surely profit thereby: When you first got a person to subscribe, it was perhaps for a year. Many of those people who gave you subscriptions want to see you win. Those people will willingly give you an extension on the subscription which they first gave you if you will but ask them. They would readily pay their subscription for another year so that you might benefit by the votes. Look at the vote schedule and figure out how easily the votes can be piled up. If a person gave you a new subscription for one year it entitled you to 1,650 votes. If this subscriber will extend that to two years it will give you not only another 1,650 votes but an extra 350, in all 3,650 votes for two years. On this second subscription you will merely mark it "second subscription," and get 2,000 votes instead of 1,650, making in all the 3,650 for two years.

Use Fair Play.

The contest manager takes this occasion to remind the candidates that his experience has taught him that at this stage of the contest there is likely to be a disposition on the part of the candidates to secure votes in devious ways that could not be called sportsmanlike, not to say unfair.

It has been the endeavor of the Press and the contest manager to have each candidate realize how clean, fair and honest a contest this is.

With the closing we want the unanimous declaration of every one concerned that this has been the best contest ever conducted in this section of the country.

To the candidates and their friends we make this request: Be fair, use no questionable methods to win.

New Subscribers.

Be careful about new subscribers and renewals. It is not playing a fair and square game to send the paper to an old subscriber for a year in the name of some other member of the family and report it as a new subscriber, thereby securing 1,650 votes when you are rightly entitled to but 825 votes.

We are not discouraging ingenuity, but pleading for an upright, square deal for everyone.

There are few, if any, tricks the contest manager has not seen, and the perfectness of the system used brings to light an injustice to any candidate.

Play fair and win with a clean conscience.

BETWEEN, The Bayonne Building Association No. 2, Complainant, and Vincenty Yaneczko et als., Defendants.
Fi. fa. for sale of mortgaged premises.
Returnable May 26, 1915.
Benny & Cruden, solicitors.

By virtue of the above stated writ, to me directed and delivered, I shall sell at public vendue at the office of the Sheriff of Hudson County, in the County Court House of said county at Jersey City, N. J., on Thursday, the Fifteenth day of April, A. D. nineteen hundred and fifteen, at two o'clock in the afternoon, all the following described land and premises, with the appurtenances, being the same premises described in said writ, that is to say:

ALL that tract or parcel of land and premises hereinafter particularly described, situate, lying and being in the City of Bayonne, in the County of Hudson and State of New Jersey: Beginning at a point on the Northwesterly side of Prospect Avenue (formerly known as Railroad Avenue) distant two hundred (200) feet Northwesterly from the corner formed by the intersection of the Westerly side of Prospect Avenue with the Northerly side of East Twenty-first Street; thence running (1) Northwesterly along the line of lands now or formerly of John Thompson one hundred (100) feet to the right of way of the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey; thence running (2) Northeasterly and along the said right of way twenty-five (25) feet; thence (3) Southeasterly and at right angles to Prospect Avenue one hundred (100) feet to the Northwesterly side of Prospect Avenue; thence (4) Southwesterly and along the said Northwesterly side of Prospect Avenue twenty-five (25) feet to the point or place of beginning. Being known as lot number six (6) in block three hundred and three (303) on the Tax Maps of the City of Bayonne now in use. Being the same premises conveyed to the said defendants Wincenty Yaneczko and Brunislava his wife, by deed dated March 14th, 1911, the said mortgage having been given to secure a portion of the consideration money for said conveyances.

ALSO all those other certain lots, tracts or parcels of land and premises, hereinafter particularly described, situate, lying and being in the Township of Fanwood, in the County of Union and State of New Jersey, known and distinguished on a certain map of building lots at Fanwood, New Jersey, said map being entitled "Map of Westfield Golf Park" and laid down on said map as lots numbered three (3), four (4), five (5), and six (6), each lot being twenty-five (25) feet in width front and rear by a depth of one hundred and fifty-one feet on each side, fronting on the West side of Plainfield Avenue; said map being on file in the office of the Register of the County of Union. The said second parcel being the same premises conveyed to the said Wincenty Yaneczko and Brunislava Yaneczko his wife by Euphemia E. Perrine, and husband, by deed bearing date the 31st day of May, 1907, and recorded in liber 485 of Deeds for Union County, on page 512, together with all and singular the rights, privileges, hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging, or in any wise appertaining, and the reversions and remainders, rents, issues and profits, thereof, and all the estate, right, title, interest, use, property, claim and demand of the said defendants of, in and to and out of the same.

The above described premises situate in the County of Hudson are subject to liens and encumbrances which, with their approximate amounts, are as follows: Taxes for the years 1912, $69.30; 1913, $65.80; 1914, $70.65, and water rents, $16.42, besides penalties and interest thereon.

The above described premises situate in the County of Union will be sold subject to liens thereon for taxes, assessments and other municipal encumbrances, the amount of which will be announced at the sale.

Dated, March 20th, 1915.

FITZSIMMONS MARRIED; GREETS JESS WILLARD

Washington, April 10.—Bob Fitzsimmons, the former heavyweight champion, was married here last night to Miss Temo Semonin, who has been associated with him for some time in theatricals. The bride's gift from the bridegroom is said to have been $85,000 in jewels.

"Jess" Willard and his party arrived here at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. A reception committee, headed by "Bob" Fitzsimmons, met the champion at the railroad station and ushered him out to an automobile through the entrance reserved for the use of the President of the United States. After a brief stop here Willard prepared to go on to Baltimore.

HIGH BRIDGE TO MEET P. H. S. NEXT MONDAY

The Plainfield High School baseball team is scheduled to meet the High Bridge nine on Parker Field, Monday afternoon, at 3:30 o'clock. The boys from up the line have played several games so far and have turned them all into victories. High Bridge won a tight game from Clinton recently and walloped the ball hard. Dorland, the midget pitcher, is in good form, and the locals will have to have their batting eyes with them.

B. J. Phelps, former principal of the North Plainfield schools, but now of High Bridge, will accompany the team here, and as the boroughites have no game until Wednesday, they take the game in and meet their former teacher. Mr. Phelps coached the team.

COYLE AND CONSHAY TO PLAY WITH ST. JOSEPH'S

"Bill" Coyle and "Eddie" Conshay, two local ball players who have been in semi-professional circles, have announced that they will play with the St. Joseph aggregation, of the borough, this season. Bill is an infielder and Conshay a pitcher and outfielder.

The Saints open up one week from today with the St. Mary's T. A. B. nine, and on the following Saturday will travel to Lincoln and play the Marions, of that place. Manager P. A. McDonough is arranging a fine schedule of games and would like to hear from teams in this vicinity. Address him at 124 Randolph road.

FOOTBALL CLUB GIVES SEVENTH ANNUAL DANCE

The seventh annual ball of the Plainfield Association Football Club, Inc., was held in Knights of Pythias Hall, on West Front street, last night, and was largely attended. Excellent music was furnished by J. A. Michell's orchestra, and the dance card contained eighteen numbers, including waltzes, two steps, lancers, quadrilles and schottische.

During the evening winners of the billiard tournament, held under the auspices of the association, were presented with their prizes. The following committees had charge of the affair: Floor manager, P. Halliwell, assistant floor manager; J. Henderson, committee on arrangements; T. O'Brien, chairman; W. Leese, W. Spaulding, J. Young, R. Bailee, W. Jordan, C. Stillman, J. Donaldson, T. Foy and T. Douglass.

THIS WAS A CASE OF "HAD TO DO IT"

Some of These Fellows Were Afraid of Getting Their Hair Pulled.

Playing with one arm tied, and wearing hobble skirts, the St. Joseph Boys' Club met defeat at the hands of the Chi Gamma Chi girls by a score of 17 to 16, in Columbus Club, last night. The game was a farce throughout, producing screams of laughter from the capacity audience of fans, the like of which has never been staged on a Plainfield court.

The initial period was played with lines, giving the lassies an advantage over the boys, the score during this session being 10 to 8 in favor of the girls. Moulton and McDonough each caged a pair of baskets from difficult angles, while Miss Daly tallied seven points for her team.

The last fifteen minutes of play was without lines, thus giving the boys a chance to exhibit their dribbling ability. Moulton caged four goals for the St. Joseph team during this half, while Miss Frances Newman got two beautiful field goals. Within the last minute of play, Moulton threw a goal that tied the score at 16-16. A fould caged by the Chi Gamma Chi, however, put the girls in the lead again just before the final whistle blew.

Following the game dancing was enjoyed by those present.

The teams lined up as follows:

WILL POSE FOR PICTURE.

The members of the Y. M. C. A. basketball team, amateur champions of this city, will have their pictures taken at the Stone and Luckey studio on Sunday, April 18, at 1 o'clock. Captain Bryniarski wants the following members to report at that time or notify him before next Monday: Ashley Burner, Joe Gavett, Jack Ricketts, Myrton Glover, Harry Moulton, F. O. Duning, Addison Newkirk and Bill Taylor.

BRYAN AFTER JOHNSON.

Washingto, April 10.—Secretary of State Bryan has instructed Minister Gonzales, at Havana, not to issue a passport to Jack Johnson, as the latter has been convicted of felony and is a fugitive from justice. It is understood according to Havana dispatches, that Johnson already has a passport, which he refused to return when ordered to do so. The State Department, however, understands this is not so.

WHY NOT A STATE Y. M. C. A. CIRCUIT?

Agitation Has Been Started for Another Association Baseball League.

Agitation for the reorganization of the New Jersey Y. M. C. A. Baseball League, which was a live issue several years ago, has again been started in several cities, and if enough teams can be found that are willing to enter, the agitation will probably result in a meeting in the near future of delegates from various associations in this section. When the old league was going teams were registered from Montclair, Orange, Elizabeth, Plainfield and associations from other cities, and the competition was always interesting.

Plainfield had good ball teams in those days, and there is no reason why a team should not be organized now and represent Plainfield in a State organization. There are cups in the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. trophy cabinet which have been won by teams for the State championships both in baseball and basketball.

A league consisting of Elizabeth, Summit, Madison, Montclair, Orange, Newark, with possibly Trenton, Paterson and Jersey City would be sure to live through the season, and without doubt would find a number of supporters. A good schedule of Saturday games could be arranged with the teams playing on their home grounds for local fans on alternate Saturdays.

COLLINS GREATEST PLAYER.

Ban Johnson Hands Compliments to Chicago White Sox Star.

"Eddie Collins is the greatest ball player in the game today, and he'll make the Chicago White Sox one of the best teams in the league this year," said Ban Johnson recently.

"Collins is a wonderful fielder, a great batter and one of the smartest men playing baseball. He'll make Weaver a 25 per cent better shortstop and will make the White Sox feared by every other team."

ENLISTED MEN TO SPEAK AT Y. M. C. A.

First of a Series of Meetings to Be Held at the Association Tomorrow.

Arrangements have been completed for the men's meeting to be held in the Y. M. C. A. Auditorium tomorrow afternoon. The doors will be open at 3:15, and the song service, under the leadership of S. T. Carter, Jr., will begin at 3:45. The Dutch Arms Concert Band will also have a very important part in the musical program.

Four speakers among the enlisted men who will be in charge of the service will tell of individual experiences, interspersed by bugle calls, explanations of which will be made. One of these speakers has served two enlistments in the army, and is now in the navy, and while at a deserted post in the Phil ippine Islands came in contact with the Y. M. C. A. secretary.

His account of what followed is little short of thrilling. W. W. Elder, who is one of the secretaries of the Brooklyn Navy Y. M. C. A., and known as a shipboard secretary, has seen service with the marines both at San Domingo and Vera Cruz. Mr. Elder will speak briefly of some of his own experiences. The meeting promises to be a most inspiring one, and is open to all men over sixteen.

NEWS OF INTEREST IN THE PLAINFIELD BUILDING WORLD

A BRICK AND CEMENT STUCCO HOUSE

DESIGNED BY CHAS. S. SEDGWICK, ARCHITECT.

THE size of this house is 25 ft. 8 in. wide by 34 ft. 3 in. deep, with a sun parlor at the left 10 ft. wide by 14 ft. deep. The construction is with brick or tile walls in the first story and frame above covered with cement stucco finished with a "pebble dash." The roof is low pitched hip roof covered with Spanish tile, the sun parlor also has a low pitch Spanish tile roof. The lower portion of this roof covering over the projected bay in the living room and connected with the porch roof, all covered with tile and give a very artistic appearance to the front of the house.

The vestibule entrance at the right has colonial treatment with semi-circle roof covered with copper, and with Ionic column each side of entrance. This vestibule opens into the main living room extending across the full front of house 24 ft. in length by 12 ft. in width. At the right end is an open fireplace with book shelves at either side and small ornamental windows over. At the rear of this room on the right is the main staircase with double platforms projected on the outside and well lighted with windows. These stairs are on the combination order with basement stairs and grade entrance underneath and short section of stairs from the kitchen to the main platform.

At the left of the living room and connected by wide glazed French doors is the dining room 12 by 14 ft. with sideboard at the rear and china closets on each side. Connecting directly with the kitchen at the right, which is 11 ft. 6 in. by 12 ft., is a glazed piazza. This house, though not large, is very compact, roomy and convenient. The first floor is finished in mission stain and natural oak floors. The basement is full under the main part. It is estimated to build this house for $5,000 to $6,000, exclusive of heating and plumbing.

The second story has three good-sized chambers, ample closets a large bathroom in the rear with wide sleeping porch across the r enclosed with glazed windows. T construction of this house and fin throughout is strictly first class. It designed to use dark Oriental bri in the first story with deep sunk jo and tint the stucco above, staining the trimmings, cornices, etc., a d brown with the sash painted wi This combination, together with tile roof (either green or red) wil a very striking and artistic app ance.

START WORK ON BIG APARTMENT

Modern Structure Will Contain 23 Suites of Rooms and Will Cost $55,000.

The excavation of the cellar for the Crescent Court Apartments was started at 217 East Seventa street during the course of the past week and the foundation walls will be started on Monday or Tuesday of next week, weather conditions permitting. The building will cost in the vicinity of $55,000.

The structure, which is to be of hollow terra cotta block, will be four stories high, with a total of twenty-three apartments. A care-taker's apartments will be located in the basement, while two suites of doctor's offices, and two apartments of six rooms each will comprise the first floor. The second, third and fourth floors will contain four six-room and two four-room apartments each. The floor plans are so arranged that the lighting and ventilation of the various rooms are without an imperfection. The building will be modern and fire-proof throughout. An up-to-date steam heating plant is to be installed. The structure will have a frontage of 77 feet, a depth of 92 feet, and a width of 92 feet in the rear.

The frame dwelling which has occupied the site for a number of years past has been recently turned about to face East Sixth street, and will in all probability be remodeled into an up-to-the-minute boarding house by C. C. Alexander, who recently purchased the property. The new apartment house is being erected by the Crescent Realty Company, of which Mr. Alexander is president, the concern only recently being incorporated.

The following contracts for the work have been awarded: W. D. Lewis Company, of Roselle, carpenter work, $17,900; John Jardis Iron Works, iron work, $2,157; W. H. Dennick, mason work, $21,856.50; W. J. Ledden, plumbing work, $7,840; Charles L. Ryder, electrical work, $1,200. John C. Westervelt, of New York city, is the architect.

MINOR IMPROVEMENTS.

Minor improvements, including the erection of a sleeping porch, is being made to the home of Samuel Huntington, of 324 Franklin place. George D. Wilson is the contractor.

PLANS FOR NEW MARKET FACTORY WELL UNDER WAY

Gabriell and Schall, the concern which has bought the Mackinnon farm at New Market for the purpose of erecting a factory there, are planning to get busy right away. It is their hope to have their output under way by the first of June and if they can keep to that schedule it means some hustling. William K. Bonnfield and J. Meyer were out to the village on Tuesday looking over ground and making definite plans for the needs of the business. One of the first activities will be the sinking of six artesian wells. The concern has been located at 205 Pearl street, New York, for forty years and make rock asphalt, mastic and general asphalt products. They have had a plant in Pennsylvania.

Negotiations are being made by the concern for a right of way over Mr. Kelly's property so that they can drive heavy trucks into their new holdings. While they do the bulk of their shipping in carload lots they also ship out some emergency orders by truck loads and when the right of way has been secured, they propose to macadamize the stretch of road leading from Prospect avenue into their plant.

NEW RESTAURANT BUILDING ERECTED AT DUNELLEN

Proprietor Tunis W. Sisty, of Wayside Park, Dunellen, has had erected on the westerly end of his property a building which will be conducted as a model restaurant when the season opens. It stands between the Silver Birch Cabin and the Henry Vogel property and is a building two stories in height with wide verandas, a room for tables in the front and with two restaurant bars in the center of the building and commodious kitchen in the rear. In the upper story is a room designed for the holding of private dinner parties. The outside is to be finished in a rural, white birch effect and the appearance of the whole will be very striking. The contractor who built the structure is Charles Wrage, of this borough.

COUNTY MOVEMENTS.

Fifteen building contracts, calling for the expenditure of $71,110, were filed with County Clerk Calvert during the course of the week ending last Saturday. Included in the list of the contracts, are those from this city covering the work on the new Crescent Court apartments.

TWO CONSTRUCTION PERMITS ARE ISSUED

Total Expenditure for New Buildings Aggregates $50,850.

Two construction permits, both of which call for alterations to buildings, were issued by Inspector T. O. Doane during the course of the past week. The documents call for the expenditure of $3,200. The total expenditure for buildings as quoted by the permits issued thus far this month now aggregates $50,850.

The permits as issued last week were greatly instrumental in putting to work a great number of building craftsmen of the city, who have been idle for several months owing to the existing local conditions, and contractors are of the opinion that the season is now in full swing for a most prosperous year.

The permits as issued during the course of the past week are as noted below:

SECOND WARD.

Estelle Titsworth is having erected a 15 by 60 foot, two story brick extension to the dwelling at Evergreen and Hillside avenue. The cost is placed at $3,000. Harold Werner is the architect of the improvements.

THIRD WARD.

Mrs. Edith B. Melick, of 139 West Fourth street, is having a one-story frame extension added to the residence at the above address. The improvement will measure four and a half feet by fourteen feet, and will be one-story high. The cost is estimated at $200. J. C. Conover, of Somerville, is the contractor.

PAINT SHOP BEING ERECTED ON SYCAMORE STREET

Work was started this week on the $6,000 paint shop on Sycamore street, midway between East Fourth and East Fifth streets, being erected by E. M. Laing, the construction being of brick. The building will be two stories high and will measure 40 by 70 feet. A small boiler room will occupy the rear of the building.

The structure is to be a modern one in every detail, as well as being fire-proof. George H. Fisher, Jr., is the architect; William Pangborn & Son, the mason contractors, and Alexander Milne, the carpenter contractor.

MATERIAL PRICES ARE IMPROVING

Advices From Contractors Indicate a Sharp Advancement in Construction.

GREAT EXPORT DEMAND

Consumers and Specifiers May Get An Idea of the Trend of Prices by Authentic Report of the State of the Cement Situation.

New York, April 10.—Advices from building contractors throughout the metropolitan district indicate a sharp improvement in building construction, but except for the few lines affected by the great export demand now current, there are few advances. Common Hudson brick is steady at $5.75, where it probably will remain. Raritan common brick is firm at approximately the same figure. Lehigh Valley Portland cement is still holding between $1.23 and $1.32 for immediate delivery with current orders light. Lumber prices have held fairly steady, but Canadian spruce and yellow pine are a half a dollar to a dollar and a half higher in wholesale yards. Stone is firmer on demand, according to local cutters, architectural terra cotta requirements reflect the condition of the current structural steel market in gradual improvement. Concrete and masons' supplies like lime, plaster, sand, cinders and crushed stone.

Consumers and specifiers may get some idea of the trend of prices by an authentic report of the State of the cement situation at the Lehigh Valley. The stock in the valley and Hudson river district is estimated conservatively at twenty per cent. below the amount in reserve outside of tested cement held for special order last year. There have been estimates as high as thirty-five per cent. below last year's cement in storage.

Production in March was 25 per cent. more than a year ago in Pennsylvania and New York, but the amount in storage was not increased. Close to 160 kilns are now in operation. Shipments in March were fifty per cent. greater than they were in March a year ago which is a gain of ten per cent. over February's 40 per cent. gain over the shipments of a year previous. Outside of tested cement there was said to be not over thirty day's supply of cement in store at the Lehigh Valley mills. It is believed that there is about 70 per cent. of kiln capacity now in operation in the two districts supplying this market. The hole made in the supply of cement in this market by the temporary retirement of the Edison Company is beginning to be apparent and the price situation at mill is expected soon to reflect this strain on the capacity of the two districts to supply this market.

It was stated this week that within forty days the demand would be sufficient in this market to require the throwing in of an additional five per cent. capacity at the mills and to warrant, under normal conditions, of a New York wholesale price of at least $1.53 by July 1. Another authority predicted a price of $1.62 by September 1.

In the department of supplies affected by the heavy military requirements of Europe a sharp change upward was reported this week. Leading art metal concerns announced an increase in price of ten per cent. by reduction of current discounts effective as of April 5. Sheet brass, which on December 29 was quoted at 15¼¢ a pound, is now 17⅛c. Copper sheets are held at 20¾ cents base as against 17 a few months ago. A price of 16 cents was quoted on carload lots spot cash, immediate acceptance. Spelter used in galvanizing and zinc work is up to 11c and stuffening whereas 6 cents is normal. Prompt N. Y. is 9¾c.

Prospective builders are being advised by architects to proceed with their spring operations at the earliest possible moments. The whole building material market, somewhat stiffer and, in spots, higher than thirty days ago, is on the eve of an important upturn, not so much because of demand, but because of limited factory and mill supplies. Scarcity of labor upon the close of the war, when man divested Europe calls upon her naturalized American sons to return to save homesteads and industries, there will be a dearth of cheap labor in this country and prices may ascend to boundaries not now considered possible. It will take a year to replenish mill supplies, save only that of common brick in the Hudson Valley, and with a generous spring demand sources of supply will be sure to have difficulty in keeping prices down to ordinary consumers' reach.

Hudson common brick is the only case where there is an over-supply. Canadian spruce is hard to get. Southern lumber and hardwoods are scarce at mills. One crushing plant at Rockland lake has been increased in capacity one-third. An up-Hudson cement plant is having its capacity raised from 800 to 2,000 barrels a day. The Bethlehem Steel Company plans outside mills to relieve its Pennsylvania plant. Tile manufacturers and ceramic producers in general are putting their equipment on an efficiency basis; all indicating that the building material market is on the eve of a great era of trade development and expansion.

T. A. B. HALL TO BE ENLARGED

Bids Now Being Secured for a Two Story Addition, 20x110 Feet.

Plans have been completed by St. Mary's T. A. B. Society for a large addition to T. A. B. Hall on West Fourth street. It will be located on the west side of the present building and will fill a large felt want. The contract will be awarded during the next few weeks as bids for the work are now being received.

According to the architectural drawings, the addition will be two stories in height and have dimensions of 20 by 110 feet. The lower floor will be given over to two bowling alleys, an acquisition the T. A. B. members have dreamed of for years. Many of them are expert pinners and they have been among the hardest workers to secure the improvement.

The upper floors of the new part will include a library and reading room, pool room and a fully equipped kitchen for the preparation of refreshments at social gatherings. When the new part is ready for occupancy, the T. A. B. Society will have one of the most complete and up-to-date organizations in the city. The present hall has only recently been completely made over inside. Contractor M. D. O'Keefe replaced the plaster walls with a modern panel effect and an inside chimney was removed. Contractor Andrew McCarthy completed the change by decorating the old and new work with an attractive scheme of painting.

IN THE SUBURBS

DUNELLEN.

On Monday, Henry Wrage, the local real estate operator, sold the house completed by him some time ago and located at the punction of Center street and Fairview avenue to Benjamin Thorn, of New York. The new owner will take possession at an early date. Mr. and Mrs. Thorn formerly lived in Dunellen, their home having been in the Rutherford house on Prospect avenue. They moved away about three years ago.

John Fedderman, the real estate man, has taken new quarters, moving over to North avenue again and taking offices with H. Clifford Smith, of the Smith Auto Express in the store of the Dunellen Shoe Repairing Company. Since moving out of the First National Bank building he had been carrying on his business at his home.

Contractor Alberne H. Burdick is contemplating the erection of another new house at an early date.

A garage for Clarence T. Voorhees is being built on his Lincoln avenue property by the Apgar Construction Company.

Minor improvements in the line of interior decorating are being made this week at the house on Columbia street owned by Assessor John H. L. Peters and occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Leland.

Minor repairs in the carpentering line are being made by Lewis Schneider around the house on Lincoln avenue owned by Stanley Day, of New Market.

The new Treichler house under course of construction by Contractor Alberne H. Burdick is about finished, the only work remaining to do in the carpentering line being the placing of doors and a few general finishing touches.

A contract has been awarded to a Newark party to repair the upper part of the steeple of the Presbyterian church and straighten up the weather vane, which has been very much on the bias for some months and is steadily taking on a more acute slant.

MIDDLESEX BORO.

A real estate transaction was put through last Thursday by real estate operator Henry Wrage, when he sold the former A. Bochman house in Middlesex borough to the J. D. Loizeaux Lumber Company, of Plainfield.

The Chevanney property at Prospect place has been purchased by Harry S. Johnson, of South Bound Brook, who expects to take possession about April 1.

Gebhard B. Strauber has purchased of Runyon Field the bungalow now being erected on Shephard avenue at Beechwood Heights.

Contractor Charles Wrage has secured the contract for erecting a bungalow at Lincoln for a New York party.

NEW MARKET.

A summer boarding house on quite a large scale is to be run this year at the large house of M. Eiseman near the village. Mr. Eiseman has leased the property to B. Greenwald, of New York, an experienced restauranteur and hotel man, who hopes to make the Eiseman place a popular drawing card for this section. Until recently Mr. Greenwald has conducted a restaurant under the R. G. Dunn building, 312 Broadway, but he sold out his enterprise there a short time ago. He is expected out to the village this week to look the Eiseman place over and do the first work of getting it ready.

Rumor has it that negotiations are afoot for the sale of yet another tract of land in this immediate vicinity for a factory site. The John Fedderman agency is reported to be carrying on the deal.

REALTY TRANSFERS

The following realty transfers from the surrounding towns have been recorded at the Middlesex county seat at New Brunswick during the course of the past week:

Joseph V. D. Field to Runyon Field, four lots at Beechwood Heights, Middlesex Borough, $1,200.

Lewis T. Churchill to J. Arthur Bogardus, five lots south side of Fourth street, Dunellen. Same transferred to Emily G. Churchill by the purchaser.

Joseph V. D. Field and wife have transferred to Runyon Field four lots at Beechwood Heights, borough of Middlesex, for $1,200.

J. L. Hatch to Charles Harwood, two lots in Piscataway township, Park Avenue Estates.

J. Leffingwell Hatch and wife have transferred to Charles Harwood, property on Park Avenue Estates in Piscataway township.

NEW CHAPEL BUILDING.

Springfield, April 10.—At the congregational meeting of the Presbyterian church held recently, Dr. Edward W. Frost reported that $2,200 had been secured toward the enlargement and improvement of the chapel. The contract for the work was awarded to John Ludwig, of Elizabeth, for $2,385, he being the lowest of several bidders.

SELLS PISCATAWAY PROPERTY.

At his office on Wednesday afternoon Sheriff Houghton sold a property in Chancery of New Jersey between the Provident Building and Loan Association of New Brunswick complainant, and William A. Gordon, defendant. The property is located in Piscataway township and was sold to John Reng for $5,100. The decree and costs were $5,038.92.

The Week's Work In Brief

Complete the work of setting out trees, shrubs and hardy vines.

Sow beets, carrots, endive and kohlrabi outdoors where they are to grow.

Plant outdoors in their permanent quarters the lettuce and cabbage seedlings grown in flats indoors. Sow spinach for a succession crop.

Harden off seedlings of flowers and vegetables growing indoors.

TOO much emphasis cannot be laid on the importance of early planting. Amateurs with little experience are inclined to delay sowing seed in the open ground until May. But the fact should be borne in mind that the hardier varieties of vegetables, such as beets, cabbage, lettuce, onions, parsley, parsnips, peas, radishes, spinach and turnip, thrive best when they are planted as early as the soil is warm and dry enough to work. This applies also to the hardier varieties of flowers and particularly to young plants of the herbaceous perennial group. And, of course, it is needless to say, to trees, shrubs and hardy vines.

Among the trees, the magnolias, including the beautiful tulip tree, and the birches demand spring planting. When setting these out, or any trees, shrubs or vines, bear in mind the three essentials for success in transplanting—ample, roomy holes to receive the roots without the slightest crowding, plenty of moisture and close contact between soil and root.

The dwarf-growing flowering trees form a desirable and admirable group for the ornamental planting of the home grounds and one, unfortunately, too often overlooked. We are all too prone to plant what we see others plant. Some of the best trees, too, for the same purpose are found among the weeping varieties. Both tend to give the impression quickly of permanency and age. Included in the two divisions are the cerasus, or flowering cherry, particularly the Japanese weeping cherry; the cercis, or red bud; the cornus, or dogwood, and especially the weeping cornus Florida pendula; the crataegus in variety; the cytisus or laburnum, upright or weeping; the weeping Camperdown elm, willow, mountain ash, beech, ash and gleditschia; the koelreuteria; the flowering crabs and peaches and, of course, the magnolias. Set all of these at the same depth at which they stood in the nursery row—which can generally be determined by the color line visible at the base of the stem or trunk.

Seed of beets should be sown thinly, one-inch deep, in drills one foot apart. Time will be gained by soaking the seed over night in water. Sow carrot seed one-inch deep in drills 12 to 18 inches apart, according to variety. Thin both the first time to three inches apart; later to six inches. Eat those removed in the process of the second thinning. Plant the early varieties. Endive should be sown in shallow drills, one-fourth inch deep, in rows 18 inches apart. Thin finally to 12 inches apart in the rows. The curled leaved varieties are the tenderest. Sow kohlrabi thinly in drills 18 inches apart and one-inch deep. Thin to eight or ten inches apart in the rows.

As the days and nights grow warmer, expose the seedlings growing in flats indoors more and more daily to the outside air. They can go into coldframes instead if these desirable garden adjuncts are in the grower's possession—as, it might be added, they ought to be. The exposure, increasing from day to day, "hardens off" the little plants and renders them vigorous and ready for transplanting outdoors when the time comes. Be careful, however, to guard the eggplant seedlings against a temperature below 55 degrees; shock from cold checks their growth and renders them practically worthless.

Among the flowers of hardy perennials and hardy bulbs that will be seen in bloom this month are crocus, glory-of-the-snow, snowdrop, windflower, narcissus, spring snowflake, jonquil, crown imperial, hyacinth, tulip, adonis vernalis, aquilegia, arabis, dicentra, iris verna, trillium, windflower or anemone and alyssum saxatile. Make a memorandum of those most desirable so that they can be had and planted in the fall.

Go over the cane fruits carefully and complete any pruning that remains to be done. Apply nitrate of soda to the asparagus beds at the rate of one ounce to the square yard. Give the lawn a dressing of the same strength. The nitrate of soda can be mixed with soil and so spread more evenly or it can be dissolved in water and applied in solution. Muriate of potash can be profitably applied at the same time to currants, gooseberries and raspberries at the rate of three ounces per plant; blackberries will do better with four ounces; grapes with eight. Remember to apply all fertilizers by scattering over the ground at a distance from the main stems that corresponds to the spread of the branches. The feeding roots are as far from the stem as the tips of the branches.

A FOOL AND HIS MONEY

CHAPTER XVIII.

I Traverse the Night.

THE next day I was very busy, preparing for the journey by motor to the small station down the line where I was to meet Mrs. Titus and her sons. It seemed to me that every one who knew anything whatever about the arrangements went out of his way to fill my already rattled brained head with advice.

Just before leaving the castle for the ferry trip across the river that evening I was considerably surprised to have at least a dozen brand new trunks delivered at my landing stage. It is needless to say that they turned out to be the property of Mrs. Titus, expressed by grande vitesse from some vague city in the north of Germany. They all bore the name "Smart, U. S. A.," painted in large white letters on each end, and I was given to understand that they belonged to my own dear mother, who at that moment, I am convinced, was sitting down to luncheon in the Adirondacks, provided her habits were as regular as I remembered them to be.

I set forth with Britton at 9 o'clock in a drizzling rain. At half past 11 o'clock we were skidding over the cobblestones of the darkest streets I have ever known, careening like a drunken sailor, but not half as surely, headed for the Staatsbahnhof, to which we had been directed by an object in a raincoat who must have been a policeman, but who looked more like a hydrant. It was pouring pitchforks.

"Britton," said I wearily, "have you ever seen anything like it?"

"Once before, sir," said he. "Niagara falls, sir."

At half past 12 the train from Munich drew up at the station, panted awhile in evident disdain and then moved on.

A single passenger alighted—a man with a bass viol. There was no sign of the Tituses!

We made a careful and extensive search of the station, the platform and even the surrounding neighborhood, but it was quite evident that they had not left the train. Here was a pretty pass! Britton, however, had the rather preposterous idea that there might be another train a little later on. It did not seem at all likely, but we made inquiries of the station agent. To my surprise—and to Britton's infernal British delight—there was a fast train, with connections from the north, arriving in half an hour. It was, however, late, owing to the storm.

Just ten minutes before 3 the obliging guard came in and roused us from a mild sleep.

"The train is coming, mein herr."

"Thank goodness!"

"But I neglected to mention that it is an express and never stops here."

My right hand was still in a bandage, but it was so nearly healed that I could have used it without discomfort—note my ability to drive a motorcar—and it was with the greatest difficulty that I restrained a mad impulse to strike that guard full upon the nose, from which the raindrops coursed in an interrupted descent from the visor of his cap.

The shrill, childish whistle of the locomotive reached us at that instant. A look of wonder sprang into the eyes of the guard.

"It—It is going to stop, mein herr!" he cried. "It has never stopped before!" He rushed out upon the platform in a great state of agitation, and we trailed along behind him, even more excited than he.

A conductor stepped down from the last coach but one and prepared to assist a passenger to alight. I hastened up to him.

"Permit me," I said, elbowing him aside.

A portly lady squeezed through the vestibule and felt her way carefully down the steps. Behind her was a smallish, bewhiskered man, trying to raise an umbrella inside the narrow corridor, a perfectly impossible feat.

She came down into my arms with the limpness of one who is accustomed to such attentions, and then wheedled instantly upon the futile individual on the steps above.

"Quick! My hat! Heaven preserve us, how it rains!" she cried in a deep, wheezy voice and—in German.

"Moth"— I began insinuatingly, but the sacred word died unfinished on my lips. The next instant I was scurrying down the platform to where I saw Britton standing.

"Have you seen them?" I shouted wildly.

"No, sir. Not a sign, sir. Ah, see!"

He pointed excitedly down the platform.

"No!" I rasped out. "By no possible stretch of the imagination can that be Mrs. Titus. Come, we must ask the conductor. That woman? Good Lord, Britton, she waddles!"

The large lady and the smallish man passed us on the way to shelter, the latter holding an umbrella over her hat with one hand and lugging a heavy hamper in the other. They were both exclaiming in German. The station guard and the conductor were bowing and scraping in their wake, both carrying boxes and bundles.

No one else had descended from the train. I grabbed the conductor by the arm.

"Any one else getting off here?" I demanded in English and at once repeated it in German.

He shook himself loose, dropped the bags in the shelter of the station house, doffed his cap to the imperious backs of his late passengers, and scuttled back to the car. A moment later the train was under way.

"Can you not see for yourself?" he shouted from the steps as he passed me by.

Once more I swooped down upon the guard. He was stuffing the large German lady into a small, lopsided carriage, the driver of which was taking off his cap and putting it on again after the manner of a mechanical toy.

"Go away," hissed the guard angrily. "This is the mayor and the mayoress. Stand aside! Can't you see?"

"When does the next train get in?" I asked for the third time. He was still bowing after the departing hack.

"Ach, Gott!" he gasped. Collecting his thoughts, he said: "There is no train until 9 o'clock in the morning. Nine, mein herr."

"Ach, Gott!" groaned I. "Are you sure?"

"Jah! You can go home now and go to bed, sir. There will be no train until 9, and I will not be on duty then. Good night."

"I dare say we'd better be starting 'ome, sir," said Britton timidly. "Something 'as gone wrong with the plans, I fear. They did not come, sir."

"Do you think I am blind?" I roared.

"Not at all, sir," he said in haste, taking a step or two backward.

By the time we succeeded in starting the engine after cranking for nearly half an hour I was so consumed by wrath over the scurvy trick Mrs. Titus had played upon us that I swore she should not enter my castle if I could prevent it. Moreover, I would take fiendish delight in dumping her confounded luggage into the Danube. We then had trouble with the lamps. At last we were off, Britton at the wheel. I shall not describe that diabolical trip home. It is only necessary to say that we first lost our way and went ten or twelve kilometers in the wrong direction; then we had a blowout and no quick detachable rim. Subsequently something went wrong with the mud caked machinery, and my unfortunate valet had to lie on his back in a puddle for half an hour. Eventually we sneaked into the garage with our trembling car and quarreled manfully with the men who had to wash her.

"Good heavens, Britton!" I exclaimed suddenly.

He looked at me in astonishment. I admit that the ejaculation must have sounded weak and effeminate to him after what had gone before.

"What is it, sir?" he asked, at once resuming his status as a servant after a splendid hiatus of five hours or more in which he had enjoyed all of the by-products of equality.

"Poopendyke!" I exclaimed, aghast. "I have just thought of him. The poor devil has been waiting for us three miles up the river since midnight! What do you think of that!"

"No such luck, sir," said he grumpily.

"Luck! You heartless rascal! What do you mean by that?"

"I beg pardon, sir. I mean to say he could sit in the boat'ouse and twiddle 'is thumbs at the elements, sir. Trust Mr. Poopendyke to keep out of the rain."

"In any event he is still waiting there for us, wet or dry, he and the two big Schmicks." I took a moment for thought. "We must telephone to the castle and have Hawkes send Conrad out with word to them." I looked at my watch. It was twenty minutes past 7. "I suppose no one in the castle went to bed last night. Good Lord! What a scene for a farce!"

We retraced our steps to the garage, where Britton went to the telephone. I stood in the doorway of the building staring gloomily, hollow eyed at the—well, at nothing, now that I stop to think of it. The manager of the place, an amiable, jocund descendant of Lazarus, approached me.

"Quite a storm last night, Mr. Schmarck," he said, rubbing his hands on an oil rag. I gruffly agreed with him in a monosyllable. "But it is lovely today, sir. Heavenly, sir."

"Heavenly?" I gasped.

"Ah, but look at the glorious sun!" he cried, waving the oil rag in all directions at once.

The sun! Upon my word, the sun was shining fiercely. I hadn't noticed it before.

"Well, I'm—dashed!" I said, with a silly grin.

"The moon will shine tonight, Mr. Schmarck"— he began insinuatingly.

"Smart, if you please!" I snapped.

"Ah," he sighed, rolling his eyes, "it is fine to be in love."

A full minute passed before I grasped the meaning of that soft answer, and then it was too late. He had gone about his business without waiting to see whether my wrath had been turned away. I had been joy riding!

The excitement in Britton's usually imperturbable countenance as he came running up to me from the telephone closet prepared me in a way for the startling news that was to come.

"Has anything serious happened?" I cried, my heart sinking a little lower.

"I had Mr. Poopendyke himself on the wire, sir. What do you think, sir?"

A premonition! "She—she has arrived?" I demanded dully.

He nodded. "She 'as, sir. Mrs.—your mother, sir, is in your midst." The proximity of the inquisitive manager explains this extraordinary remark on the part of my valet. We both glared at the manager, and he had the delicacy to move away. "She arrived by a special train at 12 lawst night, sir."

I was speechless. The brilliant sunshine seemed to be turning into somber night before my eyes. Everything was going black.

"She's asleep, he says, and doesn't want to be disturbed till noon, so he says he can't say anything more just now over the telephone because he's afraid of waking 'er." (Britton drops them when excited.)

"He doesn't have to shout so loud that he can be heard on the top floor," said I, still a trifle dazed.

"She 'appens to be sleeping in your bed, sir, he says."

"In my bed? Good heavens, Britton, what's to become of me?"

"Don't take it so 'ard, sir," he made haste to say. "Blatchford 'as fixed a place for you on the couch in your study, sir. It's all very snug, sir."

"But, Britton," I said in horror, "suppose that I should have come home last night. Don't you see?"

"I daresay she 'ad the door locked, sir," he said.

"By special train," I mumbled. A light broke in upon my reviving intellect. "Why, it was the train that went through at a mile a minute while we were in the coffee house. No wonder we didn't meet her!"

"I shudder to think of wot would 'ave 'appened if we had, sir," said he, meaning no doubt to placate me. "Mr. Poopendyke says the countess 'as been up all night worrying about you, sir. She has been distracted. She wanted 'im to go out and search for you at 4 o'clock this morning, but he says he assured 'er you'd turn up all right. He says Mrs.—the elderly lady, begging your pardon, sir—thought she was doing for the best when she took a special. She wanted to save us all the trouble she could. He says she was very much distressed by our failure to 'ave some one meet her with a launch when she got here last night, sir. As it was, she didn't reach the castle until nearly 1, and she looked like a drowned rat when she got there, being hex—exposed to a beastly rainstorm. See wot I mean? She went to bed in a dreadful state, he says, but he thinks she'll be more pleasant before the day is over."

"She 'appens to be sleeping in your bed, sir, he says."

I burst into a fit of laughter. "Hurray!" I shouted exultantly. "Well, by Jove, I don't feel half as bad as I did five minutes ago. Come, let us be off."

We started briskly down the street. My spirits were beginning to rebound. Poopendyke had said that she worried all night about me. She had been distracted! Poor little woman! Still I was glad to know that she had the grace to sit up and worry instead of going to sleep as she might have done. I was just mean enough to be happy over it.

Poopendyke met us on the town side of the river. He seemed a trifle haggard, I thought. He was not slow, on the other hand, to announce in horror struck tones that I looked like a ghost.

"You must get those wet clothes off at once, Mr. Smart, and go to bed with a hot water bottle and ten grains of quinine. You'll be very ill if you don't. Put a lot more elbow grease into those oars, Max. Get a move on you. Do you want Mr. Smart to die of pneumonia?"

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

A fierce wind had blown for two days and no window or door was tight enough to keep out the sand it carried. The dust lay in a gray pall over every article of furniture, and was piled in little heaps in the corners of the window sills and the air was like a breath of a furnace, scorching whatever it touched.

Dick came in and wiped the sand from his lashes before opening his eyes. This wind was peculiarly trying to the nerves.

"I really thought of staying at the office and going without my dinner," he remarked wearily as he washed the dust from his face and hands.

"One would starve to death if he waited for decent weather." Nell also had not been able to escape the nervousness caused by the wind.

"Such remarks don't help matters," said Dick crossly. "You are constantly knocking the country."

"Indeed!" Scornful surprise was in her tone. "Who was it that reported yesterday that the dust storms had injured the wheat crop by covering it up or blowing it out? And, pray, what tempted you to stay at the office if you are so fond of the weather?"

"Sarcasm doesn't help, Nell. My suggestion was that bad things are made more unbearable by harping on them."

"Is mentioning them harping on them?" snapped Nell.

"Yes, if you mention them too often. Let's both stop talking and quiet down; one decent wind is all I can stand at a time."

Nell hurried the dinner on the table. She had made everything look as fresh and cool as possible, but the flowers in the vase had a pathetic droop, and the butter seemed not to notice the presence of the ice and spread itself out in a thin sheet on the plate.

Dick drank the cool lemonade feverishly and ate a little of the salad. Nell touched nothing and sat in a wilted little heap on her chair.

"If you will excuse me I will go and lie down," she said at last.

Dick made no response but thought, "It's a pity Nell gives up so easily. I wonder if she thinks it is easy for me to keep going and furnish all the cheer there is." He finished his dinner and dropped down on the lounge to rest. Through the low window he saw Miss Rudolph struggling with an umbrella with which she was trying to keep the sand out of her eyes. He rose and went to the bedroom.

"I am going, Nell," he said, giving her a perfunctory little peck. "I hope you will feel better soon," and he hurried away.

Nell really was faint and ill and his utter indifference to her comfort cut her to the heart.

"I suppose he has hurried to walk with that girl," she thought bitterly, and went to the window in time to see Miss Rudolph clinging to Dick's arm while he held the umbrella over them. Then she crept back on the bed and sobbed herself to sleep.

Household Hints

UP-TO-DATE RECIPES

Baked Pork Sausage—Place the rounds of sausage in shallow baking dish, pour over them a little stewed tomato, season to suit and bake until brown.

Mock Roast Chicken—Rub two pounds cooked beans through sieve, season to taste and mix in two ounces melted butter. Spread half the mixture on floured board in an oblong; spread on this an onion stuffing and cover with the rest of beans. Mold into shape of fowl. Brush with beaten egg. Put three tablespoons butter into a pan and, when very hot, place "chicken" in it and bake, basting frequently for an hour. When "chicken" is done, make a gravy by adding half ounce flour to the fat in which beans were cooked and boil five minutes. Season and strain. This is delicious and inexpensive. A very good Lenten dish.

Spinach Salad (nice for this time of the year)—One peck spinach, one head lettuce, two hard-boiled eggs, one-half teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon pepper. Cook spinach in water until tender. Drain and chop spinach very fine, add chopped white of egg and seasoning. Slice other egg, place in bottom of mold, fill with spinach and let cool. Serve on lettuce leaf with mayonnaise dressing.

Apple Salad—Make dressing of one egg, three rounding tablespoons flour, 1¼ cups water, one-fourth cup vinegar, one-fourth teaspoon celery-seed and pinch of salt. Mix all well. Put lump of butter size of walnut in frying pan, heat all above mixture and cook until thick, then chill. Half gallon finely chopped apples, one cup walnut meats, one cup cream, one cup sugar, then add above mixture and stir well.

Quick Coffee Cake Rings—Cream one-fourth cup butter, three-fourths cup sugar, one egg. Add one cup milk, 2½ cups flour sifted with two teaspoons baking powder. Stir well, add raisins, spread in rings around edges of two pie tins. Bake in moderate oven, removing (after crust begins to form) long enough to spread with sugar and cinnamon.

Cherry Mousse—Soak one tablespoon gelatin in three tablespoons cold water five minutes, then add one-fourth cup boiling water. As soon as this gelatin is dissolved add 1½ cups dark red canned cherries which have been stoned and cut in half, with half cup of cherry juice which has been strained from them. When it begins to thicken add whites of two eggs beaten stiff and a few grains of salt. Turn into mold that has been dipped in ice cold water. When ready to serve remove from mold and surround with whipped cream sweetened and flavored with vanilla.

Tunny Fish Savory—Tunny fish, chopped capers and chopped parsley. Cut fish into thin slices and chill them. Let slices overlap each other on serving dish. Garnish with alternate heaps of chopped capers (chopped sweet pickles may be used in place of capers) and parsley. Pass olive oil and vinegar with the fish when serving.

Cerole Shrimps—Two tablespoons butter, one teaspoon onion juice or grated onion, 1½ tablespoons flour, 1½ cups stewed strained tomatoes, one bay leaf, salt and pepper, one can shrimps. Melt butter, add onion juice and flour; stir until smooth; then add seasoning, tomatoes and bay leaf; stir constantly until boiling. Pick over shrimps and heat them in the sauce. Serve plain or with boiled rice.

FOR THE BABY

To make children's bibs, take white linen toweling about sixteen inches wide—the kind with a red stripe down the side. Take child's waist or yoke patterns and shape the neck. Hem neck and bottom and sew tape on to tie around neck. One yard will make two long or three short ones; they cover the dress nicely and are so easily made and ironed.

An electric flashlight kept under the pillow is convenient for the mother of young children who have to be watched at night for fear they will get uncovered.

When mother hasn't anything convenient for baby to sleep in, for the porch, see if you can't find a short-waist box or trunk you are not using. Line it with a soft comfort; put in a thick pad, a hot water bottle; lay baby in, cover up warm and "comfy," set out on porch. Be careful to fasten lid back firmly. Arrange according to wind. In this way baby gets the fresh air and is not exposed to the wind.

Animal Jingles FOR LITTLE FOLKS

AUNT CRINY SAYS

The Envious Eel.

One day an envious Eel remarked, "I wish that I had been Created like the Tiger with a lovely striped skin.

"It isn't fair that some should have such lovely coats," said he,
"While others only have the plain black shiny kind, like me."

Just then his playmates said to him, "Come, let's play hide and seek,"
But this young Eel felt so abused he didn't want to speak.

His playmates gathered round him and said, "What's all this fuss?"
"Well," said the Eel, "if you must know, I'm very envious."

But when he'd told the reason they said, "You silly Eel,
You certainly are foolish to feel the way you feel.

"Why, don't you know that Tigers are killed most every day Because folks want their lovely skins; how would you like that, eh?"

The Eel said, "Goodness, gracious! I really never knew
About such things; I'm glad I am an Eel, if that is true."

You see, it's just as well to be content with what you are,
For if you changed you might find out you were worse off by far.

SPRING COAT SUIT.

The youthful suit of sand colored gabardine here pictured shows the newest short coat, with its high waist line and flaring skirt. Like most fashions, these are prettiest, of course, on girlish figures, although the loose coat effect is kind to stout figures, tending to conceal a tendency to embonpoint. The revers and collar are faced with sand-colored faille, with loops and buttons covered with the same. The skirt of the coat has been pleated at the side, producing the desired flare at the bottom. Embroidery in black and brown ornaments the broad band across the front. The skirt of the suit is circular below a fitted hip-depth yoke.

ANTI-SUFFRAGE

Conducted by New Jersey Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage.

EFFECT OF WOMAN SUFFRAGE IN CITIES

Opinion it Would Be Fatal to Sound Government in Crowded Sections.

The following letter from George W. Wickersham to the New York Times presents an aspect of the suffrage question which is often ignored. Many modes of procedure are possible in small towns or sparsely settled localities which would show far different results in more closely populated communities. Any one who has ever tried enlarging photographs knows that blemishes which are almost invisible in the small picture become unsightly blotches in the enlarged copy. A small class of boys or girls can be allowed liberties which would result in the overthrow of all discipline if granted to a class of one of two hundred.

April 3, 1915.

To the Editor of N. Y. Times:

In the Times of this morning there is printed a letter which was addressed to me by C. S. Albert, of Spokane, Wash., on the subject of female suffrage. There was nothing in the letter, which I received some days ago, to indicate that it was an open letter intended for publication. I assume that it was a letter simply such as one gentleman would write to another with whom he had a slight acquaintance respecting a subject of general interest.

Inasmuch as Mr. Albert, or some one on his behalf, appears to have given his letter to the press, I hand you a copy of my reply, which I will ask you to publish. In doing so, I would like also to call attention to one passage in Mr. Albert's letter, which indicates, as it seems to me, the frame of mind of a great many men and a larger number of women toward the subject of female suffrage. Mr. Albert says:

"As a matter of fact, the women usually go to the polls with the other voting members of their families, spend perhaps ten minutes in voting, and the net result is that the family is deprived of their care and attention by reason of politics for a space of about half an hour in two years."

It is because this conception of the obligation imposed by the franchise is very different from mine that I was opposed to extending the franchise to women. The right to vote implies an obligation to do so many more things in the State that can be properly attended to by an expenditure of half an hour every two years that this admission of the point of view of an educated lawyer and his wife in a suffrage State furnishes a powerful argument against the adoption of female suffrage in one of our older and more populous communities.

GEORGE W. WICKERSHAM.

My letter is as follows:

"April 1, 1915.

"Charles S. Albert, Esq.,
"Spokane, Wash.:

"My Dear Sir:

"I have your favor of the 26th inst.

"The press dispatch did not quote me quite accurately on the subject of women voting, although the passage you quote is in itself quite accurate. I was talking of the real significance of the ballot as not being a detached privilege in itself, but as indicative of full citizenship, which implied obligations of various kinds, such as service on juries, willingness to perform military service when required, etc., and then I stated that, in my opinion, the effect of injecting women into those other functions was bound to be injurious upon society as a whole and to result in the destruction of the family organization as it had been known in the past. I pointed out, too, that at present a great many women were inclined to regard the subject as involving merely the dropping of a ballot in the box taking a short time, and not as implying a responsibility which could not be discharged in so brief a time, and that, as a matter of fact, a woman could not fitly discharge all those duties of citizenship unless she gave to them an amount of time inconsistent with the performance of her home duties. This aspect of it is particularly acute in large cities.

"I am interested in what you say of your own experience and of the change your views have undergone in the actual experience which you have had in Washington, although when you went there you had a different idea, and it is interesting and challenges attention when a man of your intelligent and position testifies to the impression made upon him of a three years' residence in the State where women do exercise the right of suffrage; but, with entire deference to your own experience, I do not thing it is conclusive on the question. I think the result of the experiment cannot be determined until it has run for at least a generation. Colorado is a State in which women have voted for upward of twenty years."

"BABY SAVING SHOW" TO BE OPENED MORNINGS

Those in charge of the "Baby Saving Show," in the Stirling building, on Park avenue, have been much gratified by the large attendance, which continues to be close to 400 people daily. With a view to extending the services of the show to an even larger number of people, the exhibit will be open today and tomorrow from 9.30 a. m. to 10 p. m., as it is thought that many people would attend during the morning who have been unable to come in the afternoon or evening.

THE PEARLS OF BABYHOOD

The large corp of demonstrators has been kept busy. There is usually one group on duty from 2 to 6 p. m. and a second group from 7:30 to 10 p. m. Since the attendance is very small during the dinner hour it has been customary to close it at that time.

OUR CITIZEN'S DEMAND

Fully Complied With—A Plainfield Resident Furnished It.

There are few items which appear in this paper more important to Plainfield people than the statement published below. In the first place, it is from a citizen of Plainfield, and can be thoroughly relied upon. In the second place, it indisputably proves that Doan's Kidney Pills do their work thoroughly and not temporarily. Read this carefully:

Mrs. S. Driscoll, 540 West Front street, Plainfield, says: "I had a dull pain across the small of my back and in my sides that clung to me constantly, and any hard work made me worse. I was subject to headaches and dizzy spells, especially when stooping or lifting, and I felt weak and run down. I tried plasters and other medicines, but nothing helped me until I procured Doan's Kidney Pill's at Randolph's Drug Store. They made a lasting cure."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Driscoll had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.—Adv.

"The hand that rocks the cradle rules the world."

THE widow who does not have to worry about the future, whose little cares and troubles have been provided for by life insurance, has more time to give to her children than the woman who has to provide for the support of these children as well as herself.

The husband and father who makes this burden light will live greenest in the memory of his loved ones.

Everybody is invited to visit the Prudential Exhibit on Life Insurance and Public Welfare, Palace of Mines and Metallurgy, Panama-Pacific Exposition, San Francisco.

A MARGIN OF SAFETY

An engineer never thinks of building a bridge without allowing a sufficient margin of safety. No more can you build a successful career without a margin of "capital" safety in your business.

The average business man knows that it is not too little BUSINESS, but rather too little CAPITAL with which to handle his growing business, that gives him the most concern.

Why not, therefore, remedy this weakness by laying aside monthly, through the medium of our Installment Bond plan, say $25. In 38 months you will have acquired $1,000 additional capital to be drawn upon as your needs require.

Allow us to explain the details.

THERE ARE TWO KINDS OF ASSUREDS.

The kind that take out insurance when the spirit moves them, without considering their policy, the company its in, or the agent. And the other kind that realize the necessity and importance of insurance, who read over their policy and make sure it covers them properly, satisfy themselves that the company is sound and represented by a reliable agent.

The first kind is a hit-or-miss affair, while the other one is bound to obtain a satisfactory settlement when a loss occurs.

PASTOR RESIGNS AFTER 31 YEARS

Rev. Charles Lyman Goodrich's Resignation Read at Service Yesterday.

ACTION BIG SURPRISE

Ill Health and Need of a Change Given as Reason—Will Be Acted on Wednesday Night—Came Here From College.

Following a pastorate of thirty-one years at the Congregational church, the Rev. Charles Lyman Goodrich read his resignation to the congregation at the morning service yesterday. Ill health and the need for a change on the part of both pastor and parishioners are assigned as causes for the action and the resignation will be acted upon at the annual meeting of the church Wednesday night.

Sufficient evidence of the esteem in which the pastor is held by the congregation was given yesterday morning during the reading of the resignation by Mr. Goodrich. On the faces of parishioners were written surprise and regret and many left the edifice in tears. During his connection with the church he has endeared himself to everyone; he has created new interest and developed new phases of work; and during the thirty-one years he has been a faithful and efficient pastor for the church.

One of the greatest monuments to be left behind him as an example of his achievements is the new parish house, but this is only one of his man accomplishments. Mr. Goodrich's resignation is as follows:

"In March, 1884, the church extended to me, then a student at Yale Divinity School, a unanimous call to become its pastor. On the Sunday following Easter in that year I began my ministry here. From 1884 to 1915 would seem a sufficiently long time for one pastorate to continue. After so long a period, it would seem that any church would need a change of pastors, and any pastor a change of work. For three years the thought that a change was advisable has been with me, and the thought has now become an absolute conviction. I am sure that the best interests of the church and my own health and future usefulness require that I should withdraw from this pastorate. The long-continued strain of the same tasks and problems has worn upon my nervous system, so that I have not been of as much service to you of late as formerly. I should wholly break down if I attempted to continue.

"And the church needs another minister. A new voice, a fresh personality, different messages and methods, the novelty and zest of a new start will greatly quicken and enspirit you and bring about greater results.

"Moreover the condition of the church is such now that the pastor can retire without fear of any particular disturbance of the church life. You are well organized. The several organizations are doing excellent work and quite capable of doing so independently of the pastor's presence or aid. You are compactly welded together and attached to the church. You have just put in a large sum of money here as a permanent investment. You are happy in the new, beautiful and commodious rooms. You are ready for a more enjoyable and more useful future, in which greater results of good will be secured. The past year has been hinting at the progress to which you may look forward. The Sunday school has been having a larger average attendance. It is an unusually good school. The Men's Club has been manifesting a very vigorous determination to be of more real service.

"The Woman's Association is worthy of all praise, over $1,100 having passed through its treasurer's hands last year. Its plans, its gatherings, its policy, its methods, and its personnel combine to make it a truly remarkable Woman's Association. I doubt if its superior exists anywhere. Surely there can none be found to equal it in a church of this size.

"The Young Woman's Missionary Society has stepped up on to a higher plane of purpose and earnestness.

"The Christian Endeavor Society is an interesting group of young people whose numbers surprise older ones who drop in at the Sunday night meetings.

"More strangers have been appearing at our services than for some years past. There have been seventeen people ready to unite with the church at the last three communions, and six more have already expressed their intention to join in May. Many have felt a deepening of spiritual earnestness the past six months. There is a hopeful outlook for you.

"TAPS" SOUNDED FOR AGED VETERAN

William L. Bowman, Who Served Through Civil War, Called to His Reward.

Following on illness of several months with a complication of troubles due to the infirmities of age, William L. Bowman, for many years a well known resident of Plainfield, died early this morning at his home, 319 West Front street. He was a native of Richmond, Northampton county, Pa., where he was born in 1831. He made his home in Portland, Pa., for many years, where he followed his trade as a cigar maker and cigar dealer, and where he was prominent for a long time as a justice of the peace. He removed to Plainfield in 1880, since which time he has led a retired life.

At the outbreak of the Civil War Mr. Bowman enlisted as private in Company B, Fifty-first Regiment, Pa. N. G., and after serving with distinction until his enlistment expired, reentered the service as a member of the 153d Regiment, Pa. N. G. He served through many of the heaviest engagements and was given a discharge and special recommendation on July 27, 1865.

Mr. Bowman is survived by his wife and two sons, Edward Bowman, of West Second street, and John Bowman, of West Front street, both of whom are widely known. The funeral will be held at the late home Wednesday afternoon, and will be conducted by Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson. Full military honors will be accorded by Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., of which Mr. Bowman was a member. Burial will be in Hillside cemetery, the following grandsons acting as pallbearers: Frank Sheppard, Joseph Morecraft, Frank Morecraft and Morris McGrath.

DISCUSSES HISTORY OF THE GERMAN RACE

Prof. F. W. Hock Gives Interesting Talk at German Reformed Church.

Rev. Dr. F. W. Hock, of Newark, spoke in German at the German Lutheran church last night before a small congregation, on account of the weather conditions, but he delivered an interesting talk in a most able manner. He touched on the early history of the race, their trials which were met and surmounted often leaving the land in waste but always through all it took a new step forward the gainer in the end.

"The word 'forward,'" he said, has in itself a great lesson for those of the German race here who through strictly attending to their personal affairs and through attention to their daily task have allowed themselves to be put aside in matters here politically. The Prussian militarism that must be crushed has always proven itself unselfish, and with all its powers has stood by the weaker.

"What has Germany done that at this time she is so unjustly handled, and her aims so grossly misinterpreted? The German character has been built up by honest toil and has flourished under the present Kaiser to be a country of power and wealth not only in science and art, but commercially.

"Can Belgium, France, Russia or England, who is always adding on here and there show as clean a record. One needs but to mention the word 'Congo' or the persecution of the Jews in Russia. The female employment conditions in the mines of Belgium, which has already been bettered by the 'barbarians' is just another sign of 'German culture.'"

OVER A DOLL CARRIAGE.

Alleging that Anna Woods, of Washington avenue, stole a dolls' carriage belonging to her, Elizabeth Dorn, of Elm place, appeared as complainant in the borough police court before Justice Snape this morning. The justice settled the controversy by ordering the return of the carriage to the complainant.

ANNOUNCE ENGAGEMENT.

Mr. and Mrs. William Carson, of Jackson avenue, this city, announce the engagement of their niece, Miss Rose Carson, to John Hubert Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Smith, of West Fifth street. The wedding will take place in September.

RASORES MEETING.

The Rasores will meet tomorrow morning with Mrs. H. G. Phillips, on Kensington avenue. The State College for Women will not be forgotten.

ESTABLISH ANOTHER DISTRIBUTING STATION

Branch of Public Library Opened Today at the Y. W. C. A.

Believing in the co-ordination of forces, the Public Library is utilizing the Y. W. C. A. in establishing a distributing station for the free circulation of books to the public on Mondays from 11 to 12:30 a. m., Wednesdays, 11:45 a. m.-1:15 p. m., and Saturdays, 5 to 7 p. m. The first circulation began today and on account of its accessibility, this station should be patronized especially by many engaged in business in this city.

The circulation is, of course, limited to women and girls only, but it in no way limits the use to members of the association only, for all women and girls of Plainfield may use this station whether or not they belong to the Y. W. C. A., and those residing in the suburbs may draw books on the payment of 50 cents for three months or one dollar for six months, the regulation rate at the main building for non-residents.

This is the fourth station the library has thus established, the other three being at the Jefferson Public School, the Darrow Avenue School, and the Netherwood Reformed church building, respectively. Public libraries, generally speaking, are prone to maintain expensive branches, while the policy here is to expend less in maintenance by cooperation with existing institutions, and thereby purchasing a large number of books.

CLERK RIDING CYCLE RUNS DOWN SUSPECT

Getaway of Bike Thief Halted by John Rinehart Detailed by Higgins.

Some detective work on the part of John Rinehart, the clerk at police at headquarters, was responsible for the capture of a man Saturday afternoon believed by the police to be a "first-rate crook." Early in the afternoon a West End woman telephoned the information to police headquarters that she had seen a man acting mysteriously in the neighborhood, and that he mounted a wheel standing at the curb in front of James Andrews' home and road away. Sergeant Higgins, who was busy at headquarters when the call came, directed Rinehart to get the department motorcycle, and gave him instructions where to go.

While proceeding out Rahway road Rinehart sighted the man and the wheel, and notified Higgins at headquarters. He in turn notified the Rahway authorities, and when the cyclist reached the outskirts of the latter place he found an officer waiting for him.

The prisoner was brought to local station-house by Higgins and Chief Kiely late Saturday afternoon, and when arraigned in police headquarters this morning he gave the name of Joseph Andrews. He was accused of bicycle thievery, and held in $500 bail by Judge DeMeza to await the action of the grand jury.

Andrews has a record in this city. Two years ago he was arrested on a similar charge by Captain Flynn, and when taken to Langhorne's photograph gallery to be "mugged" he made a break for liberty. He ran through a throng on Front street and headed down Somerset street for the mountains. On the Greenbrook bridge a passerby tripped him up and Flynn took him into custody again.

In court this morning he was nattily dressed and appeared to take his apprehension as a matter of course. He was puzzled concerning his arrest, and evidently thought that he had made good an escape when arrested in Rahway.

RALPH E. HALLOCK TO WED MISS CAROLINE MARTIN

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sprague Martin, of Hillside avenue, have issued invitations to the marriage of their daughter, Miss Caroline Sprague Martin and Ralph Ellwood Hallock, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Davis Hallock, of Willow avenue, North Plainfield.

The ceremony will be performed by Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, of the Crescent Avenue church, at the home of the bride-elect's parents, Saturday afternoon, April 24, at 4 o'clock, to be followed by a reception.

MISS HYDE WILL REPRESENT ANTIS

Volunteers to Be a Model at Suffrage Meeting Tonight.

OTHER LIVING MODELS

Senator Moses E. Clapp to Be the Chief Speaker—Mayor Calkins and Dr. W. G. Saunders to Address the Assemblage.

Great interest is being taken in the suffrage mass meeting and living picture show which is to be held in the Plainfield High School Auditorium this evening.

Senator Moses E. Clapp's reputation as a lecturer, coupled with the novel idea of staging living models as cartoons is expected to draw a crowded house.

Senator Clapp is to be the guest of his old friend, David C. Smalley. Mr. and Mrs. Smalley will entertain Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton and a number of friends to meet the Senator at dinner.

Senator Moses E. Clapp.

The Senator, who has represented Minnesota for fourteen years, is giving his last speech for the New Jersey campaign in Plainfield. In addition to his activities on nearly a dozen Senate committees, he has been one of the moving spirits of the Woman Suffrage Committee of the Senate, which brought the national amendmen to the vote last Congress.

Miss Helen Hyde has volunteered to represent the Anti-Suffragists as she sees her. It is understood that Miss Hyde's picture is to be an equestrian piece. The meeting is to be opened at 8 o'clock with an introduction from Mayor Leighton Calkins. Dr. W. L. Saunders, unless unavoidably detained, will then introduce the cartoons, which are to occupy about forty minutes of the evening's proceedings. After the cartoons, Senator Clapp will be introduced by C. L. Riley, president of the Men's League for Woman Suffrage. Arrangements for the evening are in the hands of the men's league, who have for their officers in Plainfield, among others, Ernest R. Ackerman, Alex. Millar, Percy H. Stewart, G. W. V. Moy, Charles A. Selden, C. C. Wheeler, E. F. Feickert and A. B. Jones. Although the men's league has organized the meeting, the woman's league is pitching in to help.

Mrs. Allan Cowperthwaite has organized anumber of women to act as ushers. Among those serving in this capacity are Miss Hope Ivins, Miss Audrey Eaton, Mrs. E. Haliday, Mrs. Lamar VanSyckel, Mrs. Henry C. White, Miss Louise Booth, Miss May Rodman and Mrs. W. M. Powers.

At intervals music is to be supplied by Stephen H. Haff at the piano and Arthur Mosher, violin.

Contingents of Suffragists are expected from Westfield, Bound Brook, Elizabeth and other nearby towns. It is expected that Miss Lou Rogers, the cartoonist whose work is being represented, will be present. Miss Rogers is the only woman cartoonist in America.

JUDGE DEALT SOLAR PLEXUS TO FIGHTERS' POCKETBOOKS

Because one of them took a punch at Hui Lee, a Chinese laundryman, Edward Daniels and Patrick Moran this morning received a pair "$5 or twenty day" uppercuts from Judge W. G DeMeza in the city court. The men were amusing themselves in scratching the letter off the window at the laundryman's place of business at 934 West Third street when the "chink" haled them with a protest.

According to the evidence given in court this morning the two men became abusive and ended up by "clouting" the Chinaman.

TEA DANSANT WAS A GREAT SUCCESS

Many Attend Affair Given by the Pine Mountain Association.

The "The Dansant," given by the Pine Mountain Association, Saturday afternoon, at the Park Club, was a brilliant society post-Lenten affair and was a financial success from every point of view. As a result a substantial sum was realized which will be sent to the "Mountain Whites," of Pine Mountain, Kentucky. The Park Club was gayly decorated with cut flowers, palms, evergreens and tulips. Frantzen's orchestra, of New York, furnished music for the event.

The receiving and assisting committee was composed of Mrs. Josiah Browne, Mrs. Frederick G. Mead, Miss Jessie Munger, Mrs. W. H. Murray, Mrs. Richard Boardman, Mrs. F. E. DuBois, Mrs. Lamar Van Syckle, Mrs. F. V. Lawrence, Mrs. H. C. Brown and Mrs. C. W. McCutcher. Miss Elizabeth McGee and Miss Helen Joy served ice cream.

Much of the success of the affair was due to the efforts of Miss Eva G. Browne, chairman of the general committee, and her corps of assistants. They were the following: Miss Ethel Colton, Mrs. Allen Cowperthwaite, Miss Helen Harman, Miss Helen Hyde, Miss Helen Joy, Miss Lillian Kipp, Miss Margaret Mead, Miss Elizabeth McGee, Mrs. H. C. McMillen and Mrs. Daniel Runkle.

DANTON CONVICTED ON MURDER CHARGE

Verdict in Second Degree Returned Against Former Plainfielder.

W. Arlington Danton, alias "Big Ed" Farley, who during the summer of 1913 lived in this city, has been convicted of murder in the second degree in Troy, N. Y. The crime of which Danton was found guilty was committed August 15, 1914, in Troy. He was discovered by Dr. C. W. Meyers robbing the latter's dental office, which was on the second floor of a building in that city.

The dentist grappled with the intruder, and in the struggle both fell out the second story window to the pavement below. Dr. Meyers sustained a fractured skull, which eventually caused his death. Danton also was badly injured, and for several months was a patient in the hospital in Troy, being arrested after his recovery.

He was arrested last March on information obtained by Chief Kiely and Captain John J. Flynn on a charge of "kidnapping" two Summit policemen, who nabbed him as a burglary suspect. He was never tried in this county as the grand jury failed to indict him, although the Summit policemen both identified him as their assailant. Two well-connected women are said to have established such a strong alibi for Danton that the grand jury believed the Summit officers were mistaken in their identification.

While in this city Danton claimed to be a mechanical dentist, and did a mail order business. He was suspected of a number of local crimes, but so smoothly did he work that no material evidence could be found against him.

GAVE HANDKERCHIEF SHOWER FOR MISS MARY ROBLEY

Miss Edna L. French, of Craig place, the borough, gave a luncheon and handkerchief shower at her home Saturday afternoon in honor of Miss Mary Robley, a teacher in the North Plainfield High School. There were eight present and Miss Robley was the recipient of several fine pieces of linen. Miss Robley will be married on June 25 to Dr. J. S. Vanneman, at her home. Mr. Vanneman is the director of the McCosh Infirmary, of Princeton.

Those who were present are the Misses Eva Terry, of Summit, Agnes Boxold, of Bernardsville; Marian Armstrong and Bernice Attner, of East Orange; Mary Robley, Ethel Barnard, Edna French and Mrs. L. M. French and Mrs. W. L. Smalley.

INJURED AT POND'S.

Frank Silveri, whose home is at 80 Somerset street, received a broken leg and severe contusions to the back in an accident at the Pond Tool Works, Saturday afternoon. While he was chipping a casting, a pile of moldings fell upon him. He was given temporary treatment at the shop and afterward removed to Muhlenberg Hospital.

OCTEGENARIAN HOST AT BIRTHDAY PARTY

Mrs. John W. Murray, Sr., Entertains Children at Anniversary Celebration.

Entertaining her three daughters and five sons at a dinner in her home in Central avenue yesterday, Mrs. John W. Murray, Sr., fittingly celebrated her eightieth birthday anniversary, those present being Mrs. Townsend Rushmore, Mrs. Joseph W. Sandford, Mrs. Albert A. Tilney, Walter F. Murray, James E. Murray, John W. Murray, Jr., Roger F. Murray and William D. Murray. Although she has reached the fourscore mark, Mrs. Murray is unusually active and is one of the city's best known women. She is in full possession of all her faculties and maintains an active interest in several organizations with which she has affiliated herself.

The octogenarian is of Scotch decent but is a native of New York city, having moved here with Mr. Murray August 1, 1867. During her half century residence in Plainfield Mrs. Murray has gathered a wide circle of acquaintances and she was the recipient of many congratulations yesterday.

For many years the family home in Central avenue was the center for a large number of local social events and was the recognized rendezvous for young people's gatherings. Through this medium Mrs. Murray endeared herself to a host of friends and is perhaps the best known woman in the city today.

Following the dinner at noon a large gathering, including sons-in-law, daughters-in-law, grandchildren and great grandchildren, visited the home to personally congratulate Mrs. Murray.

SECOND AUTO TEST NOT SATISFACTORY

Expert Decided to Overhaul the Nott Engine Before Another Trial.

Another test of the new Nott automobile engine was held on Elm place Saturday afternoon, and like the previous one it did not prove satisfactory, and it was decided by William Emeck, the expert sent here by the company to take charge of the tests, to completely overhaul the engine for the purpose of ascertaining, if possible, what is the matter with it. David Woodhouse and Robert C. Woodhouse, representatives of the company, both attended the test Saturday, which was in charge of the Board of Fire Underwriters.

The engine was supposed to throw 700 gallons per minute with an inch and three-quarter nozzle and 300 gallons per minute on high pressure with an inch and one-eighth nozzle, but failed. The engine threw about 692 gallons on the ordinary pressure and 250 on the high.

The engine was run about two hours, but Mr. Smeck, as well as the Board of Fire Underwriters and others present recognized that the engine was not doing what it should. Fire Chief Doane, in discussing the matter today, said that the engine would not be accepted until it came up to the requirements.

T. A. B. RECEPTION AND DANCE.

St. Mary's T. A. B. Society has arranged to give an opening reception and dance in T. A. B. Hall Wednesday night, in celebration of its reoccupation after numerous improvements. The regular dancing program will be interspersed with exhibitions of the latest fancy steps by members of the Sheehan family of New York, who are experts in this line. The committee in charge of the arrangements is composed of Harry Dunn, chairman; Joseph Roche, Frank Donnelly and Frank Kreger.

BIBLE SCHOOL CONFERENCE.

Under the auspices of the Sunday-school Superintendents' Association of Plainfield a public meeting for all Sunday-school workers will be held at the First Presbyterian church this evening at 8 o'clock. The subject for consideration will be "Children's Day." The speakers will include E. W. Dunham, of Trenton, and E. W. Cooper, of South Orange. The soloist will be Miss Etta Raybert, and a selected orchestra will lead the music. All interested are invited.

BAPTIST PARISH MEETING.

The ninety-seventh annual parish meeting of the First Baptist church will be held Wednesday night, when two trustees will be elected. This will be followed by the annual church meeting when reports will be presented and one deacon will be elected. A social time with refreshments will follow.

KRONPRINZ NEEDS MANY REPAIRS

German Sea Raider May Delay Announcement of Internment Indefinitely.

3 MORE SHIPS SUNK

Wayfarer, Guernsey and President Added to List of German Submarine Victims—Little Activity Reported in Land Battles.

Newport News, Va., April 12.—Examination of the converted German cruiser Kronprinz Wilhelm, now anchored here, was begun by a navy yard board of survey today to determine whether her commander's claim that she needs repairs is well founded. It is expected they will report her in even worse condition than her sister raider, the Prinz Eitel Friedrich, now interned at Norfolk.

Capt. Thierfeldt of the Kronprinz, it is believed, is certain to follow the example of the Eitel's commander and if granted time to make repairs will do so, although there is not a doubt in any one's mind that he was ordered here to intern for the war, in order to save his vessel. If he can delay an announcement to that effect for thirty days, however, he will be able to keep the Anglo French squadron hanging about the Capes instead of watching other coast points for German shipping.

Officials here say that, although there are a number of cases of beri-beri on the Kronprinz Wilhelm, due to lack of proper food for the crew, there is no danger from that source. According to public health officials, if it is thought best, the sixty-six persons of the German raider suffering from the disease will be landed for treatment and most of them probably will be cured.

The sixty-one prisoners on board the Kronprinz, being the crews of the British steamships Tamar, destroyed March 25, and the Coleby, destroyed March 27 last, will be landed today under the immigration authorities' supervision and turned over to the British Consul.

It was beri-beri and the lack of coal and provisions that forced the Kronprinz Wilhelm to abandon her career of ship sinking and take to the quiet waters of Hampton Roads. Sickness aboard the vessel, together with other conditions that were fast becoming intolerable, did what the guns of the enemy had been unable to do for eight months.

London, April 12.—The Wayfarer, a 9,000 ton steamer of the Harrison Line, has been torpedoed and sunk. Details of the loss have not yet been made public.

The Wayfarer was the largest unit of the Harrison fleet. She sailed from Galveston, Texas, January 27, and reached Liverpool February 15. On March 15 she was taken over by the British Government and is said to have been in use as a transport when destroyed.

The British steamer Guernsey was wrecked Friday with a loss of seven lives while attempting to escape from a German submarine. The vessel hit a submerged rock while running at full speed and was dashed to pieces.

The American steamers Jos. W. Fordney and Navajo, bound for Bremen, have been arrested by British cruisers and brought into Kirkwall by prize crews. The crew of the steamer President landed to day at Brixham. Their vessel was chased for an hour by a submarine before she was forced to stop and was blown up.

Paris, April 12.—The French War Office gave out the following statement this afternoon:

"No infantry action was reported in Belgium during the day of April 11 on the tract between the Oise and Aisne and in Champagne there were cannonades on both sides. Between the Meuse and the Moselle we have organized ourselves in the positions conquered in the course of preceding conflicts. The enemy has made no counter attacks. On April 10 in the forest of Ailly and in the forest of LePretre we took five rapid-fire guns and a bomb thrower."

Berlin, April 12.—The following statement was given out at the German staff headquarters today:

"Western Theatre—On Sunday the front was comparatively quiet. French made attacks in the Argonne, at Combres and Ailly forest, and at Priestweld. All were repulsed.

"Since an air attack by the enemy killed three women in the open town of Mullheim with bombs, German bombs have been thrown on the centre of Nancy and the fortifications there. Captured French officers say that the cathedral of Notre Dame, the Paris Louvre and the invalides buildings are being used for military purposes.

BOY SCOUTS OPEN LOCAL BASEBALL SEASON

The baseball team of Scout Troop No. 2 defeated Troop No. 1 by the score of 20 to 13 on Maure Oval Saturday afternoon. At the end of the seventh inning the score stood 13 to 9 in favor of Scout Troop No. 1. In the eighth inning, however, the sluggers of Scout Troop No. 2 got busy and solved the benders of "Bantam" Dealaman, scoring four runs and tieing the score and in the ninth they scored seven more. The teams lined up as follows: Scout Troop No 2—Post, 1b; LaRue, 2b, Elliott, ss., Morris, 3b; Grindley, lf; Eder, cf, Walker, rf; Nelson, c; Maskell, p. Scout Troop No. 1—Lewis, 1b; Teeling, 2b; Hipp, ss; Swackhamer, 3b; Hinkey, lf; Tinsman, cf; Sears, rf.

Miss Florence Gangloff and Miss Alice Apgar attended the afternoon performance at the New York Hippodrome Saturday.

Master Joseph Goff, of Front street, has returned from Trenton, where he spent a week as the guest of his cousin, Mrs. Maude Nelson.

HELD FOR HEARING TODAY.

The commissary of the camp on Jackson avenue and Third street, where the laborers employed in constructing the sewerage system board, was arrested yesterday on a charge made by Joseph M. Maier that he was selling liquor without a license. He will be given a hearing at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

SURPRISED C. M. HAIGHT.

The Saturday Evening Social Club and its friends, the party numbering about forty in all, surprised C. M. Haight, of New Market road, Friday evening. The surprise was a complete one. The evening was passed in playing cards and dancing. Music was furnished by Miss Irene Day, pianist, and Archie LaRue, violinist. Refreshments were served at midnight. The party broke up at 2:30 o'clock.

Watchung.

Mebane Ramsey preached an interesting sermon on "'Billy' Sunday and His Work" yesterday morning in the Mary E. Wilson Memorial Union church. At the evening service Mr. Ramsey preached to the young people. The choir and girls' chorus rendered selections at both morning and evening services.

Miss Mary Herrmann, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Herrmann, who has been very ill with pneumonia, at her home is now convalescing.

Plains & Fanwood.

The April meeting of the Fanwood Township Sunday School Association, which was scheduled for tonight, has been postponed until tomorrow night, when it will be held in the All Saints' Episcopal church at 8 o'clock. The committee in charge of the arrangements for the house-to-house religious canvass will make a full report.

About thirty young people of the borough enjoyed a dance in the Fanwood firehouse Saturday night. The hall was prettily decorated for the occasion. It was the fourth successful dance held under the auspices of the Sunshine Club.

The dance to be held at Stoney Hill on Wednesday night, the first one since Lent, promises to be the most successful of any this season. The hall has been doubled in size by the building of a large addition. Good music will be furnished by a Plainfield orchestra.

J. Hudson Thompson is having an addition built to his Martine avenue residence.

Miss Grace Thompson, of Martine avenue, entertained Miss Katherine Felt, of Westfield, over the week-end.

Miss Elsa Palmer, of Tilliston road, has returned from spending a week with friends in New York.

A meeting of the local members of the Women's Political Union is being held this afternoon at the home of Mrs. William H. Hoar, on Martine avenue.

"Nibs" Hand, who was to have reported to the manager of the Worcester baseball team on Saturday, was notified not to report until this week, and expected to leave today. Conshay, another lad from this vicinity, who is also trying for a berth on the team as catcher, reported last week.

Eugene Lidgate, the well known local backstop, played in Hackensack on Saturday afternoon, doing good work at the receiving end for a fast semi-pro team of that place. Liddy has been engaged to do the receiving for the fast-going Ridgewood nine on Sundays, but, owing to the weather of the last two weeks has not played with them yet. He has decided to stick to week-end playing this season.

H. F. Conger, of Plainfield, has moved his household goods into the residence formerly occupied by Mrs. George Glover, now residing in New York.

Charles Norton has moved into the former Talmadge property on Midway avenue, which he purchased a short time ago.

PICTURES TRAGEDY IN JEWISH HOMES

Joseph Barondess, Addresses Large Gathering in Knights of Pythias Hall.

A large and appreciative audience comprising ever class of the local Jewish community filled Knights of Pythias Hall yesterday afternoon, to hear an address by Joseph Barondess, of New York, on the topic, "The War and the Jewish People." He presented his subject in a masterly way holding the close attention of the large audience from the beginning to the end, bringing tears to the eyes of some of his hearers as he pictured like an artist the tragedy of seven millions of Jewish people which have been destined to have had in their homes in Poland and Galica, which the greatest battles in this war are taking place.

Mr. Barondess touched briefly on the "Great Zionistic Ideal," making an appeal to join the Zionist movement which offers the solution for the Jewish question. He said in part:

"Zionism has proved itself a great force for good, making us better Jews and better Americans. Zionism appeals to what is best in the Jew to his highest aims and ideals, because it offers him a definite sphere of future endeavor. Zionism has ceased to be a dream, it has become a fact, in those fifty self-governing Jewish colonies.

"In Palestine they have supplied the proof if any were needed of their capacity for self-government. They have solved with business-like sagacity and with the far seeing statesmanship, problems practical and spiritual. They have exhibited to the world the joyousness and beauty of a natural, healthy unconstranied Jewish life. The population there is still small, but we have passed brilliantly an examination which was conducted through a generation and the experiment must be announced a complete success. Courage, persistence, intelligence, devotion and lofty spirit have overcome all obstacles. The Jewish renaissance has come. The nation is reborn, and the Jewish state in its beginning is already here."

The applause following the address was hearty and about twenty new members including some of the leading men in the local community have joined the Order Sons of Zion. Dr. I. Finkel was chairman, introducing Dr. Martin, of Temple Sholem, and Dr. Kohn, of the New street synagogue, made short speeches of welcome.

A banquet and reception followed at the home of Henry Rosenbaum, which was attended b about forty guests. Short toasts were made in honor of the guests by Benjamin Cline, Hyman Adelberg, I. Preger and others.

LOCAL COMMANDRY PRESENT AT DEVOTIONAL EXERCISES

Representatives of Trinity Commandery, No. 17, Knights Templar, went in a body to Brooklyn yesterday, where they attended the annual devotional services of the organization in the Baptist Temple. Delegates from all parts of New York, New Jersey and Connecticut were in attendance, the total reaching over one thousand.

Featuring the occasion was the excellent program of music rendered by a choir of eighty-two voices. Quartet and solo numbers also were given during the devotional service.

CHRISTIAN FIELD

The Westminster Guild of the First Presbyterian church will meet Thursday evening at 8 o'clock at the home of Mrs. C. E. Herring, 424 West Front street.

AMERICA'S EFFORTS TO AID WAR PRISONERS

Representatives Will Inspect and Report on Camps.

Adding to the good work already done and being done by Americans at home and abroad in sending supplies to hungry European civilians and wounded soldiers, an arrangement was made by the American state department, acting with Great Britain and Germany and Austria, by which representatives of the United States will inspect and report upon alien prison camps in those countries and distribute supplies to prisoners.

CHANDLER P. ANDERSON AND RUSSIAN PRISONER GUARDED BY GERMAN.

This arrangement is based upon recommendations contained in a report by Chandler P. Anderson, formerly counselor of the state department, who conferred with the foreign offices of Great Britain, Germany and Austria Hungary last November and visited some of the detention camps.

POLAND'S HOLY CITY.

Czenstochowa, Home of Shrine, Has Seen Much Warfare.

Czenstochowa, for which the hosts of the Russians and the Germans have been contending, is one of the most famous of Polish cities, although it is of little commercial importance despite its 72,000 inhabitants.

Czenstochowa is famed throughout Russia, Poland and among the southern Slavonians as the shrine of the wonder working "Black Madonna." Many a son and daughter of the dreary steppes and of Poland feels that he or she left a torn and harried spirit or some physical infirmity before the magic of this painting.

GATE AND TOWER OF MONASTERY, CZENSTOCHOWA.

BIBLE STUDENTS IN ANNUAL PRODUCTIONS

Probasco Bible Class Pupils Present "A Regiment of Two" in High School.

Ten representatives of the Probasco Bible Class staged their fourth annual theatrical production in the Plainfield High School Auditorium Saturday night, the affair being witnessed by an appreciative audience. "A Regiment of Two," by Authon E. Wills, was the title of the presentation given by the amateur performers and the characters assigned to the various parts appeared to be particularly well fitted to play their roles.

The playlet was given in three acts, the scene being the drawing room of Arthur Sewall's residence and the time, "A few years in the future." The production was acted under the direction of Charles Lee, who formerly played a part in "The Whip," one of Broadway's successes in 1913, and the smoothness with which the various roles were portrayed indicated that the rehearsals have been conducted under the ables' possible supervision.

The cast of characters included: "Arthur Sewall," a theatrical warrior, Benjamin M. Harris; "Ira Wilton," his father-in-law, Robert B. Mitchell; "Henry Brentworth," Arthur's friend, Carleton L. Smith; "Reginald Dudley," an Englishman, Edward W. Cady; "Jim Buckner," known as "The Parson," R. N. J. Chandler; "Conrad Melzer," a plumber, Earl B. Pierson; "Eliza Wilton," Ira's better half, Harold W. Downs; "Grace Sewall," wife of Arthur, Fred R. Serrell; "Laura Wilton," daughter of Ira, W. Herbert Hillman, and "Lena," a German maid, James W. Dunwell.

The executive committee comprised Benjamin Harris, chairman, Earl B. Pierson, Fred E. Serrell and Daniel F. Randolph. The staff in charge included: Cedric H. Ostrom, business manager; James W. Dunwell, assistant business manager; G. W. Hartley, advertising manager; Arthur J. Pierson, property manager; Hamlet L. Luckey, stage manager; Alfred M. Korff, musical director; Charles Lee, director.

The class officers are: President, Fred E. Serrell; vice-president, Daniel Randolph; secretary, Earl B. Pierson; treasurer, Benjamin M. Harris.

MEMBER OF LOCAL FIRM BADLY HURT IN CRASH

Joseph Miron, of the firm of Miron & Lifson, which has a branch store in this city, was seriously injured in an automobile accident in Elizabeth last night, the car owned and driven by him being struck by a First street trolley car at Jefferson and Anna streets. The automobile was ground into a heap of scrap iron and the fender of the trolley was demolished. Mr. Miron had his right arm badly crushed and has probable internal injuries. His daughter, Louise Miron, fifteen years old, was badly injured when she was flung violently to the pavement. Other members of the Miron family and of that of Mr. Lifson, his business partner, were slightly injured.

The auto party was returning from a day on the road. Mr. Miron, driving his car, attempted to cross Jefferson street and the trolley struck the auto full on. It is said that the motorman shut off power in plenty of time but the brakes refused to work.

MISS SHRAGER AWARDED PRIZE FOR PUBLIC SPEAKING

In the competition for the gold medal at the prize speaking contest held yesterday afternoon under the auspices of the State executive council of the New Jersey Federation of Young Women's Hebrew Associations, Miss Elizabeth Srager, of Plainfield, with the topic, "Immigration," won the award. The event was held during the afternoon session of the council at the synagogue of the Congregation B'nai Abraham in Newark and honorable mention went to Miss Bella Weiss, of Camden, topic, "The Origin of Channukah."

At the council meeting held at the Daughters of Israel Home in the morning the following members of the local association were present: Samuel Rothberg, Leo Beise and Miss Sadie Rothberg.

SIX CANDIDATES BAPTIZED IN HEAVENLY REST CHURCH

Six children were baptized by the Rev. Cortland H. Mallery at the afternoon cervice in the Church of the Heavenly Rest yesterday afternoon. They were Helen Beatrice Lloyd, Ruth Lillian Jeffrey, Florence Rosetta Millwater, Helen Mabel Jarkson, Henry George Jackson, Elinor Ottilie Jordon and Margaret Lincoln Millan Monroe Anderson.

The House of Hoo-Hoo at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition

THE unique House of Hoo-Hoo at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, San Francisco, is the headquarters of the wholesale lumbermen. It is a picturesque redwood structure and contains a large reception hall and smaller rooms for the convenience of guests and friends of the order, and above this is a large convention hall with a seating capacity of 400. Twelve meetings of lumber organizations have been scheduled to date to hold their sessions here.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

The fast growing armies of Vivian Martin's admirers will surely be increased by the latest World Film offering, "The Arrival of Perpetua," which is to be seen at Proctor's Theatre today and tomorrow. The picture is in five parts and it is the first production of Mons E. Chautard, the new French director of the company.

Vivian Martin's delicate style of acting, her personal grace and beauty are so distinctive and piquant that it is necessary to provide specially for her in respect of the story of the picture in which she is cast, and of course, her own part must be similarly unique. Miss Martin, in picture, must be just herself; the public wants Vivian Martin, and Vivian Martin in a suitable photo-play.

Perpetua is a rich little girl, an orphan, with a guardian very much older than herself. This man is an absent-minded dreamer unaware of his responsibility to Perpetua. The girl wanted to live in her guardian's house, but instead went to her father's half sister's, Miss Majerdie, an angular spinster of 60, with a predilection for monkeys, parrots, cats and dogs.

Perpetua is not happy in this antique environment, so she runs away and forces herself upon her moody guardian, Thaddeus. He endures is pursued by several suitors whose ardor cools when she is said to be not worth a cent.

And here the moody guardian steps in. He has loved the girl but her wealth has prevented him from declaring his affection for her. But now that she is poor, he doesn't hesitate to offer himself.

In a story of this character it is obvious that the refined artistry of Miss Martin finds adequate scope. This beautiful girl shines in every film in which she is seen, but when the entire framework of the play has been especially designed for her, her pleasing personality stands out all the more markedly and distinctly.

Y. W. C. A. NOTES

Members of the association, under the direction of Miss Elizabeth Wetherell, enjoyed a "sunrise breakfast" on the mountains Saturday. The party left the association at 5:30 o'clock, and later on the mountain each member assisted in cooking the breakfast. Those in the party were the following: Miss Katharine Aller, Miss Elizabeth Wetherell, Miss Margaret Hawkins, Miss Beatrice Gardner, Miss Marion Mair and the Misses McGinnes, of New York city.

Miss Mabelle Ford, of the Y. W. C. A. Recreation Center, of New York city, will visit the local association with a delegation next Saturday. The Plainfield members will entertain the visitors during the day, the party going on a hike across the mountains during the afternoon.

A delegation from the association will attend the Y. W. C. A. Conference of Foreign Work, which is to be held in Newark, Thursday, April 15. Miss Clarissa Spencer, Y. W. C. A. world secretary, will address the gathering at that time.

PLAINFIELDERS OUGHT TO CONSIDER PLAINFIELD FIRST

A city must progress, it must be guided by its optimists, and must approve of enterprises; it must value constructive men more than destructive ones, must have a clear idea of the demands of the future city growth and live up to its ideals.

One of the most essential elements of progress is enterprise. The enterprise of the business men of Plainfield is dependent upon the support of the residents of the city. In the same measure that they co-operate in the support of Plainfield's stores they will share in the prosperity that will be the result of this co-operative effort.

The duty of Plainfield's people to themselves and their obligation to their city, calls upon them to PATRONIZE PLAINFIELD MERCHANTS, CRAFTSMEN and MECHANICS.

They are not asked to make any sacrifice, either of money or quality in order to do this. Rather are they presented with the opportunity of making financial saving and gaining at advantage in quality of the goods purchased.

The old fallacy that it is now necessary to go to the stores of other cities in order to get the best goods at the lowest prices has long been dissipated.

The merchants of Plainfield have proved conclusively that the stores of Plainfield are not surpassed in any respect by mail order houses of the stores of larger cities and that the question of buying outside the city is attended by loss to the purchaser in more ways than one.

The man who has home pride enough to PATRONIZE PLAINFIELD MERCHANTS, CRAFTSMEN and MECHANICS, gets the most for his money. It is easy to be convinced of this fact by visiting local stores. The advertising columns of the local papers will direct you to the most advantageous buying. PATRONIZE PLAINFIELD MERCHANTS, CRAFTSMEN and MECHANICS.

RUNYON'S BRIBERY CHARGE.

It is not surprising that allegations of bribery have been heard about the State House in connection with a bill in which a certain branch of the Osteopathic school are interested. So persistent did the rumors become that Republican Assembly Leader William N. Runyon, of Plainfield, went to the Governor and told him what was being said about the House. Naturally, the newspapers took the matter up.

The first paper that reached the legislators with the story was the Trenton Times, and in their wrath some of the members with great gusto demanded that the editor of the Times be brought before the bar of the House, and that representatives of that paper be prevented from occupying their usual places in the Assembly chamber. All of this time Judge Runyon was sitting quietly in his seat, and none of the "insulted" members thought to ask him whether he had gone to see the Governor or not. Another Assemblyman, Mr. Smith, of Essex, rose and said that he understood that there was a man in the State House who was ready to make affidavit as to the correctness of the charges. He, too, was not asked to produce the evidence.

The Times says that it stands ready to aid in running the charges to earth, and that "the function of an honest newspaper is to present all the news, without fear or favor. We think the House of Assembly would find it a very dangerous proceeding to attempt to bar the representatives of the Times from the floor simply because this newspaper had, in the orderly course of the day's duty, reported that the Majority Leader had taken up with the Governor of the State the serious charge that a bill had been put through the Legislature by corrupt methods."

When it is taken into consideration that the State Medical Board and all the legitimate osteopaths in the State are opposed to the bill which caused all the trouble, it must be said that Judge Runyon did exactly right in starting the investigation. He voted against the bill because he believed it was a bad one, and if he had reason to believe that money was used to secure its passage, thus permitting a lot of men, little better than Turkish bath rubbers, to pose as "doctors," he deserves the commendation of every person who believes in properly safeguarding the public health.

And then again, graft has been known to exist at Trenton.

HELP!

The horrors of war still accumulate. The Russian troops occupied the village of Voliachidlowska, which was formerly the Polish village of Wolaszdlowiecka. If the Germans should then recapture it, doubtless it would become Wohlschweinefuetterungsdorefchen. For our part, we vote for Wolaszydlowiecka, as the most historic and euphonious. But, as strictly neutral upholders of the status quo, it is our duty, for today, rather to sustain Voliachidlowska. It really is a little easier to pronounce, too. Try it. However, there might be an even more neutral course. Italy is a neutral nation, to which some of the belligerents have promised territorial compensation for remaining neutral. Why not neutralize it all into a neutral language, as Castellavecchiadellapoggiaverdegianta.

Anyhow, by the time these terrific new weapons are thrown back and forth twice or thrice more, there will be a hurry-up call for anti-lockjaw serum for the Wolaszydlowieckians.

Senator Moses E. Clapp, of Minnesota, will speak at a suffrage meeting at the High School tonight. This will undoubtedly be the biggest gun that the suffragists will be able to fire in Plainfield in their campaign for votes. The Senator is an interesting and able talker, and we hope that he will be greeted by a large and representative audience. What he will have to say will be of interest and we hope that it will help the cause a great deal more than did the "debate" held some weeks ago. Both sides of the question deserve careful atention, and while we believe that the vote should be extended, we hope that our readers will avail themselves of every opportunity to hear the arguments, pro and con, which will be presented at various meetings between now and the election, the date for which will be determined by the adjournment of the Legislature.

If Plainfield has an anti-soft-smoke ordinance it should be enforced. If we have not one, the health and comfort of the people demand that the Council enact it at once.

TOTAL OF $3,579.59 GIVEN TO UNEMPLOYED

Contributions Helped Materially to Extend Relief to the Needy.

Through an oversight in reporting the final activities of the Commission for Relief of the Unemployed, several subscriptions of a considerable amount were not publicly acknowledged. Among these was the sum of $80.40 raised by the Plainfield Democratic Club by a special collection. Other contributions not previously acknowledged were received from Helen C. Carvalho; Williams S. and C. Boardman Tyler, and Duncan W. Taylor. The total of these four gifts was $289.40.

The total amount of subscriptions was $3,579.59. The distribution of this sum has been of infinite benefit to Plainfield, a member of the commission says:

"In many places charitable societies are today well-nigh bankrupt of the extra burden they have had to bear this winter. It is a credit to Plainfield that plans were laid ahead of the worst of the emergency and carried to a successful conclusion."

The commission is preparing a final report to be issued in printed form. Anyone desiring a copy can obtain it from William M. Wherry, Jr., 965 Madison avenue.

FUNERAL OF L. C. F. RANDOLPH.

The funeral of Lewis C. F. Randoph, whose death occurred at the home of his son, Herbert, in Rutherford, was held at Hilgin's mortuary chapel at 111 West Fourth street, Friday afternoon. Rev. Edwin Shaw, of the Seventh-day Baptist church, officiated, in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends. During the service Mrs. J. B. Cottrell sang two solos, "Asleep in Jesus" and "Abide With Me," accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Frank J. Hubbard. There were numerous floral tributes. Burial was made in the family plot in Hillside cemetery, the pall-bearers being Nathan Randolph, Herbert Randolph, Asa F. Randolph and Walter Harrison.

DRESS REHEARSAL TO BE HELD WEDNESDAY

The casts of "The Twelve Pound Look," by Barrie and "The Man of Destiny," by Shaw, have now held their last rehearsals with the coach except the dress rehearsal which will be held on Wednesday night, the night before the performance at the Plainfield theatre. Mr. Pratt pronounced the plays to be thoroughly mastered, and expressed particular pleasure that this was the case with "The Man of Destiny," because of the complexity and sublety of the plot.

This play is considered, say authorities, to be one of Shaw's most remarkable works. And this is due partly to the fact that, wishing to reveal utterly the character of Napoleon, he was so clever as to put him in a perfectly natural manner to the most crucial test. Napolean is clearly forced by the situation to the choice between his ambition and his honor.

This situation arises from the conduct of Josephine. While the young Bonaparte still deeply in love was pushing his first campaign to victory in Italy she was carrying on a flirtation in Paris which became notorious.

The play begins just after the victory of Lodi, and Bonaparte is supposed just to grasp the wonderful possibilities of power and glory before him. Brown Rolston as Napoleon, is represented in the Italian inn as eating lunch and making campaign plans at the same time, when a young lieutenant (Mr. Walter Righter) appears. Napolean demands his dispatches; the lieutenant says an officer in French uniform stole them. Bonaparte supposes the thief to have been an Austrian spy.

The fact is, this "officer" is an old girl friend of Josephine who has gone to the length of masquerading as a soldier at Josephine's pitiful request that she prevent a certain letter exposing her conduct from reaching Napoleon. Therefore she has stolen it with the dispatches. In the course of action of the play, however, this masquerader (Mrs. Maxwell Perkins) turns up. Things so come about that she is compelled to deliver to Napoleon the dispatches and the letter. But first she conveys to Napoleon what is in the letter. It is then clear to him that if he is known to have received this letter and to have read it, he must surrender his career at this critical moment, go to Paris, fight a duel and try to put his house in order. At the point of his decision comes the climax of the play.

The "Twelve Pound Look" is equally characteristic of J. M. Barrie. From the interest taken in both, and the number of tickets already sold at the Plainfield theatre, there seems good reason to believe that the hope of the Plainfield Belgian Relief Committee will be fulfilled and that two shipments of condensed milk will soon go to the Belgians.

ENLISTED MEN SPEAK AT Y M. C. A. MEETING

Interesting Experiences of Soldiers and Sailors Heard By Large Audience.

The first men's meeting of the year under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A., was held in the association auditorium yesterday afternoon and was largely attended by men of this city. The addresses were preceded by a song service in charge of S. T. Carter, Jr., in which all those present joined. William D. Murray, president, presided at the meeting and introduced the speakers. The Dutch Arms Band, of Trinity church, rendered a number of sacred selections under the direction of E. D. Young.

C. S. Parks, of the Battleship Maine, was the chief speaker and he told some personal experiences of his life. Before entering the navy Mr. Parks served six years in the army and had many experiences in the Philippines. He told of the peculiar temptations which come to the soldiers and sailors, especially in foreign lands, and spoke of the great influence of the Y. M. C. A. While in the Philippines he came in contact with association work which, he said, helped greatly. The bugler of the Battleship Maine gave many of the calls, including reville and taps.

The one flag that is placed above the American flag on shipboard was displayed. It is the Christian emblem and is raised when services are being held. It consists of a white field with blue cross in the center. Two other men, Mr. Richweine and Mr. Hudson, gave short talks, speaking mostly of the great personal influence of the Y. M. C. A.

Secretary Alfred Estes, of the local association, announced the next meeting for April 25, when a team of "Billy" Sunday "trail-hitters" will be present. He also explained the plan of attending a Sunday meeting in Paterson on Saturday night, April 24. If the plan is approved by the committee in charge, a special train will be chartered from here to Paterson and return. Announcements of this will be made later.

After the meeting the visitors were entertained by several of the local High School boys and dinner was served in the parlors. Boys' Secretary Edwin Glaentzer had charge and he was assisted by Roscoe Blanchard, Alvah Blanchard, Lewis Zeek, Harold Tomlinson and Alfred Willett.

WILL GIVE POST-LENTEN DANCE AT DEBELE'S HALL

The post-Lenten dance, which is to be given in Debele's Hall tonight promises to be a gala event. It is an annual affair anticipated with much interest by the young people of the borough and their friends. Elaborate preparations have been made by the committee in charge to give every one a good time and it promises this year to excell all former occasions. During the intermission a musical treat will be given by well known young people. Miss Edith Broucher, of Raritan, whose singing has won her many friends in Plainfield, will render several solos. Elmer E. Cutting, of this city, will also sing a number of selections.

The patronesses are Mrs. James E. Bailey, Mrs. Hilaire Blatz, Mrs. Alfred LaRock, Mrs. Edward Moraller, Mrs. B. A. Paroubek, Miss M. Byrene and Mrs. Mary Conshay.

REV. J. Y. BROEK ILL AT HIS BROTHER'S HOME

Rev. J. Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, has been detained at the home of his brother, Rev. Albertus T. Broek, in Newark, for the past few days by illness and was unable to preach yesterday. Rev. Frank Fletcher, of this city, occupied the pulpit. Mr. Broek spent last week at Atlantic City and on Friday was taken ill. He decided to go to his brother's home on Saturday. His illness is not of a serious nature and he expects to return to Plainfield today or tomorrow. Mr. Broek has changed his residence from East Seventh street to Watchung avenue.

Cotton Felt Mattresses

All the Way from Old Kentucky

At Extraordinary Low Prices

See Window Display

Last year when the cotton market was at its lowest and the South was begging people to "Buy a Bale" we took advantage of the situation and made a contract with a large bedding concern in Louisville, Ky., for a year's supply. We received a shipment in February and juding from the way they sold at that time the present shipment won't last long. They are positively the best values we have ever seen in our experience of twenty years. We could readily sell them all at wholesale at the prices quoted, but we prefer to give our customers the benefit instead.

"THE GENTLE ART OF LEAVING OFF" DR. BOYNTON'S TOPIC

"The Gentle Art of Leaving Off" will be the subject of an address to be given tomorrow night by Rev. Nehemiah Boynton, of the Clinton Avenue Congregational church, in Brooklyn, when he speaks to the Men's Club of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church. The annual dinner of the club will be held at the same time and after Dr. Boynton's address officers will be elected for next year. The dinner will start promptly at 7 o'clock.

PASTOR RESIGNS

"It seems the opportune time for a change.

"Thirty-one years ago I accepted the call to this church, reluctly (because I saw, better than its officers, that its growth here could not be as great as they expected), but believing that it was God's will for me, and that it would be for the interests of the church, since disappointment and another search for a pastor might work serious injury for the precarious little new venture that the church was then. Now, assured again that it is God's will and for the best interests of the church, and again reluctantly, I resign the pastorate.

"If this comes as a surprise to many of you, you will pardon me, for I have not had the heart to talk about it longer than was necessary. I am selfish enough not to wish to have it give you all unmixed pleasure. But I trust that you will respect my judgment and accept the decision as final, and especially that you will not, any of you, let it diminish your loyalty to the church; but, on the contrary, that you will feel it the more necessary for you to be loyal in the critical time of change. If any wish to express regard for me, and appreciation for what I have tried to do here, they can do so in no better way than by striving to make sure that my work shall have permanent results, that there shall be built up upon the foundations now laid a growing superstructure to the glory of God.

"In laying down my office, I thank God and thank you for the opportunity which I had of serving you, for the privilege of working with you, for the co-operation which you have given me, for the patience you have had with me, for the good will you have shown so long; for the love of little children, for the comradeship of the young people, for the friendships of men and women. You can never know how deep and warm has been my feeling for you. The bitterness of my regret that I have not been able to serve you better, heaven will perhaps be able to erase; but some of the joys which have come to me with you are worthy of heaven and will be treasured forever.

"It is the wish both of Mrs. Goodrich and myself that we be allowed to retire quietly without any public demonstration. You have already given us abundant evidences of your appreciation and kindly feelings.

"I ask you to accept my resignation at the annual meeting, and to join with me in calling a council for dismission on April 29.

"And now, with sincere love for you all, with prayers for a richer future for the church, may "The Grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, the love of God and the communion of the Holy Ghost be with you all. Amen."

PREPARED 2,185 ARTICLES.

A total of 2,185 articles for hospital use were prepared last week at the meeting of the New Jersey branch of the Prince of Wales Relief for Soldiers and Sailors held in Grace church chapel. All the members of the organization worked hard in the preparation making bandages, slings, compresses, sponges and other things needed in the care of the wounded. These are to be forwarded immediately to the relief stations through St. George's society. Many more articles will be prepared at the next gathering on Friday morning April 16.

FUNERAL SERVICE ON ANNIVERSARY

Mrs. Louis Hummer Laid to Rest Fifteen Years After Day She Was Married.

An unusually impressive funeral service was held yesterday afternoon over the body of Mrs. Susan H. Hummer, wife of Louis Hummer, whose death occurred last Friday after a long illness. It took place at the late home on St. Mark's place, the date being the fifteenth aniversary of her wedding. The large gathering of relatives and friends which attended included practically all of the wedding party, several of them taking part in the service.
